Beltrami Pointers.

The fall term in our village school began to-day. W. J. Nickle is the teacher.

At the last meeting of the board of supervisors of the town of Reis, D. C. Hallock was appointed justice of the peace, and R. L. Elder road overseer, to fill vacancies.

Harry Thomas, foreman on the Herriot farm, fell from a binder, and either badly sprained or broke some of the bones in the ankle. Dr. Stuart, of Ada, was sent for.

H. B. Budd, who has been visiting his mother at Hays City, Kansas, the past two weeks reached home yesterday morning. Henry has a warm spot in the hearts of all our citizens and every one was pleased to see him again.

Many binders have been sold in this vicinity this season, most of them Osborne.

Ford & Payne will have this fall the biggest stock of clothing that ever came to Beltrami.

The traveling public will be pleased to learn that the Atlantic Hotel is in the hands of Jacob Regedal, an efficient landlord.

A. M. Hayes, of Pennsylvania, an uncle of the Hayes Bros., of the town of Hubbard, is here on a visit.

"The democracy of Polk County evidently mean business this year. They are not waiting for the republicans to open the fight, but propose to take the lead themselves and expect to maintain it to the end. Watch our smoke this year, boys."—Times, Aug. 16.

That's what we propose to do, Mr. Times, for smoke is all that will be left of your party after election. EDNA.

Farm Fun.

Western Hotel.

Wonders will never cease. There comes to our table a paper with the title of the heading of this article and it claims to be the "Farmers Funny Paper." We have not time to read it. Fun is a good thing. It is the best sort of tonic and is a general medicine which will not kill if it does not cure, and that is more than can be said of most medicines. But we have so much to do in the endeavor to keep the few from indulging in their peculiar fun of devouring the many that we have not time to read eight pages of alleged fun. we should doubt the success of a farmer's funny paper, for the farmer is having all the fun he can enjoy now. He has been robbed in so many ways and with such ingenuity that the schemes which have been organized to plunder him, fairly make him "laugh through his tears." The political demagogue comes around once in two years at most, and kisses his babies and compliments his wife and praises his stock and his dog, until the farmer breaks his suspenders in laughter. That same demagogue after getting elected to office squirms around under his pledges and violates all the promises he made, until the farmer shakes his sides with merriment to see a man with a face before and a face on the back of his head. The railroad corporation comes along and induces him to subscribe for stock to build a road through his section, then rob him of his stock and does it in such a cute way that it is rollicking fun. He grows crops to make railroads rich in carrying them to market, and while he is shinning about to get money to pay his mortgage and his taxes and to clothe his wife and children, complaining in the meantime just a little about railroad extortion, he forgets his troubles and begins to smile at the utterly absurd position that the railroad takes when it attempts to show him that but for the railroad his farm would not be worth nearly as much as it is, and that railroads have been an unspeakable blessing to him. He brings his stock to the Union Stock Yards and become hilarious when the company actually informs him that corn—which he sells at home for twelve or fifteen cents a bushel—is worth one dollar. A broad smile covers his face when the money-lender—with his pockets full of Eastern capital—tells him that he ought to have some money and that he will be glad to let him have it at the low rate of ten per cent per month.

Fun! Why the farmer lives amidst oceans of it. He is plundered and insulted until it becomes the joy of his life. He finds that even the undertakers are combine against him and if he is unfortunate enough to be compelled to patronize one, the fellow's long face and open pocket-book make a combination that is actually funny. Seriously, a farmer's funny paper strikes us as exceedingly ludicrous just at this time, when it is a question of actual life or death with the farmer. It is a good deal like wasting paper and ink. The press can find all that it can do, if it will faithfully denounce existing evils and call for justice for the farmer.

Great West: The Great West is placed in a very trying position. If it does not stand in with the miserable carrion who are trying to land the alliance on its back, the liars who are skirmishing against us say. "It's a Merriam organ!" And to support the ticket and strike the gang who are running it into the ground, is to aid the ticket but little if any.

But, gentlemen, would it make no difference if your attitude struck the alliance party out of existence? No party can enter into being with our aid by practicing the deepest and dirttest frauds under the guidance of your enemies.

We feel that our proofs are positive that the alliance party is designedly being led to destruction. The chief end was accomplished in striking down the radical element at the convention. The rest of the work is to keep up the traitor element so that there is no resurrection at the coming election. It may be very, very hard to believe, but are we not actually in the hands of our enemies—to guide us on to victory!!

Progressive Age, Minneapolis: The Pioneer Press has forfeited all claim for respect from every farmer in the West. The contemptuous way it treats the Farmer's Alliance and labor people, the sneers which it affects whenever it mention a farmer, are enough to drive away the honest sons of toil from it forever. It has come to pass in Minnesota that to wear the horny hand of toil is to court insult at the hands of one of the oldest newspapers in the state. This paper, the mouthpiece of monopoly and the betrayer of the people, has chosen to blatantly boast of the superiority of the machine over the managers of the new forces now organizing, and grossly heaps misconstruction upon all they do. It shows itself a boodler's puppet, and should be treated as such.

LEGISLATIVE CONVENTION.

A Legislative Convention for the district composed of Polk, Norman and Beltrami Counties, will be held at the Court House, in the city of Crookston, on Monday, September 15th, 1890, at 1:30 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following positions, viz:

1 Senator,
3 Representatives.

The several counties will be entitled to delegates as follows: Polk 9, Norman 5, Beltrami 1.

H. E. COOKE, Chairman.
H. H. PHELPS, Secretary.

The Prison Mirror entered upon its fourth year last Thursday. It is a nicely printed and very readable sheet.

Maj. T. M. Newson started for the scene of his new labors as Consul at Malaga, on Saturday evening last, accompanied by the best wishes of every newspaper in the state. The wish of THE JOURNAL is "may he live long and brosper."

The object of political parties should be to conduct the affairs of government in the interest of the people. Just as long as that principle is observed the party that observes it will be entitled, and will receive, the confidence of the people, but when schemers are allowed to run a party in their own selfish interests that party deserves to be beaten at the polls.

Not long since the Grand Forks Plaindealer management arranged to have the Plaindealer sent over on the freight and delivered in this city by carrier. For a few days we received our copy all right on the day of publication and then came a skip or two, and now we don't get it at all. Better try Uncle Sam's mail again, Mr. P. D., as that is better than not at all.

The passage of the appropriation bill for which Mr. Comstock has worked so long and so faithfully, insures the early opening to settlement of the Red Lake Indian Reservation. Surveyors will be put to work at once and very soon the desired event will be a reality. Mr. Comstock is entitled to the hearty approval of every dweller in this upper country, and no doubt they will express their approval at the polls.

The Alliance Movement.

New York Nation: The farmers' alliance, north and south, seems likely to have considerable influence in the autumn elections. Nobody can now predict how much mischief it may do to the great political parties, or how this mischief will be distributed between them. That the alliance can have any permanent existence, or can ever accomplish what it aims at, is simply impossible.

Which shows just how little some great papers understand the alliance or its objects. As to its effects upon the great parties we are not among those who believe that it will carry death and desolation in its wake, but we would like to know what is to prevent its "permanent existence," or why it is "simply impossible to accomplish its aims." Its aims are for the common benefit of mankind, by placing agriculture on an equal footing with other callings. Much of this can be done by existing political parties, and the probability is that the present attitude of the alliance will have a tendency to call attention to the needs of agriculture in so emphatic a manner that the great parties will be brought to a realizing sense that there is an industry in this country called agriculture, and a race of human beings called farmers, and in this way, if in no other, will the alliance compel recognition. We do not expect the alliance will ever be a political party, but it will accomplish its object just the same, and it will continue to exist as a business organization just as long as the necessity for organization remains. What is there so very peculiar in an organization of farmers that it is impossible for the alliance to exist? We do not hear objections made to the organization of other interests, but when it comes to the farmers you see every monopolistic sheet in the country join in the cry of "impracticability," etc. The alliance seeks to so regulate the business of agriculture that farmers can make an independent living in their business. This object is right and just, and it will be accomplished in spite of the opposition that may be raised by those who are now fattening upon the toil of the farmer. That the alliance made some mistakes is but natural and not fatal. The experience gained in this campaign will be valuable to the alliance, and it will be enabled to profit by its mistakes. We think that one lesson that the great parties will learn will be that agriculture is in a depressed condition, and that its interests must be fostered if the vote of the farmers is desired. No patriotic party politician objects to the objects of the alliance, but party schemers and bosses do, and they will be the only ones who will suffer through the organization. The farmers are no fools, and they are beginning to estimate these schemers at their true value and to treat them accordingly. The Nation goes on with a lot of "objects of the alliance, which are so totally false and silly as to need no mention here. The Nation will find out in time that the alliance has come to stay as a business organization.

The Red Lake Reservation.

Elsewhere in this issue appears a brief telegram from Hon. S. G. Comstock announcing the passage of the appropriation bill for the survey of the Reservation. Though brief, that telegram is of vast significance to this country, as it means the early opening of that vast tract of valuable land, and an immense amount of business for this country. Mr. Comstock has been indefatigable in his efforts to open that reservation, and those efforts should be, as they doubtless will be, appreciated by our people. There is not a man in this country who will not be benefitted, directly or indirectly, by this transaction, and THE JOURNAL is in a position to know that its early settlement is wholly due to Mr. Comstock's unceasing efforts in our behalf. Mr. C. has already earned the proud distinction of being the hardest worker in Congress. It will be remembered that Knute Nelson had the same reputation, so that Mr. Comstock is truly a worthy successor. It is very seldom that a new member acquires the great influence that Mr. Comstock has gained in his first, or even his second term, and some never would gain it. Mr. C. is a worthy representative and should be kept right there as long as he will consent to stay, and after that he should be sent to the Senate.

Is the Sub-Treasury Bill Desirable?

Having attempted to show in my former article the constitutionality of the sub-treasury bill, I will in this give some reasons why I think such legislation is, at this time, desirable. The legal tender quality of the national treasury notes was adopted as a war measure, and the necessity of the occasion seems to have had great weight with the Supreme Court in upholding the legislation. To me the present depressed condition of the agricultural classes of the whole country is a danger no less alarming than war. The sub-treasury plan, I at first thought too cumbersome; but upon mature reflection, I am of the opinion that it is a scheme well adapted to the conditions of our country. No one supposes for an instant that the whole crop of the country would in any contingency be placed in warehouses. No; only that portion of it that was intended for market, and at no time would all of the crop intended for market be so placed. All the crops that are intended for sale have to be carried to market any way; and these warehouses would naturally be located in the country towns, or if not, a market would be created by the location, and this of itself (the accumulation of large quantities of produce in one place), would enhance the prices by drawing purchasers and increasing competition between buyers. The deposit of agricultural products in warehouses, and the issue of certificates of deposit thereon, which would have the character of money, would give us an elastic currency such as no other suggested system would. Say, that in any given community, $1,000,000 worth of produce was deposited, there would be issued and thus put in circulation $800,000 worth of certificates of deposit or money in that community; then, if when the price was favorable, say $500,000 worth of this produce was sold, there would be $400,000 of this currency, or some other kind of currency returned to the treasury of the United States, and the currency of that community would be contracted just that much. Thus we see that by this system we would have an elastic currency capable of contracting, or expanding to suit the actual exigencies of trade, and we would not be liable to those artificial contractions or expansions caused by the schemings of speculators, nor the unnatural surplus in times of business stagnation, and stringency in times of active business movements, such as the moving of the crops and such like occasions as we now have. If $1,000,000 worth of silver is sold to the Government, and $1,000,000 of money paid therefor, these $1,000,000 of money are in circulation for all time, and it follows that if it is not too much for the dull season it is not enough for the active season. Hence, these unnatural but necessary fluctuations in prices of produce; hence, the necessity it may be of the Secretary of the Treasury having to come to the relief of the dealers so often.

I am free to confess that under the provisions of the sub-treasury plan I do not see how there could be a sufficiency of currency in any given community in a year of bad crops. There would, it seems to me, have to be some additional legislation, by which to provide for short crops, such as the deposit of other personal property or real estate securities. The fact is, as money is only the representative of value, I see no reason why every dollar of value should not have its representative. As it is the duty of the General Government to furnish a currency to the country, and as the present currency is based upon the debt of the Government, and as the debt is being rapidly extinguished, it follows that some other basis must be found upon which to rest the currency. I know that we instinctively turn to gold and silver as a basis for currency, or for currency itself; but the business of the world and its population are rapidly increasing, while the supply of silver and gold is rather diminishing in its annual supply. It seems to me, therefore, that we will in a short while have to look elsewhere for our basis of currency. The farmers in council suggest the sub-treasury plan. Who will suggest a better? Gold nor silver neither have any intrinsic value, such as corn or cotton. You cannot eat either, and neither will warm you. It is their use as representatives of value that makes them so useful. In the American Cyclopedia there is a very interesting article on money, from which we make the following extract:

> Further, on the testimony of Thomas Baring, we are assured that it was found impossible during the crisis of 1847 in London to raise any money whatever on a sum of $60,000 of silver. During a similar crisis in Calcutta in 1864 it was equally impossible to raise even a single rupee on $20,000 of gold. The former was not a legal tender above forty shillings, while the latter was not for any sum whatever.

Comstock on Original Packages.

Sauk Sentre Herald: While the Herald does not think there is anything surer in political prospects than the re-nomination and re-election of Hon. S. G. Comstock, yet it may not be amiss to emphasize the fact that he is an active and an aggressive worker in behalf of his constituents. In discussing the "original package" bill in the house he said:

> I do not wish, Mr. Speaker, to trespass upon the patience of the house, and shall do so but briefly. I only wish to state that I heartily favor the passage of this senate bill as amended by the house, and for the reasons that have been advanced by my friends from Wisconsin, Mr. Thomas and Mr. LaFollette, among others.
> We up in Minnesota, the state I have the honor in part to represent on this floor, would control the traffic in oleomargarine, butterine compound, lard and oils. We have enacted laws for that purpose. They have been in successful operation for some time. They are threatened by this decision of the supreme court. We believe that it is essential to the dairy interests of Minnesota that such laws as we have enacted should remain in full force and effect in that state.
> But we are controlled by a gigantic concern in Chicago engaged in the manufacture of various compounds which are sold to the people as genuine butter. It is not only wrong in itself, but it is a great injustice to our agricultural interests, especially the dairy interests of the state. The product which is offered, while it may be wholesome, and cleanly, and proper, and even healthful as an article of food—and may not; it is still sold under a paying rate for genuine butter; so that the manufacturer of the genuine article of butter is driven from the market, and great loss is entailed on a class of people in the state who can ill afford to bear it.
> Now, it seems to me that while congress is engaged in the matter of legislation on this question it may just as well cover the entire field as to confine itself to the traffic of alcoholic liquors. It certainly is to the advantage of the people. It is right that the people should know that the article of food they purchase is not adulterated, and this adulteration of food product has gone to a point beyond the conception of most people. Therefore, I favor this senate bill as amended, in the interest of the people of my state, and especially in the agricultural portion."

The People are Aroused.

Western Rural.

The people are aroused at last. Never in our history has there been such a union of action among farmers as now. They are gathering together in their different societies and are proceeding together toward what they believe to be relief from present unprosperous condition. In some of the States, worn out with waiting for relief at the hands of the old political parties they have organized new ones, nominated tickets and are now at work in the attempt to elect them. How these new political combinations will result no one can tell. They will at least disorganize old political methods and perhaps change the political complexion of some of the States. They may not result in the election of the tickets nominated. It may be ultimately shown that there was a wiser course than the formation of new parties. But the people are determined to have relief; and The Rural honestly believes that the only way by which the old political parties can save themselves for any great length of time, is by giving the farmer what he demands and what he ought to have.

The Rural has known all the time that the farmer would secure protection for himself, even if he was compelled ultimately to smash every political party in existence; and he will. The politician who does not hear the rumbling of the coming storm will have nothing but his own stupidity to censure when the storm breaks. Agriculture will not remain under the deep, dark cloud that has been covering it for a few years; the farmer does not propose to be trampled on by corporations and trusts and Shylocks forever. The people will not submit to being throttled eternally. They are now getting out from under the iron heel of despotic greed and political corruption; they are standing up like full-grown men and independent citizens of a free Republic; and while they still have a love for the old political party and would be willing to remain with it if it would do justice by them, they are rapidly coming to the conclusion to make the welfare of their pocket-books the chief plank in their political platform; and they are right.

In taking up the September Wide Awake, both the juveniles and the elders will turn at once to Mr. Ward's Andover serial; the chapters in this issue ought to be read in every college in the land. "Doc.'s" death-bed is a fearsome warning to those students who think "hazing" a manly kind of "lark;" the dog "Calvin's" doings give the necessary sunny relief, in these chapters. C. E. Garland has a capital story in this number, "The Last Baseball of the Season." Preston Lee Otis gives a strong story, too, of Southern life, entitled "Rijane." "My Friend, Ah Sing," a San Francisco story by G. Adams, will interest the boys, and reads like a true tale. "The Quest of the Whipping-Boy" ends in this number. "Four Fire-Buckets," by Mary Bolles Branch, is a good lesson for officious little girls. An amusing "Tragedy in Three Scenes," entitled "She did not go to Cooking-School," by Miss Pollok, the teacher of the cooking classes in Washington, will be sure to be in demand for entertainments. There are several unusually fine illustrated papers in the number: "Helen's Tower," describing Lord Dufferid's beautiful devotion to his mother; "Capturing a Sea-Cow," by Dr. Hard; and "An Obscure Hero," by Edith M. Degen, giving an account of Mr. Hadly's work for the Indians. Mrs. White's "Business" paper for young women, Mrs. Claflin's "Margaret-Patty Letter" on street-car behavior, Mrs. Humphrey's charming article about "The English Cowslip," Mrs. Leonowen's anecdote paper about "The Little Hohenzollerns," with its beautiful picture, Helen North,s unique directions for "Summer Evening Diversions"—the "Cobweb Party" will be popular—Miss McLeod's dramatic Acadien tale, and the original anecdotes and short talks in "Men and Things" complete the prose miscellany. The poems are by Mrs. Thomas Sargent Perry, Mrs. Clara Doty Bates and Ellen V. Talbot; the number includes also a beautiful "Motion Song," words and music both by Mrs. Ormiston Chant, and an amusing Puk-Wudjie chapter, "The Cone Dance,"

Wide Awake is $2,40 a year. D. Lothrop Company, Publishers, Boston, Mass.

Good Crops--Good Prices--Good Time.

Moorhead News.

The News feels the utmost confidence that the present fall will be the best one for business and general prosperity in the history of this section of country. This feeling is based on our excellent crops and the higher prices which they will sell for. As the News has before remarked a good yield of all our main crops is very much better than a good yield of one crop and the other poor. Add to our abundance the advanced price for wheat, oats, barley and potatoes and as a natural sequence beef and pork also, and it can readily be seen that the amount of money that will be realized for them and go into circulation will be much larger than usual. In 1886 the wheat crop here was very large and other crops were good, but the price of wheat was not above 60 cents and the price of other products in the same proportion. Even then the times were good. With wheat at 90 cents or $1.00 per bushel and a higher price than usual for all other products this fall the times are going to be booming.

Passenger Rates One Cent a Mile.

The National Tribune.

The movement for an immediate and radical reduction in passenger rates all over the country should begin at once, and everywhere. Nor should there be an abatement of the agitation so long as any railroad presumes to charge more than one cent a mile for carrying a passenger any distance. Anything beyond that is extortion—is robbery of the community.

In European countries, no more densely populated than our States east of the Missouri, the railroads have found it very profitable to carry passengers at much less than one cent a mile, and it will be the same in this country. Railroads are built much more cheaply here than there. Two great elements of construction-cost—right of way, and ties—are much cheaper here than in Europe. Excavations, rails, rolling-stock, and equipment are not much higher, while fuel is much cheaper here than in any place in Europe outside of England.

But were every item in the cost of building and running railroads higher than abroad it still would not alter the general fact that our roads can afford to transport passengers fully as cheaply as those of Europe. The profits of business always depend upon the amount that can be done with the same amount of plant. The railway plant required to carry 100 passengers a day is exactly the same as for 1,000 passengers. The same expensive roadway must be constructed and maintained, the same stations must be provided, the same engines, and nearly the same cars; the same staff of engineers, conductors, station agents, telegraphers, superintendents, etc., must be employed and paid the same salaries.

We are much greater travelers than the Europeans, the same number of people in a community furnishing from two to five times as many passengers per annum as the average across the Atlantic. Our railroads carry over 500,000,000 passengers a year, making an average of between eight and nine trips per year for every man, woman and child in the country. The average in Hungary is but one trip per year per head of population; but two in Australia, and but five in Germany.

If the maximum fare in this country were but one cent a mile for short distances with a proper reduction for long trips, the number of passengers carried would be quadrupled at least, the railroads would make a great deal more money, and the pleasure, enterprise, and progress of the people would be immensely promoted.

We urge that the people take hold of this matter at once, and discuss it with earnestness. Let them plant themselves on this simple, easily-comprehended platform:

1. National regulation of fares on all railroads in the country, without regard to State lines or charters, the conditions of which are repugnant to public policy.
2. A uniform passenger rate, not exceeding one cent a mile for short distances, with reductions in proportion to the length of trip.
3. Tickets good on any railroads, for the number of miles specified on their face, and good until used, to be on sale at places convenient to the public.

This is thoroughly practical reform, and we invite discussion of it. We are aware of the Constitutional and other objections that will be urged, but they are fallacious, and we shall be glad to demonstrate this if those who hold them will present them to us.

If the people will take up this matter now and unite upon it, Congress can be brought to the passage of a law embodying the reform within two years from date.

Let the agitation be begun by the formation of One-cent-a-mile-fare Association for pushing the reform.

The Horny Handed.

New London Times: Mr. Owen is not a political schemer nor trickster, and did not seek the distinction conferred upon him. He is a man, we believe, of an honest purpose and conscientious scruples, and is well known in connection with a farm journal, and will poll the largest vote ever counted in this state for any farmer's party.

Long Prairie Leader: Their nominees are good ones and if their candidate for governor, S. M. Owen, should be elected the affairs of the state will be in the hands of a true friend to the farmers and laboring classes for the next two years at least.

Renville Star: They say the Farmer's Alliance will cut no figure in this campaign. Maybe not. But unless the republicans put up a man who is in favor of the farmers "existing" you will find out that they will cut more of a "figure" than is anticipated.

Appleton Press: The man selected for governor is not a politician, nor has he been prominent among the leaders of the alliance. He is a good man, however, and though he will not be elected, will command the respect of even his opponents.

National Economist:—The United States Treasury this week came to the aid of the loan market with the $50,000,000 bank note redemption fund liberated by the silver bill. Secretary Windom's announcement of a change of policy regarding bond purchases were interpreted as meaning that this additional resource would be employed to ease the market as much as possible before and during the crop movement. This had a quieting effect even before the acceptance on Thursday of tenders for $5,838,900 bonds.

The above is taken from Bradstreet's issue of July 26, and contains a frank admission of the necessity and benefits of a flexible volume of currency. The "ease of the money market" was assured by a practical application of a flexible volume of currency by the very method proposed in the sub-treasury plan; $50,000,000 was added to the general stock of currency at a time when an increase in the volume of business was absolutely certain. If $50,000,000 will produce such beneficial results as this statement discloses, what salutary effect might not be looked for by an addition of ten times this amount. Here is found the leading financial paper in this country, a recognized authority upon all questions touching monetary affairs, unconsciously giving its consent to the prime underlying principle of the sub-treasury bill. It is a pleasing illustration of an honest endorsement giving to the sub-treasury plan while discussing a different proposition. It is an error, however, to consider this $50,000,000 covered into the Treasury as in circulation. In order to place this sum among the people a tortuous and expensive route must be taken. It will be necessary to first exchange this amount for bonds, which at the present premium will cost about $11,500,000. This transaction has only changed it from the vaults of the Government to vaults of the banks. In order to obtain its services for one year, the people must pay a rent of at least 10 per cent more, or $5,000,000. The premium paid on the bonds and the interest paid on the banks aggregate an expense of $16,500,000, in placing $50,000,000 among people. This is too much tribute for the use of a medium of exchange, and will, if continued, destroy the prosperity of any country. By use of the sub-treasury plan, this whole amount could be put out when most needed at a total expense of about $500,000, or a saving to labor in production of nearly $16,000,000. Which is the cheapest or best?

Agitate the Service Pension Bill.

The National Tribune.

The shriek set up by the soldier-haters upon the passage of the Disability Pension Bill has begun to subside. Only the more bitter and irreconcilable of the malignants keep up the clamor. Those who hate Union soldiers because they served the Union, and the subsidized agents of British free trade, still harp away about "bounty-jumpers," "skulkers," "eleventh-hour big bounty men," "ravenous pension sharks," and the other epithets in their vocabulary of billingsgate. But the good sense and love of justice of the country commend the measure, and as its provisions come to be better understood, it rapidly gains in favor.

Everybody but these blatant irreconcilables now freely admits:

1. That the widow of a man who gave his life to the preservation of the country should be pensioned, and also his minor children.

2. That if he left no widow, his dependent mother or father should be pensioned, because his death deprived them of his support.

3. That the broken-down veterans of that terrible war, all of whom have passed the meridian of life, should be cared for in their old age and weakness by the great and rich country they saved at such cost to themselves.

4. That the amount required to do this does not enter into the question. If it is right it should be done, no matter how much it costs, and certainly a wealthy, prosperous Nation of 60,000,000 people can better afford to pay $150,000,000 a year for this worthy purpose than the war-burdened 25,000,000 in the North could afford to pay, as they did, almost double that amount per annum to the money-lenders, for years after the war.

This being the case, the time is ripe now for the agitation of the completion of the work of justice by the passage of The National Tribune Service Pension Bill, the repeal of the Arrears Limitation, the equalization of Bounties and other measures of rightful treatment of the men who gave the Nation everything. When all these are made into laws, and all the money required by them is disbursed to the Nation's creditors, the total expenditures will be far from equaling the sum paid the money-lenders. And it must be constantly kept before the public that the men who fought the Nation's battles actually gave it in freely-sacrificed wages much more than the money-lenders lent it, and that while the latter have received out of the National Treasury over five billion dollars, the maimed and slain soldiers, their widows and orphans, have received but one-fifth that amount. It will be a better time to "call a halt," as the New York Tribune does, but the soldiers are treated with something like the liberality displayed to the bondholders.

The Duluth & Winnipeg.

Hope That the Trouble on the Winnibigoshish Will Soon be Quelled.

M. H. Foley, the Duluth and Winnipeg contractor, is in the city to-day. In speaking of the recent trouble at the Winnibigoshish reservation, he said that nothing was being done, but he as well as Mr. Fisher were in hopes that the matter would be amicably settled in a short time so that work can be resumed. The delay will cause a considerable loss of money, as they have been ordered to remove their outfit from the reservation.

They had 2000 men at work on the reservation when the order to stop grading was issued. The reservation is only about seventy-six miles wide and the line would have been graded nearly across by this time if the work had not been stopped.

McIntosh Times:—The board of directors of The Thirteen Towns Elevator Company met at the Times office Saturday. The board adopted a plan for a ten thousand bushel elevator with nineteen different bins, ten of which can be un-loaded into the car without re-elevating. The plans were referred back to the committee on plans with full power to complete arrangement for the building of the house at a cost not to exceed $1,500. Several amendments to the articles of incorporation were made and adopted which will necessitate the re-signing of the articles. The meeting adjourned to Saturday August 23rd.

McIntosh Times:—While in Crookston last week the editor had the pleasure of meeting Gautier de Ste. Croix, of the grain commission firm of Gautier de Ste. Croix, Walker & Co. of Duluth. This firm is building a farmers elevator on the Northern Pacific at Crookston, and Mr. Ste Croix kindly showed us over their house which is now nearly completed and gave us much valuable information about the building and operation of farmers' elevators. Their house at Crookston has a capacity of thirty thousand bushels and is divided into twenty-five bins. This style of elevator practically supplies the demand for a free and open wheat market which has become general in every farming community of the Northwest; it not only avoids the evils of the present system, of grading by country buyers, by furnishing a convenient and inexpensive system whereby every farmer can sell his wheat at a terminal market and receive the benefits of the state weights and grades, but it also provides convenient facilities for the shipping of wheat by independent local buyers of small means and brings them into active competition with the elevator monopolies. We predict that a large number of these elevators will be built throughout the Northwest during the next few years and that they will prove a great blessing to the farmers as well as a paying investment for the owners. At a meeting of the board of directors of The Thirteen Towns Elevator Co., of McIntosh, held Saturday, it was practically decided to adopt this style house on a smaller scale and provide some means for handling small lots of wheat. This system avoids the danger and dificulties which would necessarily arise if the Co. should attempt to grade and buy wheat and at the same time gives the farmer the advantage of the highest market price.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF POLK—ss. In Probate Court, Special Term, Aug. 14th, 1890.

In the matter of the estate of Arthur Yvernault, deceased.

On receiving and filing the petition of John Cromb, of Crookston, Minnesota, representing, among other things, that Arthur Yvernault, late of this county, on the 19th day of January, A. D. 1890, at Crookston aforesaid, died intestate, and being a resident of this county at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this county, and that the said petitioner is a creditor of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to said John Cromb granted.

It is ordered, that said petition be heard before this court on Tuesday, the 16th day of September, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office in Crookston, in said county.

Ordered further, that notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston, in said county.

Dated at Crookston the 14th day of August, A. D. 1890.

By the Court: C. O. CHRISTIANSON,

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more fully shown by the following statement: A, aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his insurance	$88 44
Each year on his loan for interest	80 00
Total yearly payments	$ 168 44
Total for ten years	1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $184.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the 'Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

Mortgage Sale.

WHEREAS, EDWIN P. CAPEN AND MATTIE C. Capen, his wife, of Polk County, State of Minnesota, as mortgagors, did, on the 4th day of August, A. D. 1885, duly execute and deliver to The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London, (Limited) of London, England, their mortgage bearing date of June 20th, A. D. 1885, whereby they mortgaged to said mortgagee the following described lands situated in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit; All of fractional Section 8, Township 148, Range 47 west, containing 632 96-100 acres, to secure the payment of the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars, with interest thereon, according to the conditions of one certain promissory note, with interest coupons attached, bearing even date with said mortgage, and made by said mortgagors to said mortgagee, or order, which said mortgage was on the 10th day of August, A. D. 1885, at 1:20 o'clock p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, in book 26 of mortgages, on pages 480 to 483 inclusive; and

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the sum of two hundred dollars, due as interest upon said mortgage on the 1st day of January, A. D. 1890, and on the further sum of ninety-four and 40-100 dollars due as interest thereon on the 20th day of June, A. D. 1890, and the said interest is still unpaid and due; and

Whereas, it was stipulated by and between the parties to said mortgage, that if default should be made in any of the conditions or covenants therein contained on the part of the mortgagors, to be kept and performed, that then and from thenceforth it shall be lawful for the said mortgagee, or its assigns, to consider and declare the whole sum secured thereby as immediately due and payable without notice to said mortgagors, or any other party; and

Whereas, The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London (Limited) has exercised its option to consider and declare, and does hereby consider and declare the whole sum of money secured by said mortgage to be due and payable; and

Whereas, there is now due, and claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of twenty-eight hundred thirty-two and 52-100 dollars, and no proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land therein described, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in said County and State, on the 27th day of September, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the sum due on said mortgage, together with taxes, if any, on said premises, and one hundred dollars attorney's fees therein stipulated to be paid in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Dated August 5th, A. D. 1890.

U. S. LAND OFFICE.
Crookston, Minn., July 17th, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston, on Oct. 2d, 1890, viz: THOR HALDORSON, Hd. 11,281, for the nw¼ ne¼ e½ nw¼ and lot 2, Sec. 33, Tp. 149, R. 48. He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz: Harald Johnson, of Mentor, Polk Co., Minn., Gulbrand Pederson, of Dugdale, Polk Co., Minn., William Marston, Otto Camp, of Mentor, Polk Co., Minn. Any person who desires to protest against the allowance of such proof, or who knows of any substantial reason, under the law and the regulations of the Interior Department, why such proof should not be allowed, will be given an opportunity at the above mentioned time and place to cross-examine the witnesses of said claimant, and to offer evidence in rebuttal of that submitted by claimant.

[14-19] H. H. DICKMANN, Register.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk—ss. In Probate Court, General Term, Aug. 4th, 1890.

In the matter of the estate of Aslak Bjornson, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of T. D. Ose, administrator of said estate, setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into his hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of; the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased, as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate, excepting the homestead, of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate, with their residences; and praying that license be to him granted to sell all of said real estate at private sale. And it appearing by said petition that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said administrator to pay said debts, the legacies or expenses of administration, and that it is necessary for the payment of such debts, legacies or expenses to sell all of said real estate.

It is therefore ordered, that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Tuesday, the 23d day of September, A. D. 1890, at two o'clock p. m., at the Probate Office in Crookston, in said county, then and there to show cause (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said administrator to sell so much of the real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is further ordered, that this order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston, in said county.

Dated at Crookston, the 4th day of August, A. D. 1890.

Carlisle and the Farmers.

A. Barnwell, in National Economist.

The day for hero worship is passed. Men now require good reasons for opinions whether they emanate from prominent men or otherwise. The great name of Mr. Carlisle can not, therefore, prevent the farmers from investigating his strictures upon the sub-treasury bill.

Let it be understood that this bill has been deliberately put forward by the Alliance of farmers and laborers as the most available measure of relief which they could devise in this their great extremity. That they have made a most strenuous appeal to their friends in Congress to either advocate this bill or give them some substitute which will be as effectual, or even more so, if possible. With this clearly understood, compare the answer of Mr. Carlisle to his constituents with his avowed knowledge of the urgency of the case, and the disgust on the part of his farmer constituents at its inadequacy is at once accounted for and justified. Says Mr. Carlisle in the Forum of last January:

> The American farmer is constantly engaged in a hard struggle to secure a comfortable support for his family and a moderate education for his children, and to pay taxes and keep out of debt. This is all he can reasonably hope to accomplish; in a large majority of cases he fails even to do this, and sooner or later is compelled to sell or mortgage his land and reduce his expenditures to the lowest figure. He has a paternal government which has determined that certain classes of industry ought to be maintained at the public expense, and for thirty years he has been taxed for their support; and now, after these favored industries have become rich and powerful, they conspire and confederate under the names of trusts, syndicates and pools, and dictate the terms upon which the people may procure the necessaries of life and carry on their business. Under our system of taxation the farmer is almost without the semblance of power to protect his own interests. He cannot control the prices of the products he sells in the markets of his own country, because the demand is not equal to the supply, and he must take what he can get. The farmer's crop depends almost entirely upon the character of the season he may have, and he cannot decide in advance how he must plant in order to furnish a supply that will not be in excess of the demand. He must sow and reap all he can every year, and take the risk of reducing the price of his own products by overstocking the markets. When the seed is sown it must remain until the crop is gathered, and consequently the farmer's investment yields but one return each year. * * * These and many other disadvantages under which the farmer labors, and which no act of Congress can remove, etc.

The above is a clear statement of facts, not complete, because it fails to assign the most potent cause of the farmer's trouble—manipulation of the currency by the money kings. But what little use has Mr. Carlisle made of his accurate knowledge of the position of the farmer? Even if his plans for tariff reform were successful, which they are not, he could not expect them to be adequate to the needs of the farmer. If his other measures could also be added as successes—that is, free coinage of silver and the repeal of national bank charters—still the disadvantages of the farmer would not be fully removed. Should not Mr. Carlisle then, have come to the front with some measure more definite, more certain, and offering more prompt relief?

But in place of this he distinctly denounces in toto the very first plan which is advanced in this direction. Let us state the case. Says Mr. Carlisle, "the farmers have a paternal government."

The present systems have been impoverishing him for thirty years. His case is desperate and rapidly growing worse. Part of this lies in the nature of the case; that is to say, in the fact that his entire income is controlled by the prices at harvest time. The other part lies in the ability of trusts, syndicates and pools, etc., to manipulate the harvest prices as well as the cost of his goods. Now just add to the above expositions of Mr. Carlisle the fact, that the expansion and contraction of the currency, without any other cause whatever, can, and does increase the cost of his goods, and also can, and does reduce the harvest price of his produce. When you now recognize that this contraction of the currency can be, and is used for this very purpose by the speculators et al, you have the case before you. Said a prominent Southern politician, the sub-treasury plan was conceived in deception and born of subterfuge, and this is about the spirit in which it has been met and considered. Let us see, upon calm investigation if this very bill was not on the contrary the spontaneous outcome of the situation—a genuine undefiled child of nature springing into existence, formed and shaped by unavoidable circumstances, and potent from its very adaptability to the requirements of the situation. Let us now state the case as presented to us by Mr. Carlisle. The farmer faces ruin. "He has a paternal government." This government has determined that certain classes of industry ought to be maintained at the public expense. For thirty years he has been the victim of this settled policy of his government. The entire financial system opposes his interests. His yearly profit is reduced by the force of a contracted currency manipulated for that purpose by those interested. He is almost without "the semblance of power to protect his interests."

Now, if this be the farmer's case what would be his most natural course. He has a paternal government, then surely he must expect paternal action. It is the settled policy of that government to extend aid to the weak and needy pursuits of its citizens; then surely his is in the condition to apply for aid. He is ruined by a currency independent of him, and contracted by the purchaser of his goods. Well, ask for a different currency. Is there any deceit in this, any subterfuge? Is there any subterfuge in his pointing out that he needed a currency absolutely dependent for its expansion or contraction upon the products of his labor, and so out of control of the tyranic money kings? Was not his next suggestion that the government receive his produce in warehouses, as silver and whisky are received, as a safe collateral, a perfectly honest one? Does it not grow out of the case? What could be simpler or more direct or more practical?

But it has been attacked by the very man who has brought forward the statements which is the basis of its cause, and

"It is paternalism," and yet he says this is a paternal government.

"It is class legislation," and still he says that the settled policy of the government is one of class legislation.

"It is unconstitutional," and again he admits it is in line with the legislation of at least thirty years.

"It is undemocratic." Ah! here is the rut; but it is presented by Democrats, sustained by Democrats, and is for the benefit of Democrats, and equally so regarding Republicans. It is not, in fact, in any sense a party measure. Its tendency would be to break party lines; it was not intended as a party measure in any sense. It is a mere matter of justice, of justice to a well nigh ruined class. A class most important to the entire country, and clearly entitled to justice; and yet it has been spurned by the law-makers. Spurned, but not defeated. Rejected by the builders, it has become a corner stone; and something more tangible than the blank catridges from even such staunch old veterans as Mr. Carlisle must be projected to prevent its being firmly set in the foundation of our Republic with its inscription, "Justice first, sentiment afterward."

The farmer, says Mr. Carlisle, is almost without the semblance of power to protect their own interests. This seems to be true at present, but surely he must, in order to maintain himself make a desperate struggle to obtain that power, and although the measure of relief did not essentially require farmers as a class to take part in elections, by the treatment of this bill they are forced to do so, or see themselves and all that is sacred to their interests ruined. They are not responsible for this, the responsibility lies upon the present incumbent. There is, however, little prospect of it making a new party. On the other hand, it is about to improve both of the old parties.

VILLA WILL RIDE.

The Dakota Damsel Accepts the Kentucky Girl's Challenge.

Minneapolis Times.

The receipt of Villa Poole's acceptance of the challenge sent by Jennie K. Rush for a ten-mile riding race on thoroughbred horses, assures this novel exhibition for the coming state fair. As was announced last Sunday only Miss Poole's formal declaration was needed. It was furnished in the following form:

Miss Jennie K. Rush, Minneapolis, Minn.: I am quite willing to ride a ten-mile race as suggested in your challenge of July 25th, on condition that the stakes shall not be less than $1,000, and that satisfactory arrangements can be made with the Minnesota fair officials to ride upon their track during the coming fair. I think we can leave the general details of the race to the officers of the state fair.

Please let me know as soon as a date is fixed. VILLA POOLE.

The Blue Grass Equestrienne having now arrived in Minneapolis, it will be an easy matter to perfect the arrangements for the race. A conference with the state fair officers will make possible the official announcement of the details in a few days.

Need the Warehousemen be Federal Officials.

W. C. Munroe, of Goldsboro, gives a third article in the Raleigh State Chronicle:

Every one seems to be agreed that the condition of the farmers of the country is alarming. The agricultural classes of the country seem to feel most keenly the depressed condition of the country. The more they work the less they realize. Their indebtedness is alarmingly on the increase, and their assets rapidly diminishing. The farmers believe that a law embodying the main features of the sub-treasury bill will afford to them the most needed relief. I have attempted in two articles heretofore published in this paper to show that the bill, or rather the idea contained in the bill, is constitutional and desirable. It would be a great pity for this idea to be killed, untried, by the great zeal of its friends, or the opposition of its enemies. I see an article in the News and Observer in which it is stated that the National Economist charges Senator Vance with bad faith in changing the provision of the bill which provides for the election of the warehousemen as provided for in the original bill, and substituting therefor a provision that the warehousemen should be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, so as to conform to the requirements of the constitution of the United States; which provides that all United States officers whose election is not therein provided for, shall be appointed by the President, heads of departments, or courts. I have not the bill before me, and cannot say whether the warehousemen therein provided for would be officers or not. I assume they would, though, as the learned and accurate editor of the News and Observer assumes that they would, and says that Senator Vance thought so, too. The question that naturally arises is, shall this bill, intended for the relief of farmers, and thought by wise men to be adequate to the requirements, be killed on account of the lack of constitutional knowledge on the part of the originators of the bill or the prejudices of the people against the appointees of the President? I might preface what I am about to say with the remark that I have no sympathy with the attack made directly or by innuendo on Senator Vance. He, I believe, did what he thought to be his duty, and there can be no doubt that no officer whose election is not provided for in the constitution can be elected, I think, however, that there is no necessity for the warehousemen, or other people engaged in carrying out the provisions of the bill, to be United States officers.

The Constitution of the United States prohibits the States from "emitting bills of credit." In 1820, or prior thereto, money being scarce, the State of Kentucky to "relieve the distress of the community," as the act declares, incorporated a bank of which the State furnished all the capital and received the dividends. The president and directors were elected by the legislature, and the president was required to make report to each session of the legislature. Notwithstanding that the president and directors were elected by the legislature; that the president had to make a report to the legislature; that the state furnished all the capital, owned all the stock, and received all the dividends, the Supreme Court of the United States held, in Briscoe vs The Bank, 11 Peters, that the officers of this bank were not even the agents of the State of Kentucky, much less its officers, and that consequently the bills issued by the bank and received in payment of public dues, were not bills of credit as they were not issued by the State. Under the present banking law of the United States the bills issued are secured by the promise of the United States, yet no one can presume that the officers of a national bank who issued these bills was an officer of the United States. Can not the ingenuity of man devise a plan by which the appointment of warehousemen may not be necessary? The people were in distress; the legislature of Kentucky wished to relieve them by furnishing them with a paper currency; the Constitution of the United States forbade the state from issuing paper currency; the legislature of Kentucky devised a means of supplying the currency and of evading the inhibition at the same time. Are not men as ingenius as they were then?

I submit, with some diffidence, that if the United States Congress would enact that whenever the people of a county would signify a desire to have a warehouse and elect one or two men to keep it, and have the keeper to execute a proper bond for faithful performance of his duties, that the Treasurer of the United States shall cause the warehouse to be built, and furnish the said keeper with certificates to be furnished to persons who would deposit produce in accordance with the plan of the bill; and make the issuing of these certificates otherwise than in the law provided a crime punishable as counterfeiting; that the keeper of a warehouse would no be an officer of the United States; the objects of the bill would be subserved, and the interests of the public protected. I believe, too, that the Supreme Court of the United States would hold the law to be constitutional. The salary of the keeper might be provided for by a state law, or the county might pay him, or the depositors might allow him a percentage on the products stored. The people of the world have for centuries felt that they were being enslaved by the money power and the power of kings. The remedies they have instinctively sought to relieve them from these oppressions have been paper money and written constitutions. It was reserved for the American people to find safety in a written constitution, and I believe that they, too, have about found the true solution to the paper money difficulty by issuing paper certificates on actual value deposited. There is a much closer alliance between the tyranny of gold and the tyranny of kings than a casual observer would be apt to think.

St. Vincent New Era: The Alliance movement is daily growing in strength and importance, and at present there is every indication that the alliance forces will capture both the state legislature and elect their governor.

We have it on undoubted autority that speakers and money will be supplied from the big cities to assist the alliance, the help coming from unexpected quarters.

Governor Merriam we believe, with Gen. Barrett, to be as good and independent a governor as the republicans of this state ever elected, but it appears he is to be knifed at any cost, and for reasons outside of his merits, and the people who are going to do it have no love for democracy, therefore this neutral alliance candidate is a God send to them.

Governor Owen will get covert help from some of the shrewdest, most unscrupulous and wealthiest wire pullers in the republican party; the rank and file of democracy lean towards the party that has adopted their catechism, and at the proper time amid a thousand signal fires blazing from a thousand sub-alliances, with the atmosphere surcharged with enthusiasm, with the whole people of a state for a jury, Minnesota's great Advocate will demand a verdict under more favorable conditions than he ever plead before.

There is no getting around the fact, Governor Owen's star is steadily climing to the political zenith.

HOME SEEKERS EXCURSIONS.

The attention of our readers is called to the low round trip excursions on the Great Northern Railway, Sept. 9th, Sept. 23d and Oct. 14th. State Normal Schools

—AT—

WINONA, MANKATO, ST. CLOUD AND MOORHEAD.

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the common schools of the State.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments—the Normal Department and the Training department or Model School. The Normal Department embraces:

(a) An Elementary Course, for teachers of rural schools and elementary grades.

(b) An advanced course, for teachers of advanced grades.

(c) A Professional Course, for teachers who have completed the required academic work elsewhere.

(d) A Kindergarten Training Course, (at Winona.

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and colleges, and teachers holding County Superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted without examination. All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of three dollars a year. Provisions are made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished room with board is about $3.00 per week.

The next school year opens Sept. 1st, 1890.

For particulars concerning the several schools send for catalogues to the Presidents as follows:

The Farmer's Alliance.

The National Tribune.

One of the political phenomena of the day is the Farmer's Alliance. What its precise mission is to be, is not yet apparent. Unlike its predecessor, the Grange, its chief development has so far been in the South, although it has shown itself in some of the Northwestern and Middle States. In the Southwest there is a kindred organization, called the Wheel, indigenous to Arkansas.

In Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina, the organization has sprung into power with a degree of suddenness that has sent a cold chill down the moss-grown backs of the politicians who have parceled out the offices among themselves ever since the war. There has not been such a political shaking up in "Dixie" for years. A long list of the veterans who have been in Congress sence "befo' de wah," except for the four years they served in the rebel army, will be missing after March 4, 1891.

It is believed by many that the movement in the South is merely a cover under which the "outs" can shake off the oligarchy that has been "in" long enough in their opinion. So intolerant is political prejudice in that section, that it would not be safe to undertake such a revolution under a partisan banner.

Certainly it is not distress among the farmers of the South that is the cause of dissatisfaction, for the crops of these States have been good for several years past. In the North and West, however, a different condition of things prevails. Here low prices, high freight yield of staple cereals has culminated in distress and dissatisfaction which is looking for a remedy. This may account for the existence of the Alliance there.

Again, the farmers may simply have become infected with the prevailing idea that the proper elixir for all social ills is organization, and they want to try it. They see all other classes organized. Artisans are banded together to resist the encroachment of capital, and capital is likewise organized to prevent dictation on the part of its employes. Thus we have trades unions on the one side, and trusts and pools and syndicates on the other.

The outcome of the movement will be watched with interest, whatever it may be.

At least half a million bushels of wheat will be marketed at this point this fall.

Yesterday C. L. Coming received the first load of new wheat, from Frank Wavara, of Tabor township. It graded No. 1 Northern and sold for 89c per bushel.

The crop outlook in Grand Forks, Higdem, Northland, Tabor, Keystone, Sullivan, Huntsville and Bygland townships is unusualy good this season. The average will be at least 18 bushels per acre, and with present prices farmers will soon enjoy untold prosperity.

Most of the grain in this part of Polk county, has been cut. Many farmers are now stacking, while not a few will thresh from the shock. The yield will realize the more conservative estimates.

Tim Donovan returned last week from his trip to New York for goods. Reports having had an immense time, visiting Central Park and other noted places in New York. He also visited Brooklyn, Jersey City, Niagara Falls, Detroit and Chicago. He returns to his duties behind the counter much refreshed by his outing.

Simeon Lanctot and wife, of Quebec, Canada, are visiting Mr. E. Lanctot and family. Mr. Lanctot informs The Journal that this is the first time he has seen his brother in 17 years. Mr. L. is a well-to-do farmer of Canada, and will try a winter in the Red River Valley. If he continues to like it he may conclude to locate here.

Phil. Porger and wife arrived from White Earth, N. D., on Sunday evening. Phil says that crops are much finer here than where he is, owing to the severe drouth prevailing there, and the other fact that this country is best for crops, anyhow. Phil intends to return next year and resume farming at the old stand. They remain about ten days.

The Todd County Agricultural Society will hold its 8th annual fair at Long Prairie, on Sept. 23d, 24th and 25th, 1890. The management have spared no pains to make this the best fair ever held in Todd County, and that county is noted for its good fairs. The Journal editor has received a complimentary which we should very much like to use did circumstances permit.

In conversation with August Tuneberg, foreman for Peter Cornelius, that gentleman informs us that he should finish cutting 800 acres for Peter this week. He thinks that barley and oats will be a good yield, but the wheat yield will not be large. The quality, however, he thinks will be excellent, probably No. 1 Hard. Mr. T. does not set much store on bragging, but he is chuck full o' days work.

N. H. Fulton, manager of the Hawley creamery, came up on Sunday after his family, returning with them on Tuesday. Mr. F. says the creamery has done a big business this summer and will run all winter except during the month of December. Some of the farmer patrons receive as high as $45 or $50 per month and are making money. The produce is sent all over the United States—east and west, north and south. Our Jimmy is putting in 17 hours a day helping his father in the creamery, and is getting fat on it.

SHOT DOWN

In His Prime.

DR. W. J. BAHNSEN,

OF CROOKSTON,

Shot in Cold Blood

AT FISHER,

BY H. G. RUSSELL,

On Tuesday Morning.

The Victim Dies in a Few Minutes.

Shortly before nine o'clock on Tuesday morning our citizens were electrified by receipt of a telegram from Fisher briefly announcing that Dr. W. J. Bahnsen, of this city, had just been shot dead by Horace G. Russell, of Fisher, and requesting that the Sheriff and his posse be sent down immediately. At once Sheriff Paterson made arrangements to go, taking along Chief of Police, Louis Gonyea, and Deputy Sheriffs Berthiaume and Kelley. Coroner Shephard, who had been also summoned, went down with County Attorney, D. D. Williams. A number of the doctor's friends also went down. Arriving at Fisher the Sheriff learned that the doctor had been shot immediately upon the arrival of the train, just as he stepped from the coach to the depot platform, by H. G. Russell, who had been awaiting his arrival. As he stepped off the coach, Russell, who was but a few feet in his rear, standing close up to the coach, stepped quickly forward, and before any one was aware of his purpose, raised his revolver and fired, the ball striking the doctor in the back of the neck. The doctor partly turned, exclaiming "Oh, my God," when the assassin again fired, this time into the base of the brain. The doctor fell to the platform insensible, and Russell started to run towards the rear of the train. As he passed the rear of the train to the sidewalk one of the passengers in the rear sleeper came out on the platform and fired two shots at him, neither taking effect. Russell thought it was the doctor shooting at him but did not stop to inquire, having urgent business in the woods just then. Everybody was so paralyzed that he gained the cover of the woods along the river before pursuit was thought of, and was lost to sight. About noon he came out of his hiding place and gave himself up to the Sheriff and his posse, surrendering his revolver with the remark that he had no further use for the shooting iron. He was at once placed under arrest and brought to Crookston and lodged in the county jail, where our reporter found him between three and four o'clock. He positively refused to talk, beyond saying that the act was justifiable. Attorney Steenerson called at the jail and had a consultation with Russell, who gave him some letters from Mrs. Russell, who is now at Lisbon, Dakota, the contents of which letters we are not at liberty to divulge at this time. Bad blood has existed between the doctor and Russell for some months, Russell accusing the doctor of breaking up his family and many have feared that unpleasant results would follow. The trial of Russell will bring out the true inwardness of the case and we believe that it is not the province of a newspaper to try such cases in advance, more damage than good always resulting therefrom. Horace G. Russell is the son of Capt. Russell, one of the early settlers of Fishers Landing, and for a long time a prominent steamboat man on the river. He was, a few years since sent by the government on an expedition up the Nile, and since his return has lived in California. Maurice Russell, who, some years ago was editor of the Lake City Leader, and who later was connected with Brainerd and Duluth papers, and who, not long since attempted suicide in a fit of insanity was uncle to H. G. Russell. It is said that for sometime past the young man has shown signs of mental aberration, and since his wife left last winter he has been drinking deeply. Up to that time he had borne an excellent reputation. After the inquest the body of the doctor was placed in a casket and sent to Rock Island, Ills., where his brothers live. Sentiment is about equal in this case, but the trial will bring out much that now looks mysterious, and will no doubt develope the true inwardness of the affair. The prisoner was brought before Esquire Lewis at 5 o'clock and waived examination.

M. Lefebvere returned last Wednesday from his trip to Tacoma, where he has been for several months engaged in the boot and shoe business. He sold out his business there to advantage and talks of opening a like establishment here. Says the old Crookston boys out there are doing nicely, and coining much shekels. When he last saw our old friend, Wm. Box, that gentleman was talking of taking a trip to Polk County this fall. So mote it be.

Mr. N. Rapin returned on Tuesday morning from a short visit to his old home at Beauharnais, Canada, where he was called by the severe illness of his father. He left his father alive, but not expected to live more than a month or so. He says crops in Canada were very poor this year and many are contemplating coming to Polk County to try our fertile soil, than which no better exists on this earth.

At the Congregational church meeting on Monday evening, a call to Rev. F. B. Noyes was unanimously voted. and it is hoped by the many friends he has made here, that he will accept. Mr. Noyes is a young man of great promise, an earnest worker in the vineyard, and the need of that church to-day is for just such a man. The church is poor in numbers and purse, but we believe each member feels ready and willing to do to the utmost to sustain the work. We think Mr. Noyes is peculiarly fitted for this field and that he can do much good should he decide to stay.

Andrew Steenerson rode in from the farm on the west side, on Tuesday. Says crops are going to pan out a very much lighter yield than ever, but the grade will be nearly all No. 1 Hard. Levi Myers has threshed out 1,200 bushels of his heaviest wheat. This wheat the boys fully expected to yield 25 bushels per acre, or more, as it stood thick on the ground, grew rank and thrifty, with long heads, but the threshing machine pounds out 12 bushels per acre, all, however, No. 1 Hard and as fine wheat as ever grew in the Valley. Andrew says this will be true of all the wheat.

Jack Frost.

The Journal man has read of "frosts that killed corn and vegetables" in other counties, but according to our thermometer, Polk County has had no such visitations as yet. Our thermometer was made by planting an ear of corn late in July, and to-day, Aug. 26th, that corn stands up as rank and green as the finest midsummer corn you ever saw. Some of our obliging neighbors, who think they know all about farming, have kindly advised us to "call in our corns for the winter," or to "blanket 'em," so that next year we might enjoyear or so, little realizing that the interests of science are far superior to a good feed or two. Our little thermometer seems to excite a vast deal of interest in the mind of passers by, who gaze upon it with looks of awe, wonder and amazement, but one lady capped the climax one day by deliberately counting the whole shooting match, standing in the middle of the sidewalk the while, entirely oblivious of the smiles of the passing thousands. She reminded us of the pastor, who feeling the presence of too much absence in the pews, took a melancholly pleasure in counting the flock, one by one, trying to imagine the sum total multiplied by 10—wondering how many more it would take to make a full house. Meanwhile the corns grow on apace and say to us every morning: "No frost yet!"

Beltrami Pointers.

Mabel, the bright little daughter of I. W. and Edna P. Webb, died on Friday last of bronchial catarrh, and was buried on Sunday. The services were conducted by Rev. O. H. Elmer, of Crookston. Much sympathy is expressed for the family in their sad bereavement.

S. Hayes is over from Hubbard with his six new binders cutting the grain on his one-half section east of town.

John C. Wells, of Fond du Lac, is here looking over his extensive farm. He thinks our grain will yield more to the acre than it will in many places south of here.

The traveling public will be glad to learn that they can get as good accommodations at the Atlantic Hotel as they can at any small town in the country.

The boys on the big farms around here will learn something to their advantage by calling on C. E. Ford.

Who is the present superintendent of the Beltrami Sunday school?

Geo. H. Holt, of Crookston, was here on business on Tuesday last.

Duluth Daily Tribune: A. E. McManus, who has had a law office at the West End for sometime, has entered into partnership with his brother, Geo. J. McManus, formerly of Crookston, and moved his office to the Palladio building, Duluth.

Barn Burned.

Wabasha Herald: Jos. Hoch, of Greenfield, met with a serious loss early Wednesday morning. Fire originated in his large barn and consumed it entirely. Much difficulty was experienced in saving the horses that were stabled in the barn, but fortunately all were removed before the building fell. The other contents, consisting of farm machinery and a large quantity of hay and grain, were distroyed. The building is covered by insurance. It is supposed that tramps sleeping in the barn tarted the blaze.

Past judgment must be set aside. The King of Minstrel Managers—W. S. Cleveland—has this season organized four large and fine Minstrel Companies, containing all the reputable talent, both foreign and native, that is worth seeing or hearing. These organizations are, without the "shadow of doubt" the foremost thorough, high-finished, and expensive that have ever been presented the people of this or any other country. Thousand of dollars, or, what would be considered a fortune in the ordinary walks of life, have been expended in costume and stage properties, the magnificence of which cannot be satisfactorly described, but must be seen befor their royal elegance can be realized. There are in all upwards of two hundred and eighty people employed in the different organizations.

Mr. Cleveland promises to surpass all former efforts in this line of winsome amusement.

We have purchased and refitted the Date Place on Maple Lake including all boats, 2 sail boats and 5 row boats, and are now ready to receive customers and respectfully invite a share of the Crookston patronage. Only 2 miles from Mentor station. J. O. Buhn, manager.

Moe & Buhn.

A gentleman, well informed in theatrical affairs remaked to the writer: "As a manager, W. S. Cleveland ranks with the best. He possesses every great qualification necessary to the position. In resoluteness, ardor of spirit, and indomitable energy he has few, if any superiors. I have observed his advancement for a number of years, and one splendid managerial achievement has followed the other, until the whole series savor of romance. Starting without money, he stands to-day in the commanding position of the sole owner and manager of four great Minstrel Companies aggregating two hundred and eighty people, representing an investment of $150,000. One of these superb organization, 'Cleveland's Colossal Colored Carnival Minstrels,' will appear here Tuesday evening Sept. 2d, at the Opera House. Having recently witnessed an exhibition by this Company. I will say to you that it is 'away up.' Those who really love a good entertainment will find this Company one that will fill every requirement. I can recommend it as being decidedly the best that I have ever seen.

The above opinion carries additional weight from the fact that the speaker was a gentleman of a wide range of experience and observation, which renders him beyond question a competent critic.

We also know that manager Cleveland has always, without any deviation, given the public nothing but elegant and first-class Minstrel performance. This season he pulls ahead, and makes a marked improvement on anything he has ever produced heretofore.

NOTICE.

On and after this date all bills against the city must be in the comptroller's hands not later than 4 p. m., of the Monday preceeding the stated council meetings. No bills will be audited after that time.

LEGISLATIVE CONVENTION.

A Legislative Convention for the district composed of Polk, Norman and Beltrami Counties, will be held at the Court House, in the city of Crookston, on Monday, September 15th, 1890, at 1:30 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following positions, viz:

1 Senator,
3 Representatives.

The several counties will be entitled to delegates as follows: Polk 9, Norman 5, Beltrami 1.

H. E. COOKE, Chairman.
H. H. PHELPS, Secretary.

It is said of Attorney Holston that during the alliance convention he was much troubled with a Boyle on his aspirations. If all reports are true he has not got rid of it yet, as Boyle is said to be the probable nominee on the democratic ticket. It might trouble him if located on a vital point, but a Boyle on the democratic ticket this year is not dangerous.

The National Economist, in speaking of the alliance as a political party, says: "One thing is certain, the alliance will never go into any kind of a partisan move, but the members of that order may very easily be crowded into united action by being denied the right of a majority to rule in their own party, and when that is done the inevitable result will be for the ringsters of both parties to unite against this common foe to their evil designs. A new party, born in that way, will receive the support of the producers."

The object of the formation of the alliance in this part of the state—a free and open wheat market, was all right. That object could best be attained by the election of a farmer legislature, or at least a body of men in sympathy with that object, and, possibly, the Governor. Early in the movement, THE JOURNAL foresaw the dangers that might arise from demagogues and office-seekers, who would naturally seek the opportunity presented to forward their own selfish interests, and earnestly urged against independent political action, as this way is the only way by which the farmers could possibly be thwarted in their object. The history of that convention in St. Paul, the sad wrangle to-day existing in the alliance itself, but confirms our opinion and justifies our fears. The alliance was captured by a few selfish demagogues, who have depleted its treasury, misapplied its funds and so far as can be seen have run it in the interests of political schemers, who do not care a cent for the interests of the farmer if their own cause be subserved. And the pity of it is greater in view of the fact that the victory was practically won before a blow was struck, as both of the great parties had already conceded the point. In their efforts to obtain a free and open market the farmers had the sympathy of hundreds outside of the ranks of agriculture, and had the alliance confined its efforts to securing such offices as would benefit the cause, all these votes would have been with the farmer, but when the alliance demands every office, from the highest to the lowest, the impression obtains that it is only the offices that are sought, and this has a tendency to alienate this independent vote. Again, the course taken was the only one by which the alliance could be divided against itself, as the present condition of affairs witnesseth. All could have united upon the effort to elect such officers as were needed to accomplish the end sought, but division and dissension is caused by the present attitude.

Congressional Convention.

On Thursday, September 4th, the Republican Congressional Convention will be held at Little Falls for the purpose of putting in nomination a candidate for Congress. Kittson, Marshall, Polk, Norman, Clay and Becker Counties, his home counties, will be solid for the renomination of and this will be true of every other county in the district except, perhaps, St. Louis, where a few of the delegates nominated, are, we are told, opposed to Mr. Comstock. This seems strange, for while Mr. C. has labored faithfully for all of his constituents, Duluth has enjoyed some of the richest plums and should be solid in his support. Mr. Comstock is a plain, unassuming man, as full of work as an egg is said to be of meat, and he has made a name in Congress second to none in that body. Mr. Nelson is said to have been indifatigable in his labors for the common weal of the great Fifth District, and Mr. Comstock has been no less so. He has carried on the good work begun by Mr. Nelson to success, and to-day his labors stand crowned by the opening to settlement of the great Red Lake Indian Reservation. His sympathies are ever with the common people, whose interests he is ever on the alert to subserve, and while he makes no parade of these facts, they exist just the same. In a quiet way he has taken hold of the claims of old soldiers and pushed them to a successful termination—charging nothing for all the work he does in this line and making no great parade about it, as many would do. He does it as a matter of course because it is right, and while this fact does not oblige him to act as attorney in these cases, yet he has always done so. Mr. Comstock will be nominated and no doubt reelected, as he well deserves to be. Democrats will tell you that he has "made mistakes." Well, suppose for the sake of argument that he may have made one or two, what human being is there on earth who is not liable to do the same thing? And who among you could go there and build up the proud reputation that Mr. Comstock has, and make fewer? If this district consults its own interests, it will elect Mr. Comstock his own successor by a larger majority than before, because he has been a true and faithful servant and will be in far better shape to serve the people than ever before. During this long session of Congress he has never left his post of duty even once, while others have frequently been absent upon one excuse or another. The District needs his faithful services and his defeat would be disastrous to our best interests.

She was an old colored lady, and she paid her admittance to the gallery to see the Cleveland Colossal Colored Minstrels, and occupied a front seat at an early hour. When she saw the first part she expressed herself loudly and freely: "Blinds my eyes! beautiful! beautiful!" and was particularly taken with the grand march of the "Roman Gladiators." When she beheld that wonderful evolution, she forgot herself entirely, and jumping to her feet cried out. "Lookee heah, you niggers, take off them duds, they's too rich for yoo blood!

The Cosmopolitan.

The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest prices to novelists, scientists statemen, soldiers, and even kings and princes, for the best they can furnish in the literary line. The well-edited magazine becomes an educating influence in the family circle, whose importance cannot be over-estimated. The children, as they grow up, are attracted by its illustrations, and so come in time to have a taste for reading. There is always something that is new, something that is strange, something that is interesting; and we consider that we are doing our readers a positive benefit if we are instrumental in placing such a publication within their reach. The special arrangement which we have made with the Cosmopolitan presents very unusual inducements. That magazine, although only in the tenth month under its new management, is already recognized as one of the most interesting publications of the day. It is seeking subscribers everywhere and obtaining them. The proprietors believe that the Cosmopolitan has only to be examined to secure a permanent subscriber. That is why we are enabled to make, if the offer is accepted before January next, such a very low rate, by which our readers can obtain the Cosmopolitan for little more than the cost of this journal alone. Just think of what the combination means! You obtain your own home journal at about the regular price, and have thrown in a magazine which gives you, in a year, 1536 pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including over 1300 pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution. Will it not pay you to send a subscription to this office for the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, and Cosmpolitan immediately? Remember, only $3—for the two.

New York Mail and express: The Cleveland Colossal Colored Minstrels drew a large audience last evening, and gave a performance of remarkable excellence. From start to finish the programme is brisk and sparkling, and continuous applause testified hearty appreciatons. The performance is quite different from the usual minstrel entertainment, novelty predominating. The company is strong in evey respect, and every preformance will add new admirers.

Charged with Extensive Swindling.

Postoffice Inspecters Caused the Arrest Of two Alleged Publishers.

Captain Fleming, of the postoffice inspector's office, caused the arrest yesterday of Frank L. Monroe and Monroe A. Swift, respectively the president and secretary of the "Inter-state Publishing House." From information Captain Fleming has collected he believes these men and their partners in business have long been conducting a gigantic swindle. They named their swindle in close imitation of a legitimate and respectable company in this city, and then started business. The company has elegantly furnished offices at 236 LaSalle street, and claimed to have a storage warehouse at 71 Third avenue, but the warehouse exists only in their imagination. They advertise to do a large business in publishing school and collage text books, subscription books and other things of the kind. Through an attractive advertising circular they secure many agents.

They demanded from each agent a bond of $500, or, what was more preferable, a cash deposit of $50 before allowing him to do any business. After getting their agents into a contract they issued a circular letter of instruction by which it was impossible for them to comply with the terms of their contract. Upon the failure of the agents to comply with impossible conditions the company would keep the deposit. Monroe, who was once a county superintendent of schools, was born in the swamps of Indiana. He once published a book called "The Practical Home Farmer," by subscription, to which farmers were promised the privilege of buying other and valuable books at a larger discount. this scheme was prononucad by the authorities to be a swindle. Monroe and swift each gave bonds yesterday before Judge Hoyne for appearance on Aug. 22.

Cleveland's Colossal Colored Carnival Minstrels are headed this way, and will pay our city a visit. This mammoth organization, which contains all the colored notables, is positive the "Biggest Blackest Boomest Boom" ever placed on the road, composed, as it is, entirely of the pick of genuine colored artists of this and foreign countrivs, prominent among whom are Tom McIntosh, James Bland, Billy Farrell, Circero Reed and Son, Geo. Titchner, Smart and Taylor, Grant and Williams, Mons. LeVard, The Great Jalvan, Prof. Williams, Alf. White, Eaton & Williams, Henderson, Smith, Will Eldredge, Palmer and McClain, Tom Jones, Frank Warner, Doc. Sayles, The Twilight Quartette, The Sans-Souci Quartette, and half a hundred others, all well known colored performers. Several unique novelties will be introduced: The Illuminated First Part. The Battalion Drill, The Royal Guards, The Pickaninnie's Frolics, Sixteen Bizarre Dancers, and a world of wonders. The magnificent street parade with the big Millitary Band will also be a feature; taking it all in all, this will be the largest and best Minstrel Company that has visited this city.

The Farmer's Remedy.

Northfield News.

No great political organization was ever founded upon one idea. Modern society is so complex in its organization that the party which faithfully represents the whole people must bring into its ranks men of every calling, and strive honestly and sincerely to do justice to all. In Minnesota the chief interest for the well-being of the commonwealth centers in agricultural industries; but this does not comprise, by any means, the entire interest of this great and progressive State. The Farmer's Alliance when first organized promised to do a most beneficent work for the industry it repesents and seeks to consolidate; and with judicious management, it may still be made to subserve the honest purposes of the agricultural element. Numbering, as the farmers do, a large percentage of all the legal voters, they are in a position to demand of any political party the enactment of laws which will give their guild its full influence. In the past twenty years the farming influence through the Republican party has very largely guided and directed the practical legislation of the State of Minnesota. By going to that party it brought about the enactment of laws regulating rates of transportation on railroads, and pressed suits through all the State and national courts until the final decision was made by the highest judicial tribunal in the land that the people have the constitutional right to make such laws. The republicans called into existence the railroad and warehouse commission which has been prolific of so much good. They caused the creation of the dairy commission and were the real instruments in the reduction of the legal rate of interest. Not only has the farmer's influence through the republicans been felt in these enactments, but in a thousand less pronounced incidents have they been made to know their true friends in the direction of abstract justice toward their calling. If the Farmer's Alliance will gather its membership from all political parties, and work faithfully within the ranks of those parties for legislation favorable to the agricultural interest, they w antagonize no other great interest and will secure the hearty co-operation of every other organized calling. If the farmers have not made their wants known or else have asked for something that was radically and palpably unfair. If the American principle of protection has been embodied in laws which have appeared to coddle the manufacturing industries of New England and the East and neglected the farmers of the West, it is only because the farmers have neglected to place the facts clearly and explicitly before Congress. If the circulation of money per capita in the nation has been too small to properly transact the business of the country, a clear and emphatic protest from the farmers addressed to Congress would have found instant response in the passage of laws of relief. Let us suppose for a moment that the Farmer's Alliance should be temporarily successful in some States as a separate political organization. Members of Congress chosen by the farmers would find themselves in a decided minority when they had arrived in Washington, and would thus be compelled to ally themselves with either Democrats or Republicans for between these two parties alone are the lines of national policy clearly drawn. On the question of the tariff, or of the currency wherein would the agricultural interest be stronger than it is to-day? The farmer will find his only remedy for such evils as to-day assail his great industry in non-partisan pressure brought to bear upon the two national parties, one or the other of which always has and always will fix the destinies of the republic. class legislation is as repugnant to common sense as it is to common honesty; and its charater is not changed because the class which seeks such enactment happens to be the agricultural class, instead of the railroad class, the mercantile class or the banking class. If the farmers ask only what is fair and right they will find their petition granted cheerfully by the republican party; if they demand what is wrong they cann ot permanently secure it by separate political action.

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more fully shown by the following statement: A, aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his loan for interest	80.00
Total yearly payments	$ 168 44
Total for ten years	1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $184.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

Money a Legal Fiction.

BY JAMES H. ROBINSON.

National Economist.

Money is purely a legal fiction, like a corporation. It was intended to facilitate commerce by enabling a man at one and the same time to obtain credit and extinguish the obligation arising from it, or, in other words, to balance accounts. The currency, consisting of coins, bills of credit, or other authorized contrivances issued to perform the functions of this legal fiction, may be called money in the sense in which the images used by idolators are called gods; but the spirit of money, its function, its power to build up or pull down, consists entirely in its fictitious character. It may be likened to the electric current, the instumentalities for the use of which we can perceive, though we cannot see the subtle power itself, except in its effects. It is the product of human intercourse, or social friction, and is the greatest force ever developed on earth, yet, perhaps, the least understood. In my opinion, the best system for applying this fiction to economic purposes ever devised in the world was that which prevailed in the colony of Pennsylvania between 1723 and 1773, a system which was thus described by the historian David Hume:

In our colony of Pennsylvania the land itself, which is the chief commodity, is coined and passes into circulation. A planter immediately on purchasing [illegible] can go into a public office and receive notes to the amount of half the value of his land, which he employs in all payments, and they circulate through the colony by convention. To prevent the public being overwhelmed by this representative money there are two means employed: The notes issued to any one planter must not exceed a certain amount, whatever may be the value of the land; secondly, every planter is obliged to pay back into the public office every year one-tenth of his notes. The whole is, of course, annihilated in ten years, after which it is again allowed him to take out new notes to half the value of his land. This was the monetary system under which the American colonists prospered to such an extent that Edmund Burke said of them: "Nothing in the history of the world is like their progress." It was a wise and beneficent system, and its effects were most conductive to the happiness of the people.

A cursory examination of the subtreasury project leads me to the belief that it is predicated on similar principles; and while nothing is at the same time new and perfect, I am satisfied that it is both practicable and constitutional, and that with such modifications and improvements as a fair discussion might suggest, it ought to become a law of the land. I think it would abolish usury and afford to every man the opportunity to employ his skill in some productive enterprise. I think that the staple products of labor form as good a basis for bills of credit as land itself.

St. Vincent New Era: Congressman Comstock, like Congressman Hansborough, are new members of Congress, and both are everlasting workers for their constituents. The work they get through is simply immense, and the treatment that Mr. Hansborough received from the republicans of Dakota was abominable. There is no danger that the republicans of Minnesota will commit a similar blunder in respect to Mr. Comstock. This week he did all that was possible for him to do, in respect to harvest help for this District, leaving it under a fresh obligation to him.

Minnesota State Fair.

Sept. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, and 13.

Preparations for the coming State Fair are being made with the utmost vigor and enthusiasm by the officials in charge. Everything points to the most attractive and successful Fair in years and enough applications have already been received to insure for the Fair of 1890 tremendous exhibits of horses and cattle.

The Fair is officered this year as follows; President, F. C. Pillsbury, of Minneapolis; first vice-president, D. H. Moon, of St. Paul; second vice-president, S. M. Emery, of Lake City; Secretary, Wm. M. Liggett, of Hamline; treasurer, Frank J. Wilcox, of Northfield. The board of managers consists of Messrs, C. N. Cosgrove of LeSueur, Clark Chambers of Owatonna, John F. Norrish of Hastings, Wm. M. Liggitt of Benson, John Cooper of St. Cloud, and J. J. Alexander of Northfield. Wm. F. Cross, of Hamline, is superintendent of grounds; Mr. Cooper, of gates: Lorenzo Hoyt, of Hamline, of forage, and Rev. Dr. Wayland Hoyt, of Minneapolis, is chaplain. Among the divisions of the display, Col. Clark, Chambers is superintendent of horses; C. N. Cosgrove, of cattle; J. J. Alexander, of sheep, swine and poultry; S. M. Emery, assisted by E. F. Batten, of dairy products; D. H. Moon, of the Main Building; Wyman Elliot, of horticulture; W. H. Hayes, of grain and farm produce: C. N. Cosgrove, of machinery; and W. J. Dean, manager of machinery division. John F. Norrish is in charge of the privileges and Prof. O. C. Gregg has the direction of the farmer's institute which will be held each morning during the fair.

The Fair opens on Monday, Sept. 8th, and continues through the week. On each day there will be afternoon trotting races and during the week Roman chariot races, and half-mile trotting races by the famous trotting dog "Doc," will be special attractions. The large building known as Machinery Hall has been refitted and set apart for a grand dairy exhibit. In the same building the honey makers, an industry hitherto not properly appreciated, or recognized, will have a novel exhibition in an apiary annex.

Prof. Gregg, president of the state farmer's institute, will hold a daily institute upon the ground. A novel feature of the institute will be the practical object lessons. For instance, if any particular breed of cattle, sheep, or swine, is being considered, the animal under discussion will be brought in and exhibited on the platform where its merits can be pointed out.

These are only a few of the varied attractions of the fair. To catalogue them all would require a volume. In order to appreciate them one must be at the fair. There will be half-fare rates on all roads centering in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Farmer's Prosperity.

Farm Stock and Home: There are politicians and writers who seem to honestly believe that if it can be shown that a considerable number of farmers are slowly getting ahead, no matter how slowly nor at what cost of deprivation of ordinary comforts of life, a great point has been made, and the claim that there is anything wrong with our political and economic systems is thereby disproven. It would be strange, indeed, if in a country so richly endowed with soil and climate as this a farmer who is willing to work very hard, and practice a parsimony in living that a Digger Indian would consider stingy, could not slowly get ahead; and he who does so surely has no occasion to be thankful for laws, systems, or practices that vouchsafe him only so much. Politicians need to understand this; if the farmers in the land were making a fortune each year, that would not justify a tariff, unequal taxation, over-capitalization, or capitalistic conspiracies in unjustly taking from him one dollar of his profits. That the farmer may exist, may even get ahead more or less rapidly, does not atone for the robberies he is the victim of. The thief need not steal all a man has to insure his incarceration in prison; nor should capitalistic conspiracies be compelled to steal all of a farmer's substance before the people are justified in driving them from the face of the earth!

"Economy and Industry."

Seth Bottomley, in Farm Stock and Home.

The old adage, "A cobbler should stick to his last," would apply as well to other professions, especially to those agricultural writers who are excellent, entertaining and instructive when confined to purely agricultural matters, but when they essay political economy, and begin to lecture farmers on their want of economy and industry, they show plainly that they should stick to their last.

What a roaring farce this talk of farmer's economy and industry becomes to one who knows the average farmer's mode of life! What bitter irony it is to charge him with extravagance, and to preach economy to him! It makes my blood boil to think of it. I hope the recording angel only puts down the words we utter, for it makes me want to swear awfully when I read such stuff. I am always tempted by it to change the words, "Liberty, what crimes are committed in thy name," to "economy and industry, what rot has been written in your name." Only think of it! preaching economy to a class of men who when they kill a hog sell the hams and shoulders and eat the sides and head; and whose homes as a rule are almost as destitute of furniture and about as comfortless as a railroad waiting room. An old-fashioned eight-day clock, which the old New England farmer used to have in his kitchen, was worth as much as all the furniture that most western farmers possess outside the cooking stove. Your Mr. Gabrilson would let the farmer go into debt to build a barn; of course a barn is one of the farmer's tools, a means to help him earn more, and consequently would make him better picking for the monopolist; he would shear more. The model farmer of to-day is the good natured blockhead who earns great deal, lives the poorest, pays what he is asked for everything he buys takes his county paper, and votes as he is told. I was going to say that if he would dress in a blanket like an Indian his guardians would like him better, but come to think of it, a good blanket would cost more than his present dress of brown denim and hickory shirt. Don't write any more about economy—don't you know that is what's the matter! It is the enforced economy of the farmer, on account of being spoiled and impoverished by the leeches which are sapping his life's blood, that is driving this country to the devil headlong. Only just think of it, what an era of prosperity we should enjoy if our eight million farmers were all living and dressing as they should, and would if it were not for vicious laws which instead of protecting hold them while they are being robbed! Let us imagine the boom there would be in the watch trade if every farmer carried a watch; in the furniture trade, if their homes were properly furnished; in the cotton and woolen manufacturing business, if they were properly clothed; in the lumber business if their barns and houses were as large and as good as they should be, and were before they allowed the thimble-riggers to take charge of their political affairs and tax them into poverty. In short, this is the key to the whole situation; the ability to earn, spend and enjoy. The Almighty inspired George Stevenson to invent the locomotive, Fulton, the steamboat, and thousands of other inventors the thousands of labor saving devices, in order that every honest and industrious man, woman and child could earn a big, fat, generous living. The greatest criminals to-day are the scoundrels who block up the avenues of trade to prevent people and the nations from having free intercourse with one another, and the next greatest are the scrimping, pinching, miserly farmer, who by depriving themselves and families of all the comforts of life succeed in accumulating a little property. Such men are destitute of every generous principle, and never have a thought out-side their own mean, narrow, selfish lives; and are ever ready to trip up and take advantage of their more generous and free hearted neighbors. And such, as a general thing, are the so-called "successful farmers" we hear so much about. He is by no means "altogther lovely. Of course, there are a great many honorable exceptions, but this cap will not fit them, so they will not put it on. The proper way is to demand our rights, so that there will be no necessity for an industrious man to practice economy; then economy instead of being called a virtue would become a crime.

And now a few words about the twin of economy, industry. I have been travelling quite a little this summer among the farmers, and I have often had supper with the family after nine o'clock at night! What a life to lead in this day and age of the world! Still hammering at it, harder and longer than ever notwithstanding all the labor-saving machinery, and when every trade and profession is demanding shorter hours of labor! What state can the minds of such farmers be in for reading or study after such a day's work! No wonder they are the prey of every unscrupulous sharper that comes along, and the prey of the jackals of the modern commercial world.

Mortgage Sale.

WHEREAS, EDWIN P. CAPEN AND MATTIE C. Capen, his wife, of Polk County, State of Minnesota, as mortgagors, did, on the 4th day of August, A. D. 1885, duly execute and deliver to The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London, (Limited) of London, England, their mortgage bearing date of June 20th, A. D. 1885, whereby they mortgaged to said mortgagee the following described lands situated in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit; All of fractional Section 3, Township 148, Range 47 west, containing 632 96-100 acres, to secure the payment of the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars, with interest thereon, according to the conditions of one certain promissory note, with interest coupons attached, bearing even date with said mortgage, and made by said mortgagors to said mortgagee, or order, which said mortgage was on the 10th day of August, A. D. 1885, at 1:20 o'clock p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, in book 26 of mortgages, on pages 480 to 483 inclusive; and

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the sum of two hundred dollars, due as interest upon said mortgage on the 1st day of January, A. D. 1890, and on the further sum of ninety-four and 40-100 dollars due as interest thereon on the 20th day of June, A. D. 1890, and the said interest is still unpaid and due; and

Whereas, it was stipulated by and between the parties to said mortgage, that if default should be made in any of the conditions or covenants therein contained on the part of the mortgagors, to be kept and performed, that then and from thenceforth it shall be lawful for the said mortgagee, or its assigns, to consider and declare the whole sum secured thereby as immediately due and payable without notice to said mortgagors, or any other party; and

Whereas, The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London (Limited) has exercised its option to consider and declare, and does hereby consider and declare the whole sum of money secured by said mortgage to be due and payable; and

Whereas, there is now due, and claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of twenty-eight hundred thirty-two and 52-100 dollars, and no proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the same or any part thereof,

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land therein described, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in said County and State, on the 27th day of September, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash; to pay the sum due on said mortgage, together with taxes, if any, on said premises, and one hundred dollars attorney's fees therein stipulated to be paid in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Dated August 5th, A. D. 1890.

Wheat Shortage.

Farm Stock and Home: In explanation of the shrinkage in wheat between primary and terminal points in the Northwest, a Minneapolis grain buyer assures F. S. & H. that it is occasioned by stealing from the cars after their arrival at destination; he says that arrests of the thieves have been common, but convictions rare, the latter on account of the law's technicalities, etc. If this is a true statement of the case a remedy can surely be found. Make railroads responsible for whatever shortage may occur before the wheat has been duly delivered by them to consignee, and make the consignee responsible thereafter. At all events, it is simply infamous to make the farmer who raises, on an average, 10 to 12 bushels of wheat to the acre, and sells it for 60 to 70 cents a bushel, stand a loss of from 5 to 15 per cent of his crop through the pilfering of city thieves. The enormous shrinkage of wheat in transit must be stopped, even if railroad yards have to be surrounded by cordons of police. The farmer has quite enough to contend with; has robberies perpetrated upon him under forms of law and by the sanction of custom of sufficient magnitude to entitle him to exemption from the raids of common thieves

LEGISLATIVE CONVENTION.

A Legislative Convention for the district composed of Polk, Norman and Beltrami Counties, will be held at the Court House, in the city of Crookston, on Monday, September 15th, 1890, at 1:30 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following positions, viz:

1 Senator,
2 Representatives.

The several counties will be entitled to delegates as follows: Polk 9, Norman 5, Beltrami 1.

H. E. COOKE, Chairman.
H. H. PHELPS, Secretary.

Moorhead News: Hon. Charles Canning was in the city to-day. He goes to Duluth to-night, where he has opened an office and will conduct a grain commission business. Mr. Canning looks well. He has 1,600 acres of wheat this year and it will all be cut by to-morrow. He put in 1,000 acres for Dr. Cazenove. Mr. Canning says the crop is only fair; that the growth of straw is the heaviest he has ever seen but the filling is not as good. He would not give a positive opinion as to yield in advance of threshing but thinks the average will be in the neighborhood of 15 bushels. He thinks times will improve greatly in this valley owing to the fact that while its wheat crop is not big it is the best in the country, and the high price for that and other products will make the farmers prosperous, and the rest of the people will share the prosperity with them. Mr. Canning is not like many defeated candidates for office, "out of politics," but says he is right into them, and will be after "we fellows" from now until election. He says if he had run for congress this year he would be elected and has confidence that Halverson will be elected if the democrats endorse him, which he is in favor of. Mr. Canning is a democrat because that party advocates a low tariff, he says. He was formerly a republican but was read out of the party and has been fighting it ever since.

Wedding Bells.

The marriage of Engineer Frederick A. Chapin, to Miss Edith M., only daughter of Engineer and Mrs. Thomas Hunt, which took place at the residence of the bride's parents, in this city, was one of the most important events of the season in Crookston social circles. At 8 o'clock, precisely, the bridal party was ushered into the parlor to the merry strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Kate Marin, where the Rev. J. J. Edwards, of Moorhead, soon transformed the principals to Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Chapin. Geo. McLean officiated as best man, and Miss Ella Seiberts as bridesmaid. The bride was elegantly attired suitably to the occasion, while the groom looked his best as with his lovely wife he greeted his many friends as they crowded around, offering congratulations. We suppose our lady readers will be curious for a description of the bridal dress, but we do not feel sufficiently well versed in such matters to attempt to gratify that natural wish. After all had had an opportunity to offer congratulations and examine the many presents, the bride and groom led the way to the supper table, which was spread in a pavillion in the yard, fairly groaning with the good things of this earth and profusely decorated with beautiful flowers, and while the Crookston Cornet band discoursed its choicest selections, the guests discussed the substantials of the table, meats and breads and cake and biscuits of all kinds, every country and every clime having been made to contribute to the success of that feast. The yard was a bower of beauty, surrounded by young trees ten to twelve feet high, standing closely together along the fence, the whole well-lighted by Chinese lanterns, torches and a headlight, while beautiful flowers in endless profusion were everywhere present. The only thing to mar the perfect success of the entertainment was a bit of a shower that prevailed about one hour immediately following the ceremony. However, it was a good natured crowd, one prepared to enjoy the event, which they did to the fullest extent, the cornet band contributing in no slight degree to make it a perfect success. The festivities closed with a regular Fourth of July pyrotechnical display.

The following is a list of the gifts our reporter noted: From the groom to the bride, an elegant gold watch and chain and diamond earrings; from the groom's brother, S. E. Chapin, of Church's Ferry, N. D., a handsome marble clock and a rope stand, which latter unique gift Mr. Chapin made himself. Mr. and Mrs. W. Hurst, of Devil's Lake, a silver castor; Mrs. S. C. Doane, Chicago, a silver syrup cup; Dr. A. Horsman, of Devil's Lake, a china tea sett; Miss Rachel Clizbe, of Woodbine, Iowa, a silver tooth pick holder; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Caernes, of Devil's Lake, 1 doz. linen dinner napkins; H. Haight, Barnesville, one-half doz. nut picks and cracker, with case; Mr. and Mrs. Van Housen, Elgin, Ill., one-half doz. fruit knives; Ed. and Nellie Chapin, Prattsburgh, N. Y., sett silver knives and forks; Mrs. E. A. Hubbard, Prattsburgh, N. Y., 1 doz. table napkins; Mrs. A. Chapin, (mother of groom) 1 linen table cloth; Miss Anna Walker, Clarksburg, Ont., a plush photo bag.

The following is a list of presents made by citizens of Crookston: Conductor and Mrs. Norie, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Marin, Miss Katie Marin Mr. and Mrs. Reed, and Mr. and Mrs. Sieberts, a handsome sideboard; Fred and Minnie Walker, a silver castor; Miss Jennie Lanterman, a silver cake basket; E. D. Nicholson, a silver butter dish; Charles Hurst, a silver tea sett; Frank Hunt, a silver fruit dish; Charlie Hunt, a gold pen; Mrs. H. Martin, one-half dozen silver tea spoons; Miss Maggie Crawford, a china fruit dish; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wheeler, a china cracker dish; John Kyle, a silver pickle castor; Mrs. Casper Sands, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. National Economist:

Dispatches from Wall street show that money is very tight, loaning on call from 4 to 18 per cent:

The time for the enforcement of the new silver law is now at hand, and relief for the money market is therefore near, while strong hopes are entertained that the Secretary of the Treasury will find some means of nullifying the heavy Treasury abortions. One of the most important factors in the strength displayed to-day was the buoyancy of the London market, where the late stringency in money has been relieved, and a more hopeful feeling exists than in New York. The easing up of the money market there with the high rates here have caused a weakening in sterling exchange rates, and for the time being gold shipments are out of the question, which also encouraged purchase of good stocks to-day. The news of the day was in a large degree favorable, and the proposition that the Secretary of the Treasury should purchase the 4½s at par and interest to maturity met with much favor, and aided to keep the upward movement. The most important factor to that end, however, was the lending of large sums by one prominent bank, which gradually lowered the rates of money and instituted positive ease in place of the tightness prevailing in the forenoon. The upward movement continued, therefore, without interruption until the close, and the advances were large and uniform, the entire list sharing in it without distinction. The close was quiet but strong at the best figures of the day.

If the above is not a strong plea for more money and a complete acknowledgement of the fallacy of present financial methods, it will be difficult to find one. Does not the assertion that a loan of the face value and interest on the 4½ per cent bonds till maturity, without interest, meets with much favor, show that there is a leaven of human nature in Wall street? That is just the proposition.

Big Scheme.

Western Rural.

The new Union Stock Yards concern, in its attempts to sell its stock, sometimes reminds us of a circus advertising itself, and sometimes of a lottery publishing the fact, or an alleged fact, that somebody has drawn a prize. In the first place it is running in the daily papers an advertisement in which it pictures its prospects in such glowing colors that the author of the proclamation would be of priceless value to Barnum's advertiseing department. It is true that when the concern announces that the Union Stock Yards have been a mine of profit in the past, it tells the truth. The plain, unvarnished state of facts enables any one to write enchantingly upon the subject of Union Stock Yards profits. The corporation has plucked the poor farmer and stock raiser until matters have come to that that the farmer and stock raiser are now engaged in simply producing stock at a loss to be fed and handled at the Union Stock Yards at an immense profit. If the English gentlemen who have purchased the yards, or at least are part owners of them, had gone out upon our farms and listened to the story of the farmer, they would never have wanted an interest in these yards, provided of course they had no other means of learning what a magnificently organized and chartered robbery the yards represented. The story that would have been told them on our farms would have been that they had been losing money on cattle for years, and upon common principles of reasoning it would have been concluded that if that was the case, it was likely that the company that was handling the stock was making nothing.

But the farmers' story was not wanted. The fact that the Stock Yards company was coining money was world wide in circulation, and these capitalists who wished to get control of the yards simply wanted to get into position to share in the fruits of the robbery that has so long been permitted by the great State of Illinois. The scheme is about the same as that which is adopted to float a railroad. A new company is formed. It proceeds at once to sell enough stock to buy the plant, thus adding largely to the capital stock that our farmers and stock raisers are to be compelled to support, and the managers are to pocket a good round sum for the sale of stock at the same time. Perhaps the public may not care anything more about this new feature of the Stock Yards than it has cared about the matter as it formerly stood. It is true that charges to the farmer and stockman cannot be larger than they have been, for even the greed which has been so conspicuous in the management of these yards, would not have the impudence to increase the already extortionate charges. But the present scheme makes it only the more difficult to get the charges lowered.

As the Rural has already stated it does not doubt that the advertisement of this new concern tells the truth when it states what the profits have been, and yet one of the old stockholders asks a very knotty question upon this point. He says in a daily paper: "While I am not one of those popularly denominated kickers, still I cannot resist the temptation to suggest a query. The official declaration is that the combined net profits of the concern for the year ending June 30th, 1890, were $1,774,167. Now, as one of the recepients of those earnings, I was only paid at the rate of six per cent. on a capitalization of $13,000,000, which is $780,000. Which is correct, the official statement or the official payment? If the former, what became of the nearly $1,000,000 represented by the difference? Interesting, isn't it! It is one of the puzzles of this stupendous concern and it is one of the things that has confirmed me in my determination not to buy any more stock. While we are putting queries here is another. These gentlemen propose paying par for the old stock and fifty per cent. in bonds on a capitalization of $13,000,000, which means, in other words, $19,500,000. They propose capitalizing the new concern at $23,000,000, or $3,500,000 in excess of the old capitalization, which is a pretty neat little sum for the promoters to realize if their scheme succeeds. Another point: They must secure ninety per cent. of the stock upon which they base their profit sharing. What of the other ten per cent? Suppose they are unable to buy it in? This ten per cent. is entitled to dividends, the payment of which will lessen the profits of the syndicate just that much, will it not?"

Our Neighbor.

Western Rural.

The selfishness of men prevents them from exercising a neighborly feeling. The world's spirit is a good deal like the man who prayed for a blessing upon "me and my wife, my son John and his wife, us four and no more." We look out for ourselves and think little of how other people are getting along. But the whole world is intimately connected. Our interests, our real interests, the world over, are pretty near identical. We cannot afford to be selfish. A gentleman said to us the other day that the "Grip" showed us how the human family is so massed under similar conditions that none of us can draw ourselves within ourselves and shut ourselves up there. It was announced last season that away off in Russia some peasants were suffering from the grip. What was that to us! Why should we be concerned about the sufferings of a poor class of people thousands of miles away. Yet there was scarcely a family in America that was not ultimately afflicted with this disease.

The world cannot learn too soon that it must bear the burdens of the world. When the rich man by his methods makes others poor, and perhaps drives others to crime, he places a burden upon himself. Every criminal that society makes endangers its peace and endangers every life in it. The world would be happier, and would be much safer if every individual in it were prosperous, intelligent and moral. We often think when we witness the avarice that would enrich the individual and impoverish and enslave everybody else, that such individual cannot escape the burden and misfortune which he is entailing upon others. They are his neighbors, and if he makes them paupers he must reside among paupers; if he makes them vicous he must live among vice, and amidst such surroundings, it would matter little how elegant his home might be, there would be a cloud over it.

State Normal Schools

—AT—

WINONA, MANKATO, ST. CLOUD AND MOORHEAD.

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the common schools of the State.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments—the Normal Department and the Training department or Model School. The Normal Department embraces:

(a). An Elementary Course, for teachers of rural schools and elementary grades.
(b). An advanced course, for teachers of advanced grades.
(c). A Professional Course, for teachers who have completed the required academic work elsewhere.
(d). A Kindergarten Training Course, (at Winona.

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and colleges, and teachers holding County Superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted without examination. All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of three dollars a year. Provisions are made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished room with board is about $3.00 per week.

The next school year opens Sept. 1st, 1890.

For particulars concerning the several schools send for catalogues to the Presidents as follows:

IRWIN SHEPARD, Winona.
EDWARD SEARING, Mankato.
W. B. MITCHELL, Director, St. Cloud.
LIVINGSTONE C. LORD, Moorhead.

Good Listeners.

Western Rural.

People are generally good listeners, and to be a good listener is not only polite, but it is the way to acquire knowledge. The editor who is alive to the evils that threaten the people's prosperity, describes them and denounces, them, and the reader says: "That is all true." The orator pictures injustices and the probable unfortunate outcome of a failure to institute reform and likely the enthusiastic audience will unite in declaring: "If we had enough such men as the speaker there would be no injustices inflicted and no fear of danger." But the trouble is that these good listeners by the thousands fail to act upon the knowledge that they acquire by listening. Knowledge is power only when it is put to use. The fool will get along just as well as the wise man, if the wise man acts like a fool. The most cultured intellect that ever glowed in the world is as powerless as the mind of a savage, if it simply stores up its power and never uses it. It is not what we know but how we use our knowledge that tells for good or evil results.

The people of this country certainly should know by this time what evils have developed in their social and political system. They do know it. When a tree falls on a man he knows what has fallen on him, if he still lives and has his senses. The people knew they are robbed and by whom they are robbed. They know who has stepped on them. But they do not act upon their knowledge. If any thinking man was asked how to remedy the things that need remedying, he would answer that the way was for the people to rise up and do something, and not sit listening to a recital of wrongs year after year. That is what the Western Rural has been trying to get the people to do these many years. The wrongs we suffer need no further description; the power that the people possess, if they chose to use it, need not be told another time. The whole situation is as plain as day. We must up and at 'em, and that means that we shall all rise at one time and move forward together.

Cheap Money for Farmers."

Farm Stock and Home.

F. S. & H. would be glad to see farmers getting money to use at a very low rate, or at no rate, of interest: but it dislikes to see them so intent in pursuit of that object that they forget the existence of things that are largely instrumental in making them borrowers, and that forever bar them from becoming loaners. It is not many years since farmers were much less antagonistic to high rates of interest than now, for many of them were, and all hoped to be, loaners of money themselves. It should not be forgotten that the almost universal borrowing of money by farmers is cotemporaneous with over-capitalization, enormous exemptions of property from taxation, a high protective tariff, capitalistic domination in political affairs, and the invention of trusts and other monopolistic devices. This is a very significant fact and should inspire doubts as to the propriety of borrowing money at all as a means of resisting the encroachments of the powers alluded to. To provide for immediate necessities cheap money is not only desirable but is well nigh imperative: but the only specific cure is the destruction of those systems and practices that have made the clamor for cheap money so loud and determined. But that specific will never be administered while the abuses we complain of dominate and control our politics and legislation. The sooner this last fact is recognized the better.

SWIM, BUT DON'T GO NEAR THE WATER.

There are some writers who urge farmers and wage-workers to stand up for their rights, but at the same time caution them to beware of politics, protesting that they "would not do anything to antagonize or break up existing political parties." The holy-reverence these milk and water "farmer's friends" have for parties makes their arguments so contradictory, and their suggestions so inconsistent that they are really obstacles to practices and efficient reform. They may clamor for "justice" until hoarse; they may rail at monopoly until they have exhausted every term of denunciation, but if all practical effort must stop short of any interference with "existing parties" they might better have protested less. Next to the use of money in politics the thing that stands between productive industry and its salvation is the prejudice that holds men subservient to their party, even after they realize that its policy and practices antagonize their best interests. A writer who would dilate upon the importance of frequent bathing, the value of cleanliness, the invigorating effect of plunge in the surf, and then urge his reader to not go near the water, would be quite as consistent as he who advocates reform that must not interfere with "existing political parties." Better take grandfather's advice and hew to the line, no matter where the chips fly.

LEGISLATIVE CONVENTION.

A Legislative Convention for the district composed of Polk, Norman and Beltrami Counties, will be held at the Court House, in the city of Crookston, on Monday, September 15th, 1890, at 1:30 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following positions, viz:

1 Senator,
3 Representatives.

The several counties will be entitled to delegates as follows: Polk 9, Norman 5, Beltrami 1.

H. E. COOKE, Chairman.
H. H. PHELPS, Secretary.

Moorhead News: Hon. Charles Canning was in the city to-day. He goes to Duluth to-night, where he has opened an office and will conduct a grain commission business. Mr. Canning looks well. He has 1,600 acres of wheat this year and it will all be cut by to-morrow. He put in 1,000 acres for Dr. Cazenove. Mr. Canning says the crop is only fair; that the growth of straw is the heaviest he has ever seen but the filling is not as good. He would not give a positive opinion as to yield in advance of threshing but thinks the average will be in the neighborhood of 15 bushels. He thinks times will improve greatly in this valley owing to the fact that while its wheat crop is not big it is the best in the country, and the high price for that and other products will make the farmers prosperous, and the rest of the people will share the prosperity with them. Mr. Canning is not like many defeated candidates for office, "out of politics," but says he is right into them, and will be after "we fellows" from now until election. He says if he had run for congress this year he would be elected and has confidence that Halverson will be elected if the democrats endorse him, which he is in favor of. Mr. Canning is a democrat because that party advocates a low tariff, he says. He was formerly a republican but was read out of the party and has been fighting it ever since.

Wedding Bells.

The marriage of Engineer Frederick A. Chapin, to Miss Edith M., only daughter of Engineer and Mrs. Thomas Hunt, which took place at the residence of the bride's parents, in this city, was one of the most important events of the season in Crookston social circles. At 8 o'clock, precisely, the bridal party was ushered into the parlor to the merry strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Kate Marin, where the Rev. J. J. Edwards, of Moorhead, soon transformed the principals to Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Chapin. Geo. McLean officiated as best man, and Miss Ella Seiberts as bridesmaid. The bride was elegantly attired suitably to the occasion, while the groom looked his best as with his lovely wife he greeted his many friends as they crowded around, offering congratulations. We suppose our lady readers will be curious for a description of the bridal dress, but we do not feel sufficiently well versed in such matters to attempt to gratify that natural wish. After all had had an opportunity to offer congratulations and examine the many presents, the bride and groom led the way to the supper table, which was spread in a pavilion in the yard, fairly groaning with the good things of this earth and profusely decorated with beautiful flowers, and while the Crookston Cornet band discoursed its choicest selections, the guests discussed the substantials of the table, meats and breads and cake and biscuits of all kinds, every country and every clime having been made to contribute to the success of that feast. The yard was a bower of beauty, surrounded by young trees ten to twelve feet high, standing closely together along the fence, the whole well-lighted by Chinese lanterns, torches and a headlight, while beautiful flowers in endless profusion were everywhere present. The only thing to mar the perfect success of the entertainment was a bit of a shower that prevailed about one hour immediately following the ceremony. However, it was a good natured crowd, one prepared to enjoy the event, which they did to the fullest extent, the cornet band contributing in no slight degree to make it a perfect success. The festivities closed with a regular Fourth of July pyrotechnical display.

The following is a list of the gifts our reporter noted: From the groom to the bride, an elegant gold watch and chain and diamond earrings; from the groom's brother, S. E. Chapin, of Church's Ferry, N. D., a handsome marble clock and a rope stand, which latter unique gift Mr. Chapin made himself. Mr. and Mrs. W. Hurst, of Devil's Lake, a silver castor; Mrs. S. C. Doane, Chicago, a silver syrup cup; Dr. A. Horsman, of Devil's Lake, a china tea sett; Miss Rachel Clizbe, of Woodbine, Iowa, a silver tooth pick holder; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Caernes, of Devil's Lake, 1 doz. linen dinner napkins; H. National Economist:

Dispatches from Wall street show that money is very tight, loaning on call from 4 to 18 per cent:

The time for the enforcement of the new silver law is now at hand, and relief for the money market is therefore near, while strong hopes are entertained that the Secretary of the Treasury will find some means of nullifying the heavy Treasury abortions. One of the most important factors in the strenth displayed to-day was the buoyancy of the London market, where the late stringency in money has been relieved, and a more hopeful feeling exists than in New York. The easing up of the money market there with the high rates here have caused a weakening in sterling exchange rates, and for the time being gold shipments are out of the question, which also encouraged purchase of good stocks to-day. The news of the day was in a large degree favorable, and the proposition that the Secretary of the Treasury should purchase the 4½s at par and interest to maturity met with much favor, and aided to keep the upward movement. The most important factor to that end, however, was the lending of large sums by one prominent bank, which gradually lowered the rates of money and instituted positive ease in place of the tightness prevailing in the forenoon. The upward movement continued, therefore, without interruption until the close, and the advances were large and uniform, the entire list sharing in it without distinction. The close was quiet but strong at the best figures of the day.

If the above is not a strong plea for more money and a complete acknowledgement of the fallacy of present financial methods, it will be difficult to find one. Does not the assertion that a loan of the face value and interest on the 4½ per cent bonds till maturity, without interest, meets with much favor, show that there is a leaven of human nature in Wall street? That is just the proposition.

Big Scheme.

Western Rural.

The new Union Stock Yards concern, in its attempts to sell its stock, sometimes reminds us of a circus advertising itself, and sometimes of a lottery publishing the fact, or an alleged fact, that somebody has drawn a prize. In the first place it is running in the daily papers an advertisement in which it pictures its prospects in such glowing colors that the auther of the proclamation would be of priceless value to Barnum's advertiseing department. It is true that when the concern announces that the Union Stock Yards have been a mine of profit in the past, it tell's the truth. The plain, unvarnished state of facts enables any one to write enchantingly upon the subject of Union Stock Yards profits. The corporation has plucked the poor farmer and stock raiser until matters have come to that that the farmer and stock raiser are now engaged in simply producing stock at a loss to be fed and handled at the Union Stock Yards at an immense profit. If the English gentlemen who have purchased the yards, or at least are part owners of them, had gone out upon our farms and listened to the story of the farmer, they would never have wanted an interest in these yards, provided, of course they had no other means of learning what a magnificently organized and chartered robbery the yards represented. The story that would have been told them on our farms would have been that they had been losing money on cattle for years, and upon common principles of reasoning it would have been concluded that if that was the case, it was likely that the company that was handling the stock was making nothing.

But the farmers' story was not wanted. The fact that the Stock Yards company was coining money was world wide in circulation, and these capitalists who wished to get control of the yards simply wanted to get into position to share in the fruits of the robbery that has so long been permitted by the great State of Illinois. The scheme is about the same as that which is adopted to float a railroad. A new company is formed. It proceeds at once to sell enough stock to buy the plant, thus adding largely to the capital stock that our farmers and stock raisers are to be compelled to support, and the managers are to pocket a good round sum for the sale of stock at the same time. Perhaps the public may not care anything more about this new feature of the Stock Yards than it has cared about the matter as it formerly stood. It is true that charges to the farmer and stockman cannot be larger than they have been, for even the greed which has been so conspicuous in the management of these yards, would not have the impudence to increase the already extortionate charges. But the present scheme makes it only the more difficult to get the charges lowered.

As the Rural has already stated it does not doubt that the advertisement of this new concern tells the truth when it states what the profits have been, and yet one of the old stockholders asks a very knotty question upon this point. He says in a daily paper: "While I am not one of those popularly denominated kickers, still I cannot resist the temptation to suggest a query. The official declaration is that the combined net profits of the concern for the year ending June 30th, 1890, were $1,774,167. Now, as one of the recepients of those earnings, I was only paid at the rate of six per cent. on a capitalization of $18,000,000. which is $780,000. Which is correct, the official statement or the official payment? If the former, what became of the nearly $1,000,000 represented by the difference? Interesting, isn't it! It is one of the puzzles of this stupendous concern and it is one of the things that has confirmed me in my determination not to buy any more stock. While we are putting queries here is another. These gentlemen propose paying par for the old stock and fifty per cent. in bonds on a capitalization of $13,000,000, which means, in other words, $19,500,000. They propose capitalizing the new concern at $23,000,000, or $3,500,000 in excess of the old capitalization, which is a pretty neat little sum for the promoters to realize if their scheme succeeds. Another point: They must secure ninety per cent. of the stock upon which they base their profit sharing. What of the other ten per cent? Suppose they are unable to buy it in? This ten per cent. is entitled to dividends, the payment of which will lessen the profits of the syndicate just that much, will it not?"

Our Neighbor.

Western Rural.

The selfishness of men prevents them from exercising a neighborly feeling. The world's spirit is a good deal like the man who prayed for a blessing upon "me and my wife, my son John and his wife, us four and no more." We look out for ourselves and think little of how other people are getting along. But the whole world is intimately connected. Our interests, our real interests, the world over, are pretty near identical. We cannot afford to be selfish. A gentleman said to us the other day that the "Grip" showed us how the human family is so massed under similar conditions that none of us can draw ourselves within ourselves and shut ourselves up there. It was announced last season that away off in Russia some peasants were suffering from the grip. What was that to us! Why should we be concerned about the sufferings of a poor class of people thousands of miles away. Yet there was scarcely a family in America that was not ultimately afflicted with this disease.

The world cannot learn too soon that it must bear the burdens of the world. When the rich man by his methods makes others poor, and perhaps drives others to crime, he places a burden upon himself. Every criminal that society makes endangers its peace and endangers every life in it. The world would be happier, and would be much safer if every individual in it were prosperous, intelligent and moral. We often think when we witness the avarice that would enrich the individual and impoverish and enslave everybody else, that such individual cannot escape the burden and misfortune which he is entailing upon others. They are his neighbors, and if he makes them paupers he must reside among paupers; if he makes them vicious he must live among vice, and amidst such surroundings, it would matter little how elegant his home might be, there would be a cloud over it.

State Normal Schools

—AT—

WINONA, MANKATO, ST. CLOUD AND MOORHEAD.

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the common schools of the State.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments—the Normal Department and the Training department or Model School. The Normal Department embraces:

(a) An Elementary Course, for teachers of rural schools and elementary grades.
(b) An advanced course, for teachers of advanced grades.
(c) A Professional Course, for teachers who have completed the required academic work elsewhere.
(d) A Kindergarten Training Course, (at Winona.)

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and colleges, and teachers holding County Superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted without examination. All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of three dollars a year. Provisions are made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished room with board is about $3.00 per week.

The next school year opens Sept. 1st, 1890.

For particulars concerning the several schools send for catalogues to the Presidents as follows:

IRWIN SHEPARD, Winona.
EDWARD SEARING, Mankato.
W. B. MITCHELL, Director, St. Cloud.
LIVINGSTONE C. LORD, Moorhead.

Good Listeners.

Western Rural.

People are generally good listeners, and to be a good listener is not only polite, but it is the way to acquire knowledge. The editor who is alive to the evils that threaten the people's prosperity, describes them and denounces them, and the reader says: "That is all true." The orator pictures injustices and the probable unfortunate outcome of a failue to institute reform and likely the enthusiastic audience will unite in declaring: "If we had enough such men as the speaker there would be no injustices inflicted and no fear of danger." But the trouble is that these good listeners by the thousands fail to act upon the knowledge that they acquire by listening. Knowledge is power only when it is put to use. The fool will get along just as well as the wise man, if the wise man acts like a fool. The most cultured intellect that ever glowed in the world is as powerless as the mind of a savage, if it simply stores up its power and never uses it. It is not what we know but how we use our knowledge that tells for good or evil results.

The people of this country certainly should know by this time what evils have developed in their social and political system. They do know it. When a tree falls on a man he knows what has fallen on him, if he still lives and has his senses. The people knew they are robbed and by whom they are robbed. They know who has stepped on them. But they do not act upon their knowledge. If any thinking man was asked how to remedy the things that need remedying, he would answer that the way was for the people to rise up and do something, and not sit listening to a recital of wrongs year after year. That is what the Western Rural has been trying to get the people to do these many years. The wrongs we suffer need no further description: the power that the people possess, if they chose to use it, need not be told another time. The whole situation is as plain as day. We must up and at 'em, and that means that we shall all rise at one time and move forward together.

Farm Stock and Home.

F. S. & H. would be glad to see farmers getting money to use at a very low rate, or at no rate, of interest: but it dislikes to see them so intent in pursuit of that object that they forget the existence of things that are largely instrumental in making them borrowers, and that forever bar them from becoming loaners. It is not many years since farmers were much less antagonistic to high rates of interest than now, for many of them were, and all hoped to be, loaners of money themselves. It should not be forgotten that the almost universal borrowing of money by farmers is cotemporaneous with over-capitalization, enormous exemptions of property from taxation, a high protective tariff, capitalistic domination in political affairs, and the invention of trusts and other monopolistic devices. This is a very significant fact and should inspire doubts as to the propriety of borrowing money at all as a means of resisting the encroachments of the powers alluded to. To provide for immediate necessities cheap money is not only desirable but is well nigh imperative: but the only specific cure is the destruction of those systems and practices that have made the clamor for cheap money so loud and determined. But that specific will never be administered while the abuses we complain of dominate and control our politics and legislation. The sooner this last fact is recognized the better.

SWIM, BUT DON'T GO NEAR THE WATER.

There are some writers who urge farmers and wage-workers to stand up for their rights, but at the same time caution them to beware of politics, protesting that they "would not do anything to antagonize or break up existing political parties." The holy reverence these milk and water "farmer's friends" have for parties makes their arguments so contradictory, and their suggestions so inconsistent that they are really obstacles to practices and efficient reform. They may clamor for "justice" until hoarse; they may rail at monopoly until they have exhausted every term of denunciation, but if all practical effort must stop short of any interference with "existing parties" they might better have protested less. Next to the use of money in politics the thing that stands between productive industry and its salvation is the prejudice that holds men subservient to their party, even after they realize that its policy and practices antagonize their best interests. A writer who would dilate upon the importance of frequent bathing, the value of cleanliness, the invigorating effect of plunge in the surf, and then urge his reader to not go near the water, would be quite as consistent as he who advocates reform that must not interfere with "existing political parties." Better take grandfather's advice and hew to the line, no matter where the chips fly.

New wheat begins to come in slowly. The October market bids fair to be the best.

Mike Kirsch, sold his house and lot on Sampson's Woodland Addition last week.

Al. Kaiser, the 13 townsman, came in to attend the democratic circus on Wednesday.

Why don't you save money by going to A. Sture's for your boots, shoes and gloves?

Wheat took another tumble on Tuesday morning, reaching 87 cents for No. 1 Hard.

The Cleveland minstrel parade on Tuesday was a dandy. They have an excellent band.

Jos. Smith and wife, Red Lake Falls, attended the Cleveland reception on Tuesday evening.

At Sture's you will find a large assortment of excellent woolen blankets at prices hard to beat.

Mr. Anglim accompanied his daughter, Lottie, to St. Paul last week, where she will attend school.

The St. Louis red pressed brick for the McKinnon block has arrived and is being laid in the front.

Hugh Thompson came up from Fisher on Wednesday to take lessons in politics from the unterrified.

Cedar shingles do not warp, check, or rot at the nail holes. They will last many times as long as pine. For sale by I. U. Jennings. [20-21]

The democratic convention yesterday was a very quiet affair. The democrats don't seem to be in it this fall.

Wheat on the Corser place is turning out very much lighter than was expected. All No. 1 Hard, though.

Contrary to general opinion there are a few democrats left in Polk County yet, but they look blue and lonesome.

Pete Misgen arrived from Superior on Sunday for a few days. Pete notes many improvements in our city since he left.

A. D. Stephens left for St. Paul on Tuesday evening. He will be at Little Falls to-day in time for the convention.

Brother farmer, when you come to Crookston go to Hack & Gallasch' old stand and see what the old farmer can do for you.

Herb has a fine assortment of accordeons and musical goods just arrived.

The Fisher Bulletin says that Sampson assures that sheet that he is not in the field this fall as candidate for the senate.

Mr. P. Lusian and wife started for Iowa on Monday evening, summoned by news of the death of Mrs. Lusian's mother.

John Florin, W. E. Walker's foreman, welcomed his family from Chicago on Sunday. John will go to housekeeping in the city.

Andy Aiken was down to Fred Durand's on Monday morning, fixing up a slate. He SAID his boy wanted to start for school. (?)

Call at Herb's and look over the new stock of musical goods. Largest in the city.

The contractor on the McKinnon block has a handy hoisting rig for elevating barrows of brick and mortar. beats the hod all hollow.

A party of hunters from Crookston were out on Joe Beaudett's place last week. They left more chickens dead on the field than they brought away.

Andy Locken, Thompson and Erickson went out after the festive chicken on Monday. The dogs seemed to get more of the shot than the chickens did.

M. B. McClellan, representing the J. H. Bishop paper house, Minneapolis was in the city on Tuesday.

Wheat slumped [illegible] since last [illegible] reaching 89 for No. 1 Hard on Monday morning. There is some coming in, now.

E. S. Corser is up from Minneapolis looking after his farming operations. He has some splendid wheat, but it will not be a big yield.

O. H. Holmes and Frank Myers were in from Red Lake Falls to take in the great hoodoo business at the Court House, Wednesday.

S. E. Chapin was over from Church's Ferry last week to see Fred married and enjoy a visit with old friends, returning on Saturday.

The council met on Tuesday evening and ordered the clerk to advertise for bids for sewer along Main to Robert, and thence to Broadway.

Thos. Einund, an old time Crookston carpenter, was over from Grand Forks last week. Says our building boom reminds him of old times.

The Drayton Echo says Mrs. W. H. Gardner arrived home yesterday from her Crookston visit and Drayton's tonsorial artist is happy again.

Joseph Laframboise intends to start on or about Oct. 1st with a carload of stock for Montana. He is picking up choice animals for the purpose.

E. D. Childs says that wheat is not yielding as many bushels per acre as he has expected by at least one-third. It is of the very best quality, however.

Big weights and small prices—that's Holmboe's motto. [14-27]

Mrs. I. U. Jennings started east on Tuesday for her fall stock of millinery goods. On her return she will have something to say of interest to the ladies.

J. E. Mitton, of Wahpeton, was in the city yesterday. Says he will sell that farm for $8 per acre, one-half time balance five years at 8 per cent. This is a snap.

The Cleveland minstrels were not up to our expectations. They have good music and some good singers, but we expected a better show than the reality justified.

Farmers, don't sell your hogs to shippers when you can get double of the price by having them cured at the packing house. [f-tf]

Louis Fontaine returned last week from his visit to the encampment in Boston. Says it was a big event. He laid in a big stock of goods for F. & A. while away.

There was a circus in town last Friday. The street parade was enough to give the snap away, but for all that it is said the tent was full day and evening. How the "dear people" do like to be humbugged.

John Mikulecky was down from Tabor to attend the democratic convention on Wednesday. John has just got up from a severe illness, the result of the grip last winter. For some time his life was despaired of, but he is now getting along all right.

Best water white kerosene only 15 cents per gallon at A. Holmboe's, Robert street. [14-27]

John Bahnsen, the youngest brother of Dr. W. J. Bahnsen, who was shot at Fisher, arrived on Monday morning to look after the doctor's affairs here. Mrs. Bahnsen will stay with friends at Rock Island for awhile.

Frank Jerome took possession of the St. Louis Hotel on Monday morning. A. C. Schmidt is repapering and repainting the hotel from cellar to garret. Frank says he is going to keep a nice hotel if he don't lay up a cent.

Vine & Tebesar having bought out the meat market on Broadway so long and successfully conducted by Mr. LeBlanc, are now running a fine market. They hope to fully sustain the reputation of this market, and start ahead all right.

If you want value for your money in the boot and shoe line call at Holmboe's New goods arriving every week. [14-27]

M. C. Malone has purchased the scales that have, for so long been on Main street, in front of Herb's place, and taken them to the N. P. depot to be used in his wheat business. Herb sold them to get them out of the weigh.

James Cassady, father of Mrs. Horace G. Russel, was in the city last week in consultation with H. Steenerson in the Russel case. Mr. Cassady refused to say much in regard to the case, but said that he has no doubt that Horace Russel is insane.

On Saturday noon Harris & Glenn pitched into the old Misgen building that for a few weeks has been standing on the corner of Broadway and Fletcher and started for Chase's addition with it. It will find a resting place near the Valley Roller Mills.

D. Jacobus shies his castor into the ring for sheriff. Jake is one of the oldest inhabitants of Polk County, coming with the first railroad, and has been foremost in almost every enterprise calculated to build up the city and county. Jake would make a good sheriff.

P. J. LaChapelle went out into the towns east of Crookston last week with a Mr. McKenzie, an Iowa man who is looking up cheap farming lands for an investment, and brought in from the town of Bray as fine samples of corn as could be found in any country. It shows the possibilities of the country as a corn producer, as it was one of the very latest varieties and nearly ripe, requiring only a few more days to fully mature.

Profit in Sheep.

S. M. McKee informs THE JOURNAL that he finds sheep the most profitable branch of industry on his farm. He bought a flock in 1880, we believe, and he now has 203 that have cost him nothing, what he has realized from the sale of wool and mutton having paid the first cost and the expenses of keeping. He will continue in the business.

Register Dickmann, of the U. S. Land Office, returned from a visit to his farm in Wabasha County. Says our crops here are better than those he saw on his trip. His tennants have raised a large lot of excellent corn this year and only 20 acres of wheat—nice wheat, though.

Chester Blanchard came over from Buxton, N. D., last week, where he has just struck a 150 barrel well, the fifth or sixth one he has obtained this summer. He went to Minneapolis on Monday to do the great Exposition, thence he goes to Wisconsin for a visit to the old home. He drove a horse and buggy as far as Alexandria on the way.

Engineer F. A. Chapin and wife left on Thursday morning of last week for Brandon, Manitoba, to visit an aunt of the bride at that place. They stopped for a day or two in Winnipeg to look over that venerable city. Expect to be at home in Crookston after September 12th. Fred's hosts of friends unite with THE JOURNAL in casting the old slipper and the wish for a pleasant wedding tour for them.

Sandin & Onstad, who recently opened out on Robert street, report business lively. They are energetic young men and deserve success. Mr. Sandin has been a clerk in our city for a long time, was recently with the New York store. Mr. Onstad was recently a dweller in the Thirteen Towns, but has got over it and bids fair to pull through.

The democratic caucuses were very quiet affairs, from ten to twenty earnest citizens met in each ward to select delegates to the county convention on the third. In the 1st ward John McKinnon was chosen chairman, and A. Asseline, secretary. John O. Sundet, F. O. Sustad and L. L. Benoit delegates to the convention. The chair was instructed to appoint a democratic ward committee.

Hugh Carrier came in on the Fosston train on Tuesday evening. He has recently been at Bagley's place, up near the reservation, and says they just finished cutting three-quarters of a section of fine grain. The wheat is of excellent quality and promises a big yield. He says he never saw such vegetables as are raised on that farm. The country is pleasantly diversified by groves of fine timber and open prairie.

On Saturday night of last week David Vannett, section foreman on the Great Northern, was presented with a handsome gold watch from the Great Northern employes. The present was a perfect surprise to Dave, who had no idea that changing him from one road to another would have such an effect. He was formerly an employe on the N. P., coming to this road in '78 or '79. This handsome testimonial shows in what esteem he is held by his associates on the Great Northern.

Frank B. Netzer, son of Joseph Netzer, of this city, was killed on Friday last in Chicago. Together with his wife he was on board a cable car when the train collided with a runaway car in a tunnel. Mr. Netzer was thrown upon the track and run over. His wife escaped without serious injury. The remains were sent to Wabasha, his old home, for interment. Mr. Netzer was an employe of the American Express Co. Some years since he was suspected of crooked work; was arrested, tried and acquitted and taken back into the employ of the company, and was in their employ when the sad accident occurred.

The Cantata "The Harvest Queen," rendered at the Baptist church on Thursday evening of last week was excellently well rendered by the little folks company the Loyal Temberance Legion, and much credit is due Mrs. S. H. Barteau for the excellent drill she has given them. The performance was well rendered throughout, but the speech of Sam. Wilkinson's little three-year-old son, Hugh, is deserving of especial mention and brought the house down. He was encored to the turn and repeated his little speech in a louder tone, under the impression that he had not spoken loud enough the first time. The receipts were over $40 and everybody was well pleased with the entertainment.

The Horton case, in St. Paul, assumes a new interest to our citizens from the connection therewith of a former resident of Crookston. It will be remembered that at the time of Horton's arrest it was intimated that there was a lady in the case—a lady to whom, it was said, Horton was engaged to be married. It now transpires that the lady was Miss Mary E. Van Wie, who was for some time associated with Mrs. Munson in the dressmaking business, and later a teacher in our public school. No one here will believe for a moment that she is criminally connected with the case, as she is well known to be a lady of spotless character. She was not aware that Horton was a married man. She however keenly feels the position in which she is placed in this affair and is deserving of the sympathy of her friends.

Beltrami Pointers.

BELTRAMI, Sept. 1, 1890.

Most of the farmers are through cutting and threshing has begun.

The first wheat of the season was hauled to market Saturday from the Wells farm. The grade was No. 1 Northern.

Game must be plentiful in this vicinity or sportsmen from St. Louis, Minneapolis and other places would not come here every season. We shall always be glad to welcome such men as J. P. Ellis and son, E. Smith and J. G. Parrish, M. D., of St. Louis.

J. Jenson, wheat buyer for the Red River Valley Elevator Co. at St. Vincent, was down on Friday looking after his "chittens."

To the members of the Republican Legislative Convention, to be held at Crookston, Sept. 15th, 1890: Gentlemen:—in order for our party to win in the coming campaign we must nominate men who have an unblemished character and undoubted ability, and in whom the farmers have perfect confidence, and it is a great pleasure to me to know such an one, and I present his name, that of James C. Hayes, of the town of Hubbard. To those who know him, and they are legion, he needs no encomium, but to those who have not had that privilege I will say a few words. During his residence in this county for the past twelve years he has shown himself to be a practical, educated farmer and a gentleman of the highest character and strictest integrity, and one whom any community ought to be proud to have represent them in the legislature. If he should receive the nomination he would not only get the votes of our own party but those of the best men of all parties. He is not seeking the nomination and will not know that his name is mentioned until he reads this article.

EDNA.

For Sheriff.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Polk County, subject to the voters of this county.

D. JACOBUS.

Daily Pioneer Press: Halver Steenerson of Crookston, Minn., looks very much like Representative Haugen, of the Eight Wisconsin district. Steenerson is often taken for Haugen when met by Wisconsin people in St. Paul and Haugen when in St. Paul is quite frequently taken for the tall Scandinavian of the Red River Valley. Last winter when Steenerson was in Washington he was standing in the corridor talking with Representative Comstock. Haugen came out and after talking a few moments said: "Comstock, you and Steenerson go in this door. The doorkeeper will take him for me, and I will go in another way. What is the use having a constituent who looks like a member of congress if he can't have the privilege of the floor?" The scheme worked and Steenerson remained on the floor as long as he desired. He was called "Haugen" a number of times by members who did not know that the Wisconsin man had a double.

Sort 'o Haugin his way, as it were.

Daily Plaindealer: W. J. Murphy.—Yes Crookston is pulling itself together in good form. I find there quite a number of broad-gauged progressive business men and of late they all seem to have conceived the necessity of pulling together in behalf of the developement of the city. Mayor McKinnon's new three story business block has risen to the second story while Alderman's Bjoin's new block is above the basement walls. The new hotel is a go sure. It will be a magnificent structure Several new blocks are already projected for next year, notably one by Wm. Anglim. I look to see Crookston double its population and business in the next three years. All the improvements which we will put in will be on the assumption that the city will be ten or fifteen thousand population during the present decade.

Anent the Horton Case.

Pioneer Press: Mary Van Wie did not make her appearance yesterday in any of her accustomed places. It is understood that members of her family are anxious that she should make a frank statement of her acquaintance with Horton, and it is likely that in deference to their wishes she will do so, Her statement will undoubtedly do much to clear the mystery in the case, be the revelation creditable or not to the man who now rests under a cloud.

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more fully shown by the following statement: A, aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his loan for interest	80 00
Total yearly payments	$168 44
Total for ten years	1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $184.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

Elmer E. Adams, editor of the Fergus Falls Journal, was married on August 28th, to Miss Jennie Cowles, a young lady teacher of Fergus Falls. THE JOURNAL extends congratulations.

The Chronicle shows commendable enterprise by taking the associated press dispatches. The experiment necessitates added expenses that will require a far greater patronage than before to sustain, but the Palmers seem to have lots of sand and THE JOURNAL wishes its neighbor all the success it deserves.

"Down Wint McGinty."

In the Times forecast of probable candidates on the democratic ticket, only six of the nine offices are to be filled by citizens of Irish descent, but not a word said about Gilhooley or McGinty. Why this omission?

Mr. Comstock's friends will be disappointed to learn that he will not be at Little Falls to-day. He will stay in Washington to watch our interests in the river and harbor bill that is liable to pass at any time. Congressman Snider who has just arrived from Washington gives the opinion that Congress will not adjourn until Oct. 10th. Mr. Comstock will be right on deck, faithfully guarding our interests. That is the kind of a Congressman to have.

Gives the Snap Away.

The Times, in its last issue, says:

"The Farmers' Alliance has a strong ticket in the field, which by dividing the vote, will tend to increase the chances for Democratic success."

So this is the true inwardness of the great interest the democratic party of Polk County has manifested in the alliance—a means to install democrats into office! That's just what THE JOURNAL has said, time and again, but that party has constantly denied the charge. If the democrats were sincere in their professions of interest in the welfare of the alliance, they would prove it by endorsing Owen for Governor—but they will not. Railroad authorities have ordered the nomination of railroad attorney Wilson, and Wilson will be nominated. The Times gives the snap away in this county by the statement that the big alliance vote in this county will enable the hungry dems to rake in the fat chestnuts, and urges the "trooly loil" to take heart, brace up and proceed to rake. The Times labors under the pleasing delusion that democratic farmers' alliance men are all fools, who will vote the democratic ticket at the crack of the party lash, while all the republican farmers will stick to the alliance party, thus the dems will win another "glor'us vict'ry!" Great head, but doomed to a bitter disappointment, we opine. According to the Times idea the only good thing to be accomplished is "the offices!" Thus it diagnoses the great object of the Farmers' Alliance—a struggle for office. For this the Times has urged the alliance to stick to their text, because this would enable the democrats, for once in their lives, to gobble up the offices! A consummation greatly to be desired, according to the Times' idea.

Railroad Methods.

Farm, Stock and Home.

Poor's Manual of the railroads of the United States for 1889, recently issued, places their capitalization at $9,680,952,249, or almost $60,000 a mile. The average interest paid on this enormous sum was a fraction over 6 per cent, and the average net earnings reported were 3.3 per cent, or a total income of about 10 per cent. This does not look large on its face, but when taken in connection with the fact that apparent incomes are purposely reduced by enormous salaries paid to heavy stockholders who are by courtesy called officers, but have no duties to perform except drawing their salaries, the returns surely seem ample, even if the capitalization that draws the income is real or honest. But the capitalization is not real, is not honest. Even Mr. Poor, a very conservative authority, admits that at least half the capital is fictitious. Ten per cent on this mythical value amounts to the snug little sum of $480,000,000, a fine tribute, indeed, for our productive industries to annually pay to a lot of cunning rogues, for it requires no talent but the cunning of common rascals to create fraudulent values, and no machinery but monopoly's unholy ways to make such values tribute-drawers from productive industry.

If the amount of money paid to fictitious railroad values alone could be devoted to the buying of articles of necessity and comfort in the homes of our wealthy producers how quickly would the good angel of prosperity smile upon and hover over this country! Many of our farmers honestly believe that if the government would loan them money—$1,000,000,000 at the most—at a low rate of interest, all of labor's woes would disappear at once; if that is true, how much more beneficial would be exemption from paying nearly that sum every two years to a small handful of plutocrats! Thirty years ago the cry of honest, earnest, christian men was: "Human slavery is wrong, and, by the Eternal, it has got to go!" Now, myriads of the same kind of men are crying out, over-capitalization of corporate monopolies is wrong, and, by the Eternal, it has got to go! To this work, patriotism, justice, real republicanism, love of country, home and family must devote themselves. In silently enduring the slavery of over-capitalization the American people confess that they are not capable of self government.

Enterprise vs. Robbery.

Farm Stock and Home.

As the seasons come and go it becomes more and more apparent that the pressure to which the farmers of the United States have been and are subjected is resulting in conditions that merit most serious consideration. Farms have been run much after the manner of a one hundred horse power engine forced to develop a power of 150 horses. Hosts of farmers have been so pushed and crowded that they found it utterly impossible to fertilize, rotate, or give that rest to the land that is so essential to its continued or increasing fertility. Average yields are growing smaller, not in single years, but measured by decades, evidencing decreasing fertility as the rule of the age. It is useless to attribute this to the ignorance, stupidity or stubbornness of farmers; myriads of them would do differently, but they cannot. The struggle to support the family and pay the mortgage is, in millions of cases, so intense and uncompromising that providence must be and is often solely relied upon to furnish crops when the judgment of the farmer tells him that methods which he believes in but cannot employ should supplement providence. The greed of the age, and the power to gratify it, have not only forced a robbery of that fertility of soil which the ages had stored up for us and our posterity, but it has devastated our forests until climatic conditions are so changed that even the depopulation of now populous areas of great extent is within the realm of the possible if not the probable. The destruction of forests, by the way, which we proudly call "enterprise," without the expenditure of one cent towards their restoration for the benefit of posterity, is a national scandal that should make every American citizen blush with shame.

It is surely time to begin to consider whither we are drifting. It is all well enough to boast of the wealth the nation has accumulated, but if that accumulation represents only the robbery of posterity of its share of fertility, timber and other natural resources and the coining it into dollars for plutocrats' strong boxes, then we had better haul down our "enterprise" flag and raise in its stead the piratical skull and cross bones. It is time to stop bragging and get down to business. We must learn that merely transmuting wealth from one form to another is not producing wealth. If against that rapidly augmenting national wealth we so like to boast of there should be charged the deficit in natural resources, the soil's fertility, the timber supply, exhausted mines, etc., it would at least modify our glorification. The pressure of the times is too great. Cost of production, cost of living, doing, and having our being—a cost that is ultimately paid for by productive industry—must be reduced. In that direction lies relief, and in that direction only.

False Reports.

The Duluth & Winnipeg Denies Stories of a Later and More Serious Conflict of Authority.

Duluth Evening Herald.

Telegrams innumerable have been sent out from Washington (St. Paul) spreading broadcast the report that the Duluth & Wininpeg was being constructed through the Winnebigosish reservation, contrary to orders from Secretary Noble. These telegrams further state that troops have been ordered from Fort Snelling to the scene of operations to stop all work.

There is not the slightest foundation in fact to this story. These telegrams were sent out by parties whose interests are adverse to those of the Duluth & Winnipeg company, and who benefit by any temporary delay in the construction of the line.

"There is no truth whatever in these reports," said a Duluth & Winnipeg official whose attention was called to one of these telegrams. When Secretary Noble ordered us to stop work we did so, and we have not laid any track through the reservation since. We have filed maps and have complied with all other legal requirements, and we expect soon to receive word from the interior department to go ahead with construction."

Price of Wheat.

Editor Western Rural.

Two years ago next September when Hutchinson cornered the wheat market in Chicago, and put the price of wheat up to two dollars per bushel, and many farmers were enabled to actually sell their crops at $1,00 and $1,20 in the local markets, had the farmers been thoroughly organized they could have acted in concert and easily kept the price of wheat at $1,00 and upwards in the local market from that day to this. The millers paid the enhanced price and raised the price of flour accordingly, and no consumer seriously objected to pay the enhanced price of flour. In fact, no consumer of flour ought to object to have the price increased until it becomes a fair equivalent to the products of labor in other lines of industry. Now wheat cannot be raised, one year with another, and sold by the farmers in their local markets for less than one dollar per bushel, except at a loss. Even at that price there is not near that margin of profit that there is in milling manufacturing or the carrying industries. Wheat at the low price of the last seven years has done much to depress farm values, keep farmers in debt and discourage the agricultural outlook. Wheat at $1,00 per bushel in farmer's hands would brighten up and encourage every one of them, and eventually help many out of debt and improve trade in all the rural districts.

Now on account of injury to the growing crop and for various other reassons, speculation is busy enhancing the price of wheat. As members of the various farmer's organization let us all help along the good work, and help to enhance the price by holding back our wheat in our own grainaries until it is there worth one dollar per bushel, and then firmly resolve in our various assemblies to keep the price at one dollar per bushel forever after. When this plan is laid before the farmers I think enough of them can see the point, and will readily co-operate to make it a success. Farmers are not yet all organized, but there is an organization of Patrons of Industry, Alliance, Wheel, Farmer's Mutual Benefit Association, Grange, etc., in almost every community, and a little missionary work in their localities would induce good farmers outside the organization to join in this plan. Let this plan be laid before the various assemblies by the national and State secretaries by means of circulars. etc, and let us see, as farmers of America if we cannot do something for ourselves. But someone will say, how about the surpluss to go to Europe? If the price of wheat in our home markets is one dollar per bushel and upwards, the tendency will be to raise the price in Liverpool and London until they will take our surplus at the same rate.

Years ago wheat went abroad freely when it was worth from one to two dollars a bushel. Should it not do so again, we as farmers can imitate the policy of our manufacturers who make the home markets pay them prices for goods that afford a good margin of profit, and then work their surplus off on foreign markets at whatever price they will bring. Should the home market get too high, the import tax of twenty cents will exclude foreign wheat from our seaboard. It is the only circumstance under which the protection theory will ever benefit the farmer.

SUBSCRIBER.

Northfield News: S. G. Comstock, of Moorhead, has proved himself the right man for the great interests of the Fifth district—the largest in territory in the State. The northern portion of Minnesota, which constitutes the Fifth district, is developing more rapidly, probably, than any other locality of the great northwest. It is largely composed of unsettled and unimproved lands, and its growth within the next few years will be phenomenal. Mr. Comstock has demonstrated his capacity to care for its wide and varied interests, and he, too will be renominated without opposition. This, then will likely comprise the Congressonal ticket for 1890. Whom the Democrats will nominate to contest with this gentleman for the honor of representing Minnesota at Washington yet lies hidden in the future.

Wilson and Democracy.

Mankato Daily Free Press.

The statement made last week by the Mankato Review that Judge Wilson was defeated for congress by Mr. Dunnell in 1888 by the lavish use of money (the exact amount is placed at $28,000) furnished by eastern manufacturers, was only published to endorse Wilson's cowardly back-down after he had given a positive pledge to make the fight against Dunnell this fall, and to pave the way for his candidacy for the gubernatorial nomination. The Winona Republican, published at Wilson's home city, characterizes the Review screed as the "baldest fiction of the age." The Republican then goes on to say:

"Judge Wilson's defeat was not accomplished by the free use of money furnished by Eastern manufacturers, but by the voluntary action of the Republican voters of the First district, who needed no incentive thereto other than their intelligent devotion to the principles of the party of their chois. So fully does the Republicans believe this that it challenges proof of the assertion that $28,000, or $10,000, or even half of the latter sum, was furnished by the manufacturers of the East and paid out in this district to bring about Judge Wilson's defeat. The First district gave 4,500 majority for Harrison, a pronounced protectonist. It gave Merriam, who was running for governor on a protection platform, a majority of about 4,000. Judge Wilson, for reasons not necessary to explain, but it may be said reasons unconnected with the question of the tariff, came within 1,800 votes of defeating Mr. Dunnell, his competitor. Thus it will be seen that, if $28,000 was paid out to buy votes, it could not have been the Republicans who expended the money. There was no necessity for it. They were absolutely in the majority. All the known facts connected with the contest suggest that if votes were purchased, they were so purchased in the interest of the Democratic Congressional nominee and not the Republican."

The Review having made the charge, with apparent assurance of its correctness, that $28,000 was corruptly used to influence voters against Wilson, has but one honorable course left open, and that is to produce the proof. If it cannot do this the editor will stand selfconvicted of falsifying. In the first place Wilson is not the angelic creature the Review and some other Democratic organs would have the public believe. He is not of the people, and his tastes, habits and social relations through life have not been such as to seriously impress the so called "common herd" with the idea that he has anything in common with them. While he has an oily tongue, suave manners and polished oratory, his business and political career has been identified with railroad corporations and monopolistic enterprises. He draws a princely sum annually, and has for several years, as the paid attorney of the C. & N. W. R. R. company, and the "manly" manner in which he has fought against the recovery to the state of the unearned railroad lands lying along the Winona & St. Peter railroad is sufficint evidence, if such were wanting, to show how much feeling Wilson has in the people when his corporation interests are endangered.

The withdrawal of Mr. Wilson from Congressional field and his entry in the race for Governor, is the consummation of a deep-laid scheme by a few ring leaders of the Minnesota Democracy to shelve Hon. Daniel Buck, of Mankato. Had Wilson carried out his agreement and stood for the Frst district nomination, Mr. Buck's nomination for Governor could not have been prevented. The result of the coming Democratic state convention can as well be told to-day as the day after the nominations, so far as the head of the ticket is concerned. Wilson will be nominated. Nothing was ever more plainly evident, and no man of his standing in the state has been more shamefully confidenced by scheming, unprincipled politicians than has Mr. Buck. He has been patted on the back by pretended friends that "harmony" within the party might be restored, and when the time comes he will be ruthlessly thrown aside. Indeed it is already hinted through certain Democratic papers that he will be tendered second place on the ticket. Such a proposition is an insult to Mr. Buck's intelligence and unless we mistake the make-up of the man he would scorn to accept the place and hold in contempt the man who would deign to offer it to him. While the Free Press has no interest in Democratic methods it dislikes mightily to see one of Mankato's honored citizens, who ranks high with the people—common people if you please—made the butt for such questionable political manpulations as are now going on.

The letter of Mr. Buck, made public through the Press yesterday, was manly, considerate and temperate, yet pointed and unmistakable as to its meaning. The withdawal of his name as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, is significant. It is full of serious meaning to the party of which he is so honorable and honored a member. "I stood by the party," says Mr. Buck, "in its darkest hours of adversity, and shall rejoice when success shall crown our efforts. I do hope, however, that the candidate nominated will be one whose acts and impulses have been and will continue to be in full sympathy with the great agricultural and industrial interests of the country."

What does this mean, pray if not that Mr. Buck sounds a warning to the members of his party that the nomination of Judge Wilson will be in direct hostility to the "great agricultural and industrial interests of the country," and that his selection means an inglorious defeat? The fact is well established that Mr. Buck has been forced off of the ticket though the machination of bossim and railroad influences. It is no secret to such as these that he could not be manipulated. He has too much regard for his good name and is too deeply allied with the interests of the masses to be made the suppliant tool of corporations and scheming politicians. In a word, he is too much of what one would term "one of the people" to be of use in the governor's chair to those who turn the machine crank and do the "funny work" for the party.

Wilson is a man patterned after the original Democratic design. He is one of the leaders of the ring. He is a man who knows no honesty in politics. He is a prominent autocrat and aristocrat. He is the paid attorney of a great railroad corporation and as such, if made governor of Minnesota, would be as clay in the hands of the potter to do the bidding of railroad magnates. He is one of those select individuals who rides in the private car of the Superintendent and concocts schemes to gull shippers and all connected with them. This is the kind of a candidate that the Democrats are going to foist upon the people of this state. There is no doubt about it, and the faithful might as well prepare themselves for the inevitable. How do the farmers and laboring men like the deal? It is nothing short of a direct defiance of the wishes of the rank and file of the Minnesota Democracy, and unless we mistake the composition of the rural members of the party they will set their seal of condemnation upon such bossism when the time comes.

The Democratic organs had best desist from crying "banker candidate," "boodle methods," etc., when they have on their hands a railroad attorney for Governor who has nothing in common with the mass of the people. Glass houses won't stand much stoning.

—OFFICE ON ROBERT STREET.—

CROOKSTON, MINN

Elmer E. Adams, editor of the Fergus Falls Journal, was married on August 28th, to Miss Jennie Cowles, a young lady teacher of Fergus Falls. THE JOURNAL extends congratulations.

The Chronicle shows commendable enterprise by taking the associated press dispatches. The experiment necessitates added expenses that will require a far greater patronage than before to sustain, but the Palmers seem to have lots of sand and THE JOURNAL wishes its neighbor all the success it deserves.

"Down Wint McGinty."

In the Times forecast of probable candidates on the democratic ticket, only six of the nine offices are to be filled by citizens of Irish descent, but not a word said about Gilhooley or McGinty. Why this omission?

Mr. Comstock's friends will be disappointed to learn that he will not be at Little Falls to-day. He will stay in Washington to watch our interests in the river and harbor bill that is liable to pass at any time. Congressman Snider who has just arrived from Washington gives the opinion that Congress will not adjourn until Oct. 10th. Mr. Comstock will be right on deck, faithfully guarding our interests. That is the kind of a Congressman to have.

Gives the Snap Away.

The Times, in its last issue, says:

"The Farmers' Alliance has a strong ticket in the field, which by dividing the vote, will tend to increase the chances for Democratic success."

So this is the true inwardness of the great interest the democratic party of Polk County has manifested in the alliance—a means to install democrats into office! That's just what THE JOURNAL has said, time and again, but that party has constantly denied the charge. If the democrats were sincere in their professions of interest in the welfare of the alliance, they would prove it by endorsing Owen for Governor—but they will not. Railroad authorities have ordered the nomination of railroad attorney Wilson, and Wilson will be nominated. The Times gives the snap away in this county by the statement that the big alliance vote in this county will enable the hungry dems to rake in the fat chestnuts, and urges the "trooly loil" to take heart, brace up and proceed to rake. The Times labors under the pleasing delusion that democratic farmers' alliance men are all fools, who will vote the democratic ticket at the crack of the party lash, while all the republican farmers will stick to the alliance party, thus the dems will win another "glor'us vict'ry!" Great head, but doomed to a bitter disappointment, we opine. According to the Times idea the only good thing to be accomplished is "the offices!" Thus it diagnoses the great object of the Farmers' Alliance—a struggle for office. For this the Times has urged the alliance to stick to their text, because this would enable the democrats, for once in their lives, to gobble up the offices! A consummation greatly to be desired, according to the Times' idea.

Railroad Methods.

Farm, Stock and Home.

Poor's Manual of the railroads of the United States for 1889, recently issued, places their capitalization at $9,680,952,249, or almost $60,000 a mile. The average interest paid on this enormous sum was a fraction over 6 per cent, and the average net earnings reported were 3.3 per cent, or a total income of about 10 per cent. This does not look large on its face, but when taken in connection with the fact that apparent incomes are purposely reduced by enormous salaries paid to heavy stockholders who are by courtesy called officers, but have no duties to perform except drawing their salaries, the returns surely seem ample, even if the capitalization that draws the income is real or honest. But the capitalization is not real, is not honest. Even Mr. Poor, a very conservative authority, admits that at least half the capital is fictitious. Ten per cent on this mythical value amounts to the snug little sum of $480,000,000, a fine tribute, indeed, for our productive industries to annually pay to a lot of cunning rogues, for it requires no talent but the cunning of common rascals to create fraudulent values, and no machinery but monopoly's unholy ways to make such values tribute-drawers from productive industry.

If the amount of money paid to fictitious railroad values alone could be devoted to the buying of articles of necessity and comfort in the homes of our wealthy producers now quickly would the good angel of prosperity smile upon and hover over this country! Many of our farmers honestly believe that if the government would loan them money—$1,000,000,000 at the most—at a low rate of interest, all of labor's woes would disappear at once; if that is true, how much more beneficial would be exemption from paying nearly that sum every two years to a small handful of plutocrats! Thirty years ago the cry of honest, earnest, christian men was: "Human slavery is wrong, and, by the Eternal, it has got to go!" Now, myriads of the same kind of men are crying out, over-capitalization of corporate monopolies is wrong, and, by the Eternal, it has got to go! To this work, patriotism, justice, real republicanism, love of country, home and family must devote themselves. In silently enduring the slavery of over-capitalization the American people confess that they are not capable of self government.

Enterprise vs. Robbery.

Farm Stock and Home.

As the seasons come and go it becomes more and more apparent that the pressure to which the farmers of the United States have been and are subjected is resulting in conditions that merit most serious consideration. Farms have been run much after the manner of a one hundred horse power engine forced to develop a power of 150 horses. Hosts of farmers have been so pushed and crowded that they found it utterly impossible to fertilize, rotate, or give that rest to the land that is so essential to its continued or increasing fertility. Average yields are growing smaller, not in single years, but measured by decades, evidencing decreasing fertility as the rule of the age. It is useless to attribute this to the ignorance, stupidity or stubborness of farmers; myriads of them would do differently, but they cannot. The struggle to support the family and pay the mortgage is, in millions of cases, so intense and uncompromising that providence must be and is often solely relied upon to furnish crops when the judgment of the farmer tells him that methods which he believes in but cannot employ should supplement providence. The greed of the age, and the power to gratify it, have not only forced a robbery of that fertility of soil which the ages had stored up for us and our posterity, but it has devastated our forests until climatic conditions are so changed that even the depopulation of now populous areas of great extent is within the realm of the possible if not the probable. The destruction of forests, by the way, which we proudly call "enterprise," without the expenditure of one cent towards their restoration for the benefit of posterity, is a national scandal that should make every American citizen blush with shame.

It is surely time to begin to consider whither we are drifting. It is all well enough to boast of the wealth the nation has accumulated, but if that accumulation represents only the robbery of posterity of its share of fertility, timber and other natural resources and the coining it into dollars for plutocrats' strong boxes, then we had better haul down our "enterprise" flag and raise in its stead the piratical skull and cross bones. It is time to stop bragging and get down to business. We must learn that merely transmuting wealth from one form to another is not producing wealth. If against that rapidly augmenting national wealth we so like to boast of there should be charged the deficit in natural resources, the soil's fertility, the timber supply, exhausted mines, etc., it would at least modify our glorification. The pressure of the times is too great. Cost of production, cost of living, doing, and having our being—a cost that is ultimately paid for by productive industry—must be reduced. In that direction lies relief, and in that direction only.

False Reports.

The Duluth & Winnipeg Denies Stories of a Later and More Serious Conflict of Authority.

Duluth Evening Herald.

Telegrams innumerable have been sent out from Washington (St. Paul) spreading broadcast the report that the Duluth & Wininpeg was being constructed through the Winnebigosish reservation, contrary to orders from Secretary Noble. These telegrams further state that troops have been ordered from Fort Snelling to the scene of operations to stop all work.

There is not the slightest foundation in fact to this story. These telegrams were sent out by parties whose interests are adverse to those of the Duluth & Winnipeg company, and who benefit by any temporary delay in the construction of the line.

"There is no truth whatever in these reports," said a Duluth & Winnipeg official whose attention was called to one of these telegrams. "When Secretary Noble ordered us to stop work we did so, and we have not laid any track through the reservation since. We have filed maps and have complied with all other legal requirements, and we expect soon to receive word from the interior department to go ahead with construction.

Price of Wheat.

Editor Western Rural:

Two years ago next September when Hutchinson cornered the wheat market in Chicago, and put the price of wheat up to two dollars per bushel, and many farmers were enabled to actually sell their crops at $1,00 and $1,20 in the local markets, had the farmers been thoroughly organized they could have acted in concert and easily kept the price of wheat at $1,00 and upwards in the local market from that day to this. The millers paid the enhanced price and raised the price of flour accordingly, and no consumer seriously objected to pay the enhanced price of flour. In fact, no consumer of flour ought to object to have the price increased until it becomes a fair equivalent to the products of labor in other lines of industry. Now wheat cannot be raised, one year with another, and sold by the farmers in their local markets for less than one dollar per bushel, except at a loss. Even at that price, there is not near that margin of profit that there is in milling manufacturing or the carrying industries. Wheat at the low price of the last seven years has done much to depress farm values, keep farmers in debt and discourage the agricultural outlook. Wheat at $1,00 per bushel in farmer's hands would brighten up and encourage every one of them; and eventually help many out of debt and improve trade in all the rural districts.

Now on account of injury to the growing crop and for various other reassons, speculation is busy enhancing the price of wheat. As members of the various farmer's organization let us all help along the good work, and help to enhance the price by holding back our wheat in our own grainaries until it is there worth one dollar per bushel, and then firmly resolve in our various assemblies to keep the price at one dollar per bushel forever after. When this plan is laid before the farmers I think enough of them can see the point, and will readily co-operate to make it a success. Farmers are not yet all organized, but there is an organization of Patrons of Industry, Alliance, Wheel, Farmer's Mutual Benefit Association, Grange, etc., in almost every community, and a little missionary work in their localities would induce good farmers outside the organization to join in this plan. Let this plan be laid before the various assemblies by the national and State secretaries by means of circulars, etc., and let us see, as farmers of America if we cannot do something for ourselves. But someone will say, how about the surpluss to go to Europe? If the price of wheat in our home markets is one dollar per bushel and upwards, the tendency will be to raise the price in Liverpool and London until they will take our surplus at the same rate.

Years ago wheat went abroad freely when it was worth from one to two dollars a bushel. Should it not do so again, we as farmers can imitate the policy of our manufacturers who make the home markets pay them prices for goods that afford a good margin of profit, and then work their surplus off on foreign markets at whatever price they will bring. Should the home market get too high, the import tax of twenty cents will exclude foreign wheat from our seaboard. It is the only circumstance under which the protection theory will ever benefit the farmer.

SUBSCRIBER.

Northfield News: S. G. Comstock, of Moorhead, has proved himself the right man for the great interests of the Fifth district—the largest in territory in the State. The northern portion of Minnesota, which constitutes the Fifth district, is developing more rapidly, probably, than any other locality of the great northwest. It is largely composed of unsettled and unimproved lands, and its growth within the next few years will be phenomenal. Mr. Comstock has demonstrated his capacity to care for its wide and varied interests, and he, too will be renominated without opposition. This, then will likely comprise the Congressional ticket for 1890. Whom the Democrats will nominate to contest with this gentleman for the honor of representing Minnesota at Washington yet lies hidden in the future.

Wilson and Democracy.

Mankato Daily Free Press.

The statement made last week by the Mankato Review that Judge Wilson was defeated for congress by Mr. Dunnell in 1888 by the lavish use of money (the exact amount is placed at $28,000) furnished by eastern manufacturers, was only published to endorse Wilson's cowardly back-down after he had given a positive pledge to make the fight against Dunnell this fall, and to pave the way for his candidacy for the gubernatorial nomination. The Winona Republican, published at Wilson's home city, characterizes the Review screed as the "baldest fiction of the age." The Republican then goes on to say:

"Judge Wilson's defeat was not accomplished by the free use of money furnished by Eastern manufacturers, but by the voluntary action of the Republican voters of the First district, who needed no incentive thereto other than their intellegent devotion to the principles of the party of their chois. So fully does the Republicans believe this that it challenges proof of the assertion that $28,000, or $10,000, or even half of the latter sum, was furnished by the manufacturers of the East and paid out in this district to bring about Judge Wilson's defeat. The First district gave 4,500 majority for Harrison, a pronounced protectonist. It gave Merriam, who was running for governor on a protection platform, a majority of about 4,000. Judge Wilson, for reasons not necessary to explain, but it may be said reasons unconnected with the question of the tariff, came within 1,800 votes of defeating Mr. Dunnell, his competitor. Thus it will be seen that if $28,000 was paid out to buy votes, it could not have been the Republicans who expended the money. There was no necessity for it. They were absolutely in the majority. All the known facts connected with the contest suggest that if votes were purchased, they were so purchased in the interest of the Democratic Congressional nominee and not the Republican."

The Review having made the charge, with apparent assurance of its correctness, that $28,000 was corruptly used to influence voters against Wilson, has but one honorable course left open, and that is to produce the proof. If it cannot do this the editor will stand selfconvicted of falsifying. In the first place Wilson is not the angelic creature the Review and some other Democratic organs would have the public believe. He is not of the people, and his tastes, habits and social relations through life have not been such as to seriously impress the so called "common herd" with the idea that he has anything in common with them. While he has an oily tongue, suave manners and polished oratory, his business and political career has been identified with railroad corporations and monopolistic enterprises. He draws a princely sum annually, and has for several years, as the paid attorney of the C. & N. W. R. R. company, and the "manly" manner in which he has fought against the recovery to the state of the unearned railroad lands lying along the Winona & St. Peter railroad is sufficint evidence, if such were wanting, to show how much feeling Wilson has in the people when his corporation interests are endangered.

The withdrawal of Mr. Wilson from Congressional field and his entry in the race for Governor, is the consummation of a deep-laid scheme by a few ring leaders of the Minnesota Democracy to shelve Hon. Daniel Buck, of Mankato. Had Wilson carried out his agreement and stood for the First district nomination, Mr. Buck's nomination for Governor could not have been prevented. The result of the coming Democratic state convention can as well be told to-day as the day after the nominations, so far as the head of the ticket is concerned. Wilson will be nominated. Nothing was ever more plainly evident, and no man of his standing in the state has been more shamefully confidenced by scheming, unprincipled politicians than has Mr. Buck. He has been patted on the back by pretended friends that "harmony" within the party might be restored, and when the time comes he will be ruthlessly thrown aside. Indeed it is already hinted through certain Democratic papers that he will be tendered second place on the ticket. Such a proposition is an insult to Mr. Buck's intelligence and unless we mistake the make-up of the man he would scorn to accept the place and hold in contempt the man who would deign to offer it to him. While the Free Press has no interest in Democratic methods it dislikes mightily to see one of Mankato's honored citizens, who ranks high with the people—common people if you please—made the butt for such questionable political manpulations as are now going on.

The letter of Mr. Buck, made public through the Press yesterday, was manly, considerate and temperate, yet pointed and unmistakable as to its meaning. The withdawal of his name as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, is significant. It is full of serious meaning to the party of which he is so honorable and honored a member. "I stood by the party," says Mr. Buck, "in its darkest hours of adversity, and shall rejoice when success shall crown our efforts. I do hope, however, that the candidate nominated will be one whose acts and impulses have been and will continue to be in full sympathy with the great agricultural and industrial interests of the country."

What does this mean, pray if not that Mr. Buck sounds a warning to the members of his party that the nomination of Judge Wilson will be in direct hostility to the "great agricultural and industrial interests of the country," and that his selection means an inglorious defeat? The fact is well established that Mr. Buck has been forced off of the ticket though the machination of bossim and railroad influences. It is no secret to such as these that he could not be manipulated. He has too much regard for his good name and is too deeply allied with the interests of the masses to be made the suppliant tool of corporations and scheming politicians. In a word, he is too much of what one would term "one of the people" to be of use in the governor's chair to those who turn the machine crank and do the "funny work" for the party.

Wilson is a man patterned after the original Democratic design. He is one of the leaders of the ring. He is a man who knows no honesty in politics. He is a prominent autocrat and aristocrat. He is the paid attorney of a great railroad corporation and as such, if made governor of Minnesota, would be as clay in the hands of the potter to do the bidding of railroad magnates. He is one of those select individuals who rides in the private car of the Superintendent and concocts schemes to gull shippers and all connected with them. This is the kind of a candidate that the Democrats are going to foist upon the people of this state. There is no doubt about it, and the faithful might as well prepare themselves for the inevitable. How do the farmers and laboring men like the deal? It is nothing short of a direct defiance of the wishes of the rank and file of the Minnesota Democracy, and unless we mistake the composition of the rural members of the party they will set their seal of condemnation upon such bossism when the time comes.

The Democratic organs had best desist from crying "banker candidate," "boodle methods," etc., when they have on their hands a railroad attorney for Governor who has nothing in common with the mass of the people. Glass houses won't stand much stoning.

The Cosmopolitan.

The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest prices to novelists, scientists statemen, soldiers, and even kings and princes, for the best they can furnish in the literary line. The well-edited magazine becomes an educating influence in the family circle, whose importance cannot be over-estimated. The children, as they grow up, are attracted by its illustrations, and so come in time to have a taste for reading. There is always something that is new, something that is strange, something that is interesting; and we consider that we are doing our readers a positive benefit if we are instrumental in placing such a publication within their reach. The special arrangement which we have made with the Cosmopolitan presents very unusual inducements. That magazine, although only in the tenth month under its new management, is already recognized as one of the most interesting publications of the day. It is seeking subscribers everywhere and obtaining them. The proprietors believe that the Cosmopolitan has only to be examined to secure a permanent subscriber. That is why we are enabled to make, if the offer is accepted before January next, such a very low rate, by which our readers can obtain the Cosmopolitan for little more than the cost of this journal alone. Just think of what the combination means! You obtain your own home journal at about the regular price, and have thrown in a magazine which gives you, in a year 1536 pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including over 1300 pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution. Will it not pay you to send a subscription to this office for the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, and Cosmopolitan immediately? Remember, only $3—for the two.

HOME SEEKERS EXCURSIONS.

The attention of our readers is called to the low round trip excursions on the Great Northern Railway, Sept. 9th Sept. 23d and Oct. 14th. Persons who have friends in the East who have written about coming or ever expressed a desire to visit this country, should be informed of this chance. Tickets can be had at all principal offices of eastern, central and southern lines, connecting with the Great Northern at St. Paul, Minneapolis, West Superior or Duluth. Ask your eastern friends to call and see their nearest ticket agent, or write to F. I. Whitney, G. P. & T. A., Great Northern Railway, St. Paul. Let us all unite in an effort for new growth and development.

Exposition and State Fair Excursions.

The Northern Pacific Railroad Company will sell Aug. 27th and 28th, Sept. 2d, 4th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 16th, 18th, 23rd, 25th, and 30th and Oct. 2d, round trip tickets Crookston to Minneapolis and return, including admission ticket to the exposition, at the rate of $9.02. Tickets good until midnight of first Monday following date of sale. Excursion tickets to the Minnesota State Fair will be on sale Sept. 8th to 15th inclusive, good returning until Sept. 15th at rate of $9.27 for the round trip, including admission ticket to the fair grounds.

Short Crop.

Prairie Farmer: There is no doubt but the cereal grains generally will be short this year. In bushels the indications now are that wheat will not turn out much over 400,000,000 bushels; corn is estimated now at 1,600,000,000 bushels and oats 570,000,000 bushels. For the last two years the averages have been 450,000,000 bushels of wheat, 1,700,000,000 of corn, and 584,000,000 bushels of oats. The increase of population from 1880 to 1890, has been about 33 per cent., or one-third. This would give an average of one-sixth more months to feed than in 1880.

On this basis we have a per capita, this year, of 16 per cent, less of oats, and near 20 per cent, less of both wheat and corn, than ought to meet our requirements for food and export. The reserves of wheat and flour in warehouses were stated to be scarcely larger than 50,000,000 bushels at the close of June. Hence this country can spare for export during the current crop year only about half as much as in the twelve months ending six weeks ago, and can only do so by dint of clearing the bins and granaries bare, wich is not likely to be done except under famine conditions; and fully a fourth part of that supposedly possible surplus has already gone out from us or been used at home.

Therefore the present year is a good time to hold wheat. Our market reports from week to week show this. We quote wheat this week, No 2 winter at 99c, and No. 2, spring 98½c, per bushel. Last year it was respectively 76¼ and 76¾. If the reports for the next two weeks show the same falling off; for instance, if frosts should seriously reduce the spring wheat outcome in the Northwest, we may have nothing for export. With this we leave our intelligent readers to figure for themselves until we get further reliable advices as to the present crops.

Moorhead News: A gentleman now stopping at Detroit, Minn., who has been advertising in the newspapers of this vicinity to buy sheep, writes the News as follows: "There are no sheep for sale within a radius of 100 miles of Detroit. There are a number of flocks, but the farmers all realize that the keeping of sheep is profitable and do not want to sell, a very wise move or conclusion on their part as this section of the country is destined to become the stock raising section."

TNE STATE FAIR.

Program of the Coming Festive Week at The Hamline Fair Grounds.

Sept. 8th to 13th, the Dates.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR ENTERTAINMENT OF VISITORS.—GREAT RIDING RACE BY LADIES.—A TREMENDOUS CATTLE SHOW.—THE DAIRY EXHIBIT.—SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE.

He must indeed be hard to please who leaves the coming state fair without a feeling of satisfaction. For monnths the managers have been laboring to secure a large variety of attractions and at the same time make full display in every thing which goes to make up a fair proper. Success has crowned their efforts. Visitors to the fair (which it must be remembered opens on MONDAY Sept. 8, and continues six days, closing on the evening of Saturday, Sept. 13.) will see the finest display of horses, cattle and sheep ever made in Minnesota. Thoroughbred and blooded animals have been entered by hundreds, and new buildings are being erected to acommodate them. The large interest is caused not only by the general interest in the fair and the liberal premiums offerd, but by the rapidly increasing attention to stock-raising throughout the northwest. Minnesota is making a reputation as a stock and dairy state—a fact which is recognized in the coming fair.

The exhibit of dairy products and machinery will be in a large building set apart for the purpose. A refrigerator 40 feet long and 16 feet wide has been built for butter and cheese, and the various displays of machinery will be in operation. Among the interesting displays will be that of the U. S. Butter Extractor, which was on the ground last year making butter from new milk. Farm machinery will fill every foot of space in the building allotted to it. There will be an enormous variety of carriages and wagons, and many new agricultural implements.

Mr. Wyman Elliott, the pioneer horticulturist of Minneapolis, has charge of the fruit and has arranged for an exhibit which will eclipse last year's. The main building is being filled with exhibits by merchants of St. Paul and Minneapolis under the direction of Mr. D. H. Moon. Here, also will be the ladies' department with a rare collection of needle and fancy work. The fair association is giving very liberal premiums in every department this year—some $15,000 in all—and is engaging expert judges who will award prizes on merit only. On the grounds there is every convenience for the accommodation of visitors. Dining and lunch rooms will be maintained with reasonable prices charged. Ladies will find toilet and dressing rooms for their especial use.

The following is an outline of the program of the fair week:

MONDAY, Sept. 8.

All animals must be in their proper places by 10 A. M., and all exhibits must then be in order. The Farmer's Institute will open at 9 A. M. and be in session until 12 o'clock. It will be in charge of Prof. O. C. Gregg, superintendent of the State Farmer's Institute, who will be assisted by an able corps of institute workers. A building is set apart for the institute. In the afternoon three races, viz: Minnesota Breeder's Stake, yearlings foals of 1889; Minnesota Breeder's Stake, two-year-olds; Pacing Breeder's Stake, three-year-olds

TUESDAY, Sept. 9.

CHILDREN'S DAY. All children under 12 years of age will be admitted to the grounds free. The Board of Directors request that children be allowed to take advantage of this opportunity for seeing the fair. The educational value of the sights to be seen will be worth weeks of schooling. There will be special attractions of all kinds for the children. Exhibitors will have souvenirs for them, and everybody will try to make them have a good time. In the afternoon there will be grand chariot races by Prof. and Madam McDonald. These are exact imitations of the famous Roman chariot races, and the contestants appear in Roman costume. Madam McDonald will drive eight high mettled horses attached to one chariot at the highest speed. Next comes "Doc," famous Irish setter dog, who trots in a sulky and is driven by Willie Ketcham, eight years of age. Boy and sulky weight 81 pounds and "Doc" makes his half mile in 1:52. He will trot against four or more ponies. These races will especially interest the children. The regular race program for the afternoon includes Minnesota Breeder's Stakes of three-year-olds, and the three minute and 2:35 class trotting races. Farmer's Institute from 9 to 12 A. M. Judges will examine exhibits.

WEDNESDAY Sept. 10.

MINNEAPOLIS DAY. Morning awarding of premiums and farmer's institute from 9 to 12. Afternoon, the great long distance riding race on thoroughbred horses, by Jennie K. Rush, of Kentucky, and Villa Poole, of North Dakota. The ladies will ride 10 miles, changing horses every mile before the grand stand. This will be the most exciting race ever seen in the northwest. Both ladies are attractive and they are exceedingly skillful horsewomen. It is probable that the wanner will be challenged for a five mile race. There will be two chariot races in the afternoon by Prof. and Mrs. McDonald. The regular races are Minnesota Breeder's Stakes, for stallions and the 2:30 pacing and 2:30 class trotting events.

THURSDAY, Sept. 11th.

MINNESOTA DAY. Morning awarding of premiums and farmer's institute, from 9 to 11 A. M. At 1 P. M. there will be a grand procession befor the grand stand and around the race track of all horses entered for exhibition. This will be in charge of Col. Clarke Chambers, superintendent of the department. Every breed of horses will be represented by the best specimens. It will be a most attractive display. There will also be three races, the Minnesota Breeder's Stakes for four-year-olds, and 2:25 class Minnesota horses, and the 2:20 class trotting races. Special and chariot races have been arranged, and the Irish Setter dog "Doc" will again trot against ponies.

FRIDAY, Sept. 12th.

ST. PAUL DAY. Morning, farmer's institute from 9 to 12. At noon there will be a grand parade before the grand stand of all cattle entered for exhibition. It will be a very interesting sight and will be conducted by C. N. Cosgrove, superintendent of the department. There will be chariot and special races in the afternoon and the 2:37, and 2:27 class trotting and 2:20 pacing of the regular program.

SATURDAY, Sept. 13th

CLOSING DAY. Morning, farmer's institute from 9 to 12. In the afternoon there will be special races and other attractions which will be announced later.

It will be seen from the above program that the time of visitors at the fair will not hang heavy on their hands. For the advantage of all concerned half-fare rates have been made on all railroads.

Mortgage Sale.

WHEREAS, EDWIN P. CAPEN AND MATTIE C. Capen, his wife, of Polk County, State of Minnesota, as mortgagors, did, on the 4th day of August, A. D. 1885, duly execute and deliver to The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London, (Limited) of London, England, their mortgage bearing date of June 20th, A. D. 1885, whereby they mortgaged to said mortgagee the following described lands situated in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: All of fractional Section 3, Township 148, Range 47 west, containing 652 96-100 acres, to secure the payment of the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars, with interest thereon, according to the conditions of one certain promissory note, with interest coupons attached, bearing even date with said mortgage, and made by said mortgagors to said mortgagee, or order, which said mortgage was on the 10th day of August, A. D. 1885, at 1:20 o'clock p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, in book 26 of mortgages, on pages 480 to 483 inclusive; and

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the sum of two hundred dollars, due as interest upon said mortgage on the 1st day of January, A. D. 1890, and on the further sum of ninety-four and 40-100 dollars due as interest thereon on the 20th day of June, A. D. 1890, and the said interest is still unpaid and due; and

Whereas, it was stipulated by and between the parties to said mortgage, that if default should be made in any of the conditions or covenants therein contained on the part of the mortgagors, to be kept and performed, that then and from thenceforth it shall be lawful for the said mortgagee, or its assigns, to consider and declare the whole sum secured thereby as immediately due and payable without notice to said mortgagors, or any other party; and

Whereas, The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London (Limited) has exercised its option to consider and declare, and does hereby consider and declare the whole sum of money secured by said mortgage to be due and payable; and

Whereas, there is now due, and claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of twenty-eight hundred thirty-two and 52-100 dollars, and no proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land therein described, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in said County and State, on the 27th day of September, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the sum due on said mortgage, together with taxes, if any, on said premises, and one hundred dollars attorney's fees therein stipulated to be paid in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Dated August 5th, A. D. 1890.

U. S. LAND OFFICE.
Crookston, Minn., July 17th, 1890.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston, on Oct. 2d, 1890, viz: THOR HALDORSON, Hd. 11,281, for the nw¼ ne¼ e½ nw¼ and lot 2, Sec. 33, Tp. 149, R 43. He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz: Harald Johnson, of Mentor, Polk Co., Minn., Gulbrand Pederson, of Dugdale, Polk Co., Minn., William Marston, Otto Camp, of Mentor, Polk Co., Minn. Any person who desires to protest against the allowance of such proof, or who knows of any substantial reason, under the law and the regulations of the Interior Department, why such proof should not be allowed, will be given an opportunity at the above mentioned time and place to cross-examine the witnesses of said claimant, and to offer evidence in rebuttal of that submitted by claimant.

[14-19] H. H. DICKMANN, Register.

[First publication Aug. 21st, 1890.]

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF POLK—ss. In Probate Court, Special Term, Aug. 14th, 1890.

In the matter of the estate of Arthur Yvernault, deceased.

On receiving and filing the petition of John Cromb, of Crookston, Minnesota, representing, among other things, that Arthur Yvernault, late of this county, on the 19th day of January, A. D. 1890, at Crookston aforesaid, died intestate, and being a resident of this county at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this county, and that the said petitioner is a creditor of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to said John Cromb granted.

It is ordered, that said petition be heard before this court on Tuesday, the 16th day of September, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office in Crookston, in said county.

Ordered further, that notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston, in said county.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post office, whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the payment.
2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made and then collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.
3. In suits for subscriptions, the suit may be instituted where the paper is published.
4. The Courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, while unpaid for, is prima facie evidence of intention to defraud.

The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That no delegate will be admitted to a seat in the county convention unless such delegate resides in the town or precinct which he represents.

The several election precincts are entitled to the following number of delegates, the basis of representation being one delegate for each organized town or precinct, and one additional delegate for every forty votes, or major fraction thereof, cast for the Republican candidate for President in 1888, viz:

LEGISLATIVE CONVENTION.

A Legislative Convention for the district composed of Polk, Norman and Beltrami Counties, will be held at the Court House, in the city of Crookston, on Monday, September 15th, 1890, at 1:30 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following positions, viz:

1 Senator,
3 Representatives.

The several counties will be entitled to delegates as follows: Polk 9, Norman 5, Beltrami 1.

H. E. COOKE, Chairman.
H. H. PHELPS, Secretary.

Booming Crop Reports.

Northwestern Farmer.

Col. Rodgers, of the "Market Record," in Minneapolis, has been quoted freely by certain journals as eminent authority on crop statistics, and the unknowing or unthinking are giving these reports great publicity. Farmer and Breeder denies that the Col. has access to information not perfectly free to every one; or that he can be authority on the wheat crop of the Northwest in the shock, much less before it is cut. These crop statistic makers are now splitting hairs as to whether the crop of Minnesota and the Dakotas shall be ninety or one hundred million bushels. Wheat is worth $1 per bushel in the Dakotas and would probably bring it, were it not for these wholly unreliable crop estimates of Rodgers, who is simply the tool of the wheat buyers; his "Market Record" now reports the flax crop of the country as double that of former years. The flax crop is, as every one knows, a very uncertain quantity, but it is soon to be marketed, see?"

Cannot Make Any Money.

The Western Rural.

When the railroad monopoly, or any part of it wants to show how it is oppressed, it bunches all the railroads of the country together, and shows or tries to show that the capital invested in railroading, that is taking the entire railroading as a whole does not pay. Up to the present time it has not been able to show that the earning of all the roads have not paid a very good per cent profit upon the entire cost of construction and equipment. It may be, however, that it will be able to show it in time. If the boom on railroad construction continues, we may have more roads than the earning will pay a profit upon, but that argues nothing. If people should build railroads when they are not needed, that is their business, and that is what is being done to a considerable extent.

The Railway Age makes the surprising showing that, during the first quarter of the current year, 666 new lines, with an aggregate contemplated mileage of 53,436 miles, have been projected since Jan. 1, and that of these lines, 14.818 miles are under construction or contract, 9,617 are surveyed. The Age remarks: "The mileage proposed in these three months is equivalent to almost one-third of the entire railway mileage of the country now in operation, and yet the projection and inauguration of other lines are still going on at an equally rapid rate, and the prospect is that the roads projected and in various stages of development during 1890 will exceed in aggregate mileage our system." These computations, coming from any other source, would have been pronounced incredible; but from the authority that gives them they must be accepted as approximately accurate.

The length of line proposed to be constructed during the first quarter in the several sections is stated by the Age is to be as follows.

	Miles.
Twelve New England and Eastern Stats	5,094
Five Central Northren States	5,238
Seven Northwestren States	12,092
Five Southwestern States	11,503
Ten Southern States	12,883
Seven Pacific States	5,842

Nearly 13'000 miles to be started on the impulse of the Southern "boom" is a fact too suggestive to be overlooked.

A New York paper says that the inevitable conclusion from these facts is that we are in the midst of a railroad inflation far surpassing, not in numerical measurement but also relative magnitude, anything experienced in the worse excesses of the checkered history of railroad construcion. Adding to the 53,400 miles projected since Jan. 1, the mileage brought over from 1889 as then under construction, it is perhaps a moderate estimate to suppose that there are now 65,000 miles of single track the construction of which is either now in progress or immediately contemplated. Taking the combined capital stock and bonded debt of the road introduced this year as averaging $30,000 per mile, this would represent a new capitalization of $1,950,000,000, And supposing the actual cost to be represented by onehalf that sum, or by the bonds to be issued for construction and equipment (the stock being as usual issued without consideration), it follows that the public will be asked to subscribe close upon $1,000,000,000 of money for these enterprises. This, be it remembered, is principally speculative construction, the building of feeders by old and powerful companies on strictly conservative and economical methods having been in a large measure prudently suspended. This fact greatly aggravates the seriousness of this vast mass of problematical undestakings. Even though the enterprises were in response to a legitimate want and were conducted on a strictly sound financial basis, yet, coming on the heels of three successive years of unprecedented subscription to railroad loans who would for a moment dream that the market could forthwith absorb in addition a sum nearly equal to thrice the amount of the last three years, issue? But apart from this impossibility, when it is considered that these pending demands are to supply ventures which for the most part are devoid of sound financial basis and may be expected to go through the purgation of bankruptcy and "scaling" within a few years, what shall be thought of the dangers of this current phase of speculation.

There has seemed to be reason for hoping that our methods of railroad building had so far improved during last years as to make repetition of the huge swindles of past speculations of this kind impossible; but these current facts too plainly demonstrate that the penchant for rotten financiering had grown with our growth. These manias of railroad speculation are beyond a'l comparison the most serious of all evils that afflict our business or threaten our social structure. They not only inflate trade and cause mischievous diversions of capital from healthy employment and then culminate in destructive panics, but they act as a means of wholesale plunder upon investors and elevate to financial ascendency a class who are neither a benefit nor a credit to any community, but who, nevertheless, succeed in cheating their way into the ranks of a sordid money aristocracy.

Periods like this always prove to be the culmination periods of antecedent terms of prosperity and end in explosion and panic; and these railroad fiansco are the sure precursors of coming trouble. We have not had a serious railroad crisis since 1873; and with such an inflation as is now in progress and with twenty-five millions more population now then we had than and a corresponding expansion of trade. With what sort of commotion might we expect the ninth decade of the century to be consummated? The current symptoms are unmistakable and mean ultimate mischief of no trifling dimensions. It is not to be expected that those who hold the dynamite will care for anything beyond getting themselves out of reach of the explosion; but the contemplated victims stand exposed to unsuspected danger and need to be warned. The extent to which the impending danger may run must depend largely upon the costodians of credit. In all probability the commitments to these new schems have not yet gone so far but that the peril may be arrested if banks and bankers and honorable negotiators will do their part towards dsscouraging all railroad loans and encouraging a strictly conservative and cautious feeling towards, new investments generally. In plainer words, the railroad speculators should be given to understand that there is no monay for them; and those who have got into the meshes of their net should get out as soon as they can. Beyond this and wholesome warnings from the press, we know of no means of averting a steady drifting toward the most serious financial derangement and collapse.

A Forecast of the Future.

Duluth Herald.

Oliver Dalrymple says that the United States have only 40,000,000 bushels of wheat to export this year, as against an average of 133,000,000 bushels per annum for the past ten years, and if the population of this country increases at the present ratio during the next decade the United States will be importing wheat, instead of exporting it.

He bases his opinion on official information disclosing that the world's wheat acreage is not materially increasing, while population is growing in a ratio over production. During the last decade Eastern Europe, including the great exporting countries of Russia, Roumania and Hungary, but has slightly increased its acreage, while Western Europe, embracing the importing countries, has stood still, or declined. Ten years ago the wheat acreage of the United States was about 38,000,000 acres and the year 1890 finds it the same. Says Mr. Dalrymple: "The United States has reached the western limit for profitable wheat production. If the present ratio of increase of population over production continues for ten years, the United States will be changed from a wheat exporting to a wheat importing country. For the last ten years the average wheat crop of this country and the world has approximated twelve bushels per acre. This year Eastern Europe claims only an average wheat crop and admits a serious deficiency in rye, which is her great bread commodity; while Western Europe has a short wheat crop. Reliable statisticans estimate that the crops and reserves of Europe have so much declined that she will require 160,000,000 bushels of wheat from outside exporting countries from the reserves of 1890. As nearly as can be estimated the wheat crop of the the United States for 1890 is about 400,000,000 bushels, from which must come home consumption of 360,000,000 bushels. India and Australia have short crops and the small exporting states of South America are yet to be heard from."

Moorehead News: Hon. Halvor Steenerson, of Crookston, was in the city today. He came up to argue a motion before Judge McConnell, of Fargo, for a new trial in a Traill county seduction case. Mr. Steenerson being interviewed by the editor of News with reference to a statement published last week in the Crookston Times which asserted that a movement had been for some time going forward on the quiet to defeat Mr. Comstock's nomination for congress in the interest of Mr. Steenerson, he says it is all a hoax, that it was concocted in the brain of Editor McKenzie and is all in the imagination. Mr. Steenerson states that the Polk county delegation to Little Falls consisting of eight members were elected some time ago and that they are all a unit for Mr. Comstock.

Educate in the Alliance.

National Economist.

In a republic whatever aids in debauching public sentiment, whether by false report or by recreancy to a trust imposed, may be the means of more injury than the most persistent public enemy. It is an intelligent public sentiment which has in this country supplanted the idea of a monarch; and so long as this public sentiment is really healthy there can be no permanent lapse from true representative government. The only treason which can possibly succeed is that act which so deceives or perverts public opinion as to render the untrammeled exercise of its legitimate power impossible, or which threatens the existence of that power.

The character of the public acts is a gauge marking with tolerable accuracy the condition of sentiment among the people. The representatives who make the laws and the officials charged with their execution, in a people's government, follow the lead of public sentiment in moral advances, because the masses are less under considerations of policy and freer to form and change preconceived opinions than are the officials, and therefore more ready to adopt the truth as it appeals to reason. In the advance only, however, can those who are the elected executives of the people's will be said to be laggards. In all retrograde movements of public morals the representatives of the people are leaders, for the reason that by their very positions they are subject to temptations and considerations of the character that usually produce corrupt administrations and pollute public sentiment. Those elected to representative positions, while owing their exaltation to their standing as exponents of the people's views, and therefore indicating public sentiment, may as a rule be considered as cowards in the march of progress, following in the advance and leading in the retreat.

Such reflections as this naturally occur when great public questions are under discussion, as is the case in this country to-day. It is not intended to convey the idea that all representatives are unreliable, or that the present is an unusual time in its representatives. What has been said is but a natural deduction from the facts of history, and if the result of the influence of ever so few men in position to direct the course of legislation, it is still evidently true. and, as true, greatly to be deplored. Men who declare purity in politics an irridescent dream, and that the decalogue and the golden rule have no recognition in party conduct, are foremost in the retrograde movement, in abject desertion of the standard of the moral forces, driven to the conclusion formed by the leaders of the horde of cowards in flight from the battlefield, that "all is lost." There is behind them a corps of perhaps disordered but brave men who may, for all these fugitives know, be now in process of reformation, and even advancing to a renewed trial of strength, which will be crowned with victory.

To the disciplined soldier the demand of duty is imperative; the position of the battle standard, and not the disorderly cry of the routed cowards, will indicate where that calls. The great battle now imminent is between a just public sentiment, the rightful ruler of a republic, and the debasing power of vast money combinations, and at the front is the awakened intelligence of the people. The genius which must finally decide the issues in favor of the right is the strength derived from education, aided and guided by justice and morality. Till there be wider education it is impossible to foretell whether a wise direction will avail. It has become more evident that greater familiarity with the underlying principles of the Alliance is necessary. Therein lies the hope of the Order, and the pepetuity of its patriotic principles. That the people are in advance of the representatives chosen to make and execute laws is due in great part to the farmers' movement, and on that movement may be laid its responsibility for preserving the alignment of the forces of public sentiment. Education is discipline in the tactics of reform. The entering word to every council of reformers should be, Educate.

Western Rural: Emerson wrote: "The farmer's dollar is heavy. It is no waif to him. He knows how many strokes of his labor it represents. His bones ache with the day's work that earned it. He knows how much land it represents—how much rain, frost and sunshine. He knows that in the dollar he gives you is so much discretion and patience, so much hoeing and threshing. Try to lift his dollar, you must lift all that weight." Right you are; but trusts could lift it easily, even if it weighed a ton.

MINNESOTA
State Normal Schools
—AT—
WINONA, MANKATO, ST. CLOUD AND MOORHEAD.

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the common schools of the State.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments—the Normal Department and the Training department or Model School. The Normal Department embraces:

(a) An Elementary Course, for teachers of rural schools and elementary grades.
(b) An advanced course, for teachers of advanced grades.
(c) A Professional Course, for teachers who have completed the required academic work elsewhere.
(d) A Kindergarten Training Course, (at Winona.

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and colleges, and teachers holding County Superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted without examination. All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of three dollars a year. Provisions are made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished room with board is about $3.00 per week.

The next school year opens Sept. 1st, 1890.

For particulars concerning the several schools send for catalogues to the Presidents as follows:

Alliance Stores.

The Western Rural,

"One of our daily papers says that the efforts of the farmers through their Alliances to obtain supplies at first hands, and thus secure for themselves the profits of middlemen, are characterized by the Grocer's Criterion as a "co-operative craze." The charactization, says this journal, may or may not be just. The presumption is certainly in favor of a business system which has grown up under free conditions and is the outcome of the unrestrained operation of the natural law, which applies in economics as well as elsewhere, of movement along the lines of least resistance. It is a reasonable presumption that we have middlemen, because the interchange of products among producers is effected more economically through their agency than it otherwise could be; that through free competition among the intermediary agents known as middlemen we secure the services of those best fitted to do the business with advantage to all concerned, which is a course of reasoning with which The Rural would take issue.

A presumption, however, is not conclusive, the paper remarks. Vast improvements have been made within a half-century in the agencies and methods of production and transportation, and we are assuredly not warrrnted in asserting dogmatically that no corresponding changes for the better can be made in the methods of exchange. While we accept the presumption in favor of existing methods we may regard with toleration and interest, if not with much hope, the efforts to seek out lines of less resistance in the matter of exchaneg. And we can hardly look with unqualified approval upon determined and systematic opposition to such efforts.

Perhaps such opposition to the Alliance movement is not made. But the representatives of wholesale houses interviewed by the Criterion evidently regard it with no very friendly eye. Not only do they express the opinion that the plan of the Alliance stores selling noods at a pofit of exactly ten per cent, neither more nor less, will fail, but they generally seem disposed to promote their failure. Of course they may properly express their opinion, and it is natural that they should be disposed to favor old customers rather than Alliance stores which they believe will not coutinue to be customers very long. But other things being equal they should treat the Alliance agents with strict impartiality. If the Alliance plan is really an improvement upon the existing business methods it is sure to prevail in spite of the opposition of wholesalers, and the latter will themselves be the sufferers from their opposition.

Advertising the State Fair.

Moorhead News.

Minnesota newspapers are discussing the question whether they should advertise the state fair free of charge. Some take the view that the fair is of public interest and benefit and therefore the newspapers should promote its success by advertising its attractions without charge. Others assume that while it is undoubtedly of public interest and benefit, though operating unequally upon different sections of the state, it is owned, managed and controlled by an association of individuals who run it for their own benefit or for the benefit of the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis and their multiplied interests and of the railroad companies centering therein. Therefore they argue its legitimate expenses ought to be paid for out of its revenues and if advertising is one of the legitimate items of expense it should be paid for with the rest.

It seems to the News that whatever claims the state agricultural society may have upon the public have been met liberally by the appropriations that have been made out of the state treasury. Newspapers are just as much a public necessity as fairs; they use their power and influence freely to promote objects of public importance, but they do not ask for appropriations from the public funds or for charity. They are run as business enterprises and they are compelled to sell their productions in order to secure revenue to meet expenses and pay a profit on the money invested in their establishment.

The newspapers are under no obligations whatever to advertise the state fair free of charge and if they do so it is because of their generosity and good nature or in exchange for favors received, which of course must be of more value than a ticket of admission. The News inquires whether the fair management pays for its poster printing? If so, is it because they consider it of more value than newspaper advertising or for the reason that the proprietors of the establishments which do the work cannot be influenced by such arguments as are brought to bear upon publishers of country newspapers?

Farmers, try A. Sture for bargains.

R. J. Montague was in St. Paul last week.

Sam Furan was down from Dugdale last Sunday.

Dr. Just moves into the McKinnon block this week.

The front to the addition to McKinnon block will be a daisy.

Wheat took an upward turn of two cents on Monday morning.

John and Henry Berthiaume are up from Superior visiting friends.

The doctors report less typhoid fever cases than ever before in the city.

The republican county convention will be held on Friday of this week.

Tuesday was the kind of a day farmers like and they improved it to the utmost.

Henry Peterson left for St. Paul on Monday evening to pick his teeth in front of the Reeong Hotel.

It is said that county surveyor Geo. A. Ralph, has two townships in the Red Lake Reservation to survey.

Less people seem to be attending the State fair than ever before. Cause, too busy threshing and stacking.

Better times ahead for the farmers of Polk County. From this on they will make some money farming.

We are pleased to see that A. Chabot, who has had a severe siege of typhoid fever, is able to be about again.

Attorney Holston was in the city last week after help in his harvest field. Everybody was busy in his own field.

J. P. Marcum is hauling in his wheat to the Valley Mills. It is said that he is getting 16 bushels No. 1 Northern per acre.

Mrs. Geo. O. Buhn, wife of Alderman Buhn, of the first ward, who has been very sick for a fortnight, is recovering slowly.

The democratic convention of last week was decidedly thin in numbers. The farmers don't seem to be "in it" this year.

Brother farmer, when you come to Crookston go to Hack & Gallasch' old stand and see what the old farmer can do for you.

Rather catchy weather for threshing out of the shock. It looks as though stacking this year is the best way to handle wheat.

And now comes the tug of war. Next week will complete the tickets in the field, and then the campaign will be well inaugurated.

The Crookston Water Power and Light Company is putting up new and larger wires to accommodate their increasing business.

Harris & Glenn tackled Hon. H. Steenerson's residence on Tuesday morning, and will move it to Mr. Steenerson's lot on Broadway.

Owing to scarcity of help, many farmers who intended to thresh from the shock are stacking. The sweat in the stack is best for the wheat.

Mrs. I. U. Jennings has returned from her trip to the markets of the world for her fall stock of millinery goods. Look out for her announcement later.

Bjoin block is nearly completed up to the second floor. When completed it will be among the handsomest and most substantial blocks of the city.

Mrs. P. C. Schmidt and Miss Marion left for St. Paul and Minneapolis via the Great Northern road on Tuesday evening. They will be away a week or so.

E. Roberts: I just sold eleven bushels of potatoes for 85 cents per bushel, spot cash. And yet some people persist that "there is no money in farming."

Politicians on our streets this week were noticeable more for their absence than anything else. Out in the fields gathering in the sheaves for next Friday.

Henry Peterson, the handsome and elegant Beau Brummel of Fosston high life, was picking his teeth in front of Crookston's new hotel (that is to be) on Monday.

P. C. Schmidt and H. Steenerson left for Moorhead on Tuesday evening to argue before Judge Mills in the Stone injunction case against the Northern Pacific railroad.

It is funny how many of our politicians are out in the country "looking for a job," from the busy husbandman. The only help farmers are requiring is in the harvest field.

W. R. Earl, representing the Masons' Fraternal Accident Association, was in the city on Tuesday in the interest of that institution. He took several applications for membership.

The N. P. engine ran down to the Ste. Croix elevator, near Fisher, on Tuesday for a carload of wheat. It is whispered that on or about Sept. 25th through trains will run on the cut-off.

A large audience listened to Rev Noyes' sermon on music last Sunday evening. It was a very eloquent discourse and heartily enjoyed.

John C. Welles was up from Edna last week and made THE JOURNAL office a call during our absence. He expressed satisfaction with his crops this year, which is of a very high grade.

Mrs. J. G. McGrew returned last week from a very pleasant visit east and now Bro. McGrew can find a minute or two to notice a fellow on the street. He seems to live in this country once more.

There is a project on foot in Ontario to organize a colony for settlement in Polk County. It is meeting with great success and will result in large accessions to the ranks of Polk County grangers.

Polk County will have about the average yield of potatoes this fall. Good care should be exercised in the care of the surplus that none be frozen during the winter. The potato crop is a gold mine this year.

Farmers, don't sell your hogs to shippers when you can get double of the price by having them cured at the packing house. [f-tf]

If you have a surplus of potatoes this year you have a gold mine to the extent of that surplus. Don't be afraid to keep them awhile. The Valley has its usual good crop of tubers, but there are none to speak of elsewhere.

Never since the boom time in the seventies has land been so cheap in the Valley as it can be had to-day, and probably never again will it be. Now is the time to invest. Every man who catches on now has a bonanza.

E. S. Corser returned to his home in Minneapolis last week, after looking after his interests here. He is of the opinion that the reports of a big wheat yield are erroneous—the yield will not be large but the quality extra.

Best water white kerosene only 15 cents per gallon at A. Holmboe's, Robert street. [14-27]

Will Cleary, who was agent for the M. & N. elevator at Erskine last year, has been promoted. He will take charge of the M. & N. elevator in this city. Will is a good, genial-hearted young fellow and chuck full of business.

A lively runaway on Main street caused a ripple of excitement on Friday of last week. Nobody hurt, but a new stove in the wagon got considerably shaken up. It was completely "stove up," and yet not damaged a particle.

The council, on Tuesday evening, passed a resolution instructing the city attorney to take steps restraining the N. P. from crossing Central avenue until the bridge shall have been built over it according to its agreements with the city.

If you want value for your money in the boot and shoe line call at Holmboe's New goods arriving every week. [14-27]

E. D. Childs made a flying trip to St. Paul last week. He spent a few hours on Thursday on the board in Minneapolis watching the bears pound wheat down. Mr. C. says that wheat will not average more than ten bushels per acre in the Valley.

See new ad. of Prof. J. B. Lanigan in this issue. The Prof. has taught a very successful course in Grand Forks and comes very highly recommended. No need to go to St. Paul for a course as we now have a good commercial college right in our midst.

Big weights and small prices—that's Holmboe's motto. [14-27]

The union temperance service will be held next Sunday evening, Sept. 14th, in the Congregational church, all the English speaking protestant churches uniting. The sermon will be preached by the talented Rev. F. B. Noyes. Be sure to come and hear it.

Cedar shingles do not warp, check or rot at the nail holes. They will las many times as long as pine. For sale by I. U. Jennings. [20-21]

E. C. Davis returned from St. Paul on Saturday morning. While there he took a contract from the Great Northern R. R. for grading and bridge work from Grafton to Cavilier, N. D. Mr. Davis is a hustler from way back and will make the dirt fly when he gets at it.

Rev. W. Barham, a Free Methodist minister, from Wadena County, Minn., will preach on Friday evening, at 8 o'clock in the Norwegian Methodist church on Ash street; also on Saturday and Sunday at hours to be announced later. Services conducted in the English language.

Ladies, your attention is called to the change in the ad. of Mrs. and Miss Bailey. These ladies are just receiving their new fall styles in millinery and invite your attention thereto. They have engaged the services of a fashionable dressmaker from abroad and are better prepared than ever to attend to all work in their line.

R. P. Herrick, of Lee & Herrick, says: You may tell your farmer readers that the Valley Roller Mills will take all the good wheat they can supply us at the top of the market, and we want it right away just as soon as they please. We would like a chance at it anyhow before they sell. Roll it in and get your spot cash on the nail.

"I am going out electioneering with Pat Russel," sang out D. D. Williams to our reporter on Tuesday morning, as with the most pointed horse you ever saw, he drove along Robert street with the smiling Pat in tow. If the farmers, when they see that hoss, don't all surrender at once and promise their support, from sympathy, they are a hard-hearted lot.

D. Robertson, of Argyle, and J. P. Lundin, and Geo. R. Roberts, of Stephen, passed through the city on Wednesday evening of last week en route for Little Falls as delegates to the congressional convention. Mr. Robertson was also going to St. Paul to interview the railroad commissioners in relation to the refusal of the company to furnish cars to shippers.

A delivery team started out bright and early on Tuesday morning, running up Main street to the river, and turning, returned to Herb's corner where it stopped as naturally as though after a load of Herb's new brand of cigars, where you get a prize if you guess the number of people who will visit the World's Expo on the biggest day. For particulars inquire of Herb.

Mine host Mitton, of the Wahpeton Hotel, combined pleasure with business while in the city last week. He organized a hunt for the festive prairie chicken and raked in 50 or 60 or such a matter in a few hours time. Mr. M. is now running the only hotel in Wahpeton and doing a lucrative business. Previous to going there he met with severe losses by fire at Park River, N. D.

P. C. Schmidt went from Moorhead to Duluth on Wednesday evening to assist the firm of White & Reynolds in some important cases before the court in St. Louis County. Mr. White is having serious difficulty with his eyes and Mr. S. will attend to his cases in court for him. We hope that Mr. Schmidt's experience down there will not be the means of his removal from our midst.

Eli Steenerson has just finished his threshing. Had 2,700 bushels of No. 1 Hard wheat on 160 acres, and a fine lot of excellent oats and barley. Levi Myers has over 3,000 bushels of No. 1 Hard wheat. The boys very naturally feel jubilant over their good crops. Eli has built some straw sheds for cattle and will buy up a lot to fatten. Says he must have something to do unless to make farming profitable.

T. M. Nelson was up from Garfield on Monday. He says crops down there are of excellent quality and farmers begin to feel encouraged somewhat. In the political field he says that the farmers vote will be solid for Owen for Governor. Mr. Nelson's father has just been notified of a dower right in the old country which will bring him a big sum of money, and goes below this week to secure evidence that he is the identical man he always was.

Les. McDonald gives glowing accounts of the new world in which he has lived for nearly two years—two years next November. Says the climate is excellent and everybody complains of having good health. As to business, he thinks there is no other place like Tacoma within the range of his knowledge. Says he notes with pleasure many improvements in our city since he left us and he encourages us with the prediction that Crookston is bound to get to the front in a very short time.

"W. L. McDonald, Tacoma, Wash.," is how it reads in the Commercial house register. Now, this all looks innocent enough, and the average newcomer to our city would not know that it means "Les." McDonald, a Crookston old-timer, who has come way back here with the deliberate intention of carrying back to that far off clime one of Crookston's handsome and talented young ladies to "mix" with Tacoma society as Mrs. W. L. McDonald, however. But such is the fact, and protests are vain and use-Les. Nothing remains but to submit to the inevitable and wish the happy couple a long and prosperous life, which THE JOURNAL most heartily does.

The Times does Rev. F. B. Noyes an injustice by saying that he declined the call from the Congregational church in this city "having previously accepted a call from a church in Iowa." Mr. N. was here on trial for three months and could not honorably accept a call elsewhere before this church had acted in the matter. It is true he has a call from an Iowa church and will undoubtedly accept it, but he had not accepted when this church extended him a call. Mr. Noyes is a very talented young man and our people very much regret that he could not see the way clear to accept the call and remain with us. He will bear the best wishes of all who met him here wherever in God's providence he may be called to labor.

Mr. E. Roberts has bought the old Honeywell place, three miles up the river, paying a long figure for these times, but the place is well worth it. This is the place old man Beaupre bought some time ago, afterwards selling to a man in Carman, who borrowed money thereon and died, the place going to the mortgagor. The time of redemption expires this fall and as it probably will not be redeemed, Roberts takes it at the sum for which it was bid in at the sale. He has a good place, with plenty of wood, water convenient, and the best land for crops in the Valley. Previous to his occupancy the place had run down considerably, but as he is a thorough farmer he will soon put in ship shape. Mr. R. is a New-Yorker, who since coming to this county has been renting land, on the look out for a good farm, and now he has secured one of the best in the Valley. He says he has made some money right along every year despite unfavorable circumstances and says he can do far better now that he has a farm of his own, where all the work he puts upon it will count for himself.

Wood and Hay Market Removed.

On Tuesday evening the council ordered the wood and hay market removed from Fletcher to Third and Fourth streets, between Broadway and Main.

Beltrami Pointers.

BELTRAMI, Sept. 8, 1890.

This year the farmers will have no occasion to complain of the treatment they will receive from our wheat buyers. Mr. Beatty, buyer for Thorpe, Stowell & Co., comes here with good recommendations. and from what we know of human nature, should take him to be an honest gentleman. Mr. Budd, buyer for the R. R. Valley Co., is well known and needs no commendation from us. His record is A No. 1.

Byron Herriot, of Pennsylvania, spent Sunday with relatives here.

Banker Mathews, of Ada, spent a few hours in town on Saturday, while on his way from Fertile to Ada.

Gus Linder, who is running the Dykeman farm, was offered $1,000 for what wheat he had on 90 acres. There is money in raising wheat at that price.

All of the farmers are busy, men are scarce and wages high.

Geo. H. Holt, of Crookston, was in town this week.

C. E. Ford, a big real estate dealer of Minneapolis, is here looking after his business at this point.

As Joe. took the train to-night he said "By cripes, I go to Belgium!" Well here's "skoal," Joe. EDNA.

Red Lake Falls Items

From the News.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Davis and son drove to Crookston yesterday.

The bad weather prevented three delegates from this city attending the county convention at Crookston yesterday. It's a nuisance, anyway, not to have rail connection with Caookston.

Frank E. Hunt is steadily improving and will soon have regained his usual good health. Mr. Hunt's illness was of a very seirous nature for a time and if he had not had such early medical attendance might have resulted fatally. His many friends are glad to welcome him back to the ranks of the well.

J. C. Heuler spent most of last week in the southern part of the state and on his return Monday he informed us that he had purchased a flour mill at Red Wing and in the course of a few day's he with his family would make that place their future home. We regret to lose Mr. Heuler as he was an energetic man and exceptionally good citizen. A growing young town needs just such men to help build it up.

Comstock Nominated

Little Falls Transcript.

The unanimous renomination yesterday tendered Congressman Comstock was deserved by the gentleman who has ably and honestly served the interests of the people of the Northern Minnesota in the present congress. He is one of the hardest workers in the house, and his duties are performed consientiously and faithfully. He is in sympathy with the needs of all industries in his district, and recognizes that the farming industries need as careful attention and protection as do the lumbering, iron, manufacturing and transportation interests. The labors of a representative from this district cover an immense scope, and all the varied enterprises here have received careful consideration by Mr. Comstock. He has followed the policy expected of him by the people who nominated and elected him, and the unanimous endorsement in the convention will be followed by an election with an increased majority. Demagogues can make little impression against a man with such a record as Hon, S. G. Comstock has made, and the voters of his district are too intelligent to be deceived into dispensing with the services of such a valuable public servant as our presect congressman.

Duluth Evening Herald: That our congressional district convention at Little Falls today will renominate Mr. Comstock by acclamation is a foregone conclusion, and it is a high and deserved compliment to Mr. Comstock that it should be so. He has made no parade of himself on the floor, but what he has said has been always to the point. He has been content to have the solid merits of his service speak for him without catchpenny devices of horn-blowing. In recommendations for appointments or other details, he may have made mistakes of judgment, but there is no apparent ground for question that he has sought to act with fairness to all concerned and with the proper regard to the interests of the district at large. In pursuing the Sault appropriation and in the other public concerns of interest to the Northwest and this district in particular he has been zealous and efficient, and in matter of special appropriations and district improvements he has left nothing undone which he could be fairly expected to do. In fact, as a first term member, he has made uncommon headway in presenting and carrying throug the requirements of his district, and Duluth should cordially recognize that her local interests have been cared for with a devotion and success which deserve the most hearty acknowledgment. There is every reason for the district to say, well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the trial and reward of a second term.

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more fully shown by the following statement: A, aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his loan for interest	80 00
Total yearly payments	$ 168 44
Total for ten years	1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $184.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

"Keep off my pet corn," as the average democrat says to the tariff plank in the Little Falls republican platform.

As we predicted, railroad attorney Wilson was nominated for governor by the democrats. Kelly and Doran still run the machine.

W. E. McKenzie went into the democratic State convention as a proxy—another Wilson vote, no doubt. It is thus he construes "the interests of the people" he talks so much about—elect a railroad attorney for governor.

The farmers say they have been owin' for everything under the sun they have had in this country and they don't see why they should not be Owen for Governor.

Prof. Thos. Casey has been a faithful and efficient public servant since his appointment, and deserves well of the people. He is honest, efficient, sober and industrious, and should he be nominated and elected he will do credit to the office.

Sugar and twine will be placed on the free list by the tariff bill now before Congress. Our representatives in Congress are not forgetting their constituents. Senator C. K. Davis made a valiant fight for free twine ably seconded by Senator W. D. Washburn.

Last year the wheat grades were altogether too stiff in the beginning, easing off before the close, so that the wheat at first graded anything below 1 Hard was taken readily at 1 Hard. The Board has decided to establish the inflexible rules of last year and pretty soon we may expect to see the edict go forth again, "Give no No. 1 Hard grade in the Valley." And some would like to know "what ails the farmers?"

The Unterrified Ticket.

A small squad of the "trooly loil" (as Nasby used to call the democrats) met in Crookston and nominated the following county ticket:

Sheriff—John Paterson.
Register—M. E. Kirsch.
Treasurer—J. D. Beaudry.
Auditor—Peter Gilley.
Clerk of Court—O. Narveson.
Probate Judge—P. J. Russell.

Surveyor—O. L. Hamery.
Coroner—McEachern.
Court Com'r—W. H. Averill.
County Com'r, 4th Dist.—Chas. Langevin.

"What Do the Farmers Want?" was asked of THE JOURNAL man the other day by a prominent politician. Well, so far as we can make it they want equal rights in the market with other business men. They want as good opportunities to sell their wheat in their home market as the markets of the world affords. They want what their wheat is actually worth, less reasonable carrying and handling charges. They want as much protection for agriculture as other business interests receive. They want a competitive wheat market to sell their wheat in. They want the control of the wheat market taken out of the hands of the few who are now making undue profits, and so regulated as to give the humblest farmer in the land as good a footing as the greatest wheat gambler. In short, they want justice in the markets, that's all, and it is right that they should have it.

About as good an immigration document as can be had is a statement of the yield per acre and the cost of production of wheat. Elsewhere in this issue we reproduce a statement of Mr. Dwight, who owns a big farm in the Red River Valley, near Fargo. Our portion of the Valley is fully as productive if not, in some cases, more so, and all that Mr. Dwight says of the productiveness of Dakota soil will apply to ours. We have not as many large farms in Minnesota as there are in Dakota, and consider ourselves better off from that fact. Our land, with proper cultivation, will readily produce from 20 to 30 bushels of extra No. 1 Hard wheat in ordinary seasons, and, according to Mr. Dwight's statement, there is more money in wheat raising here than in central New York. We have moreover a country as well adapted to stock-raising as any country under the sun, and now is the time for investment, as property is now lower than it ever will be again. From present appearances next spring will see a larger immigration to this country than before in many years.

Kick?

Well, we should remark! In the storm of indignation aroused by the excessive freights caused by watered stock, people have almost lost entire sight of impositions they suffer through the unjust charges of the express companies. This week THE JOURNAL received a little 2x6 package from St. Paul via American Express Co., the charges on which were the goods having cost originally $1.15. The only consolation we received from our gentle protest was the statement that the other express companies would have charged just as much. Now, that is extremely consoling, when a fellow has to pay four prices for such service, to be told that the other fellow is just as grasping. We think this express business a fertile field for investigation.

HOW THEY DO IT.

How St. Paul Papers Help the Farmers.

In its issue of Thursday morning, September 4th, the Pioneer Press congratulated the dwellers of the Red River Valley on a yield of about 25 bushels per acre, giving that figure as the average yield. On those figures the bears on the board of trade had everything their own way, and prices looked sick. Mr. E. D. Childs was sitting in the lobby of the Merchants Hotel, about 11 o'clock on that day, with a friend, talking about the injustice to farmers of such false statements, when a Dispatch reporter happened to hear a few of his remarks and requested him to give his views on the situation for the benefit of Dispatch readers. Mr. Childs replied that he would be glad to do so if the Dispatch would print it as he said it, but they will not do it, you know. The reporter assured him that he would write it up just as Mr. C. dictated and turn it in, and with this assurance Mr. Childs consented to be interviewed. The following is the interview as it appeared in the Dispatch of Thursday afternoon:

It is a great mistake to state that there are good crops in the Northwest. Throughout the Red River Valley on the Minnesota side the crop will not average more than ten bushels per acre. I was at the board of trade this morning and I found there was a determined effort to bear the prices. Here is the basis of all this agitation that leads to the alliance movement. The farmers want to receive fair prices for their products, and give them that—they want no more. A week ago December wheat was selling at $1.07 and to-day it was run down to 98¾ cents. I read in a morning paper to-day that crops were exceedingly heavy in the Northwest. Wheat was turning out twenty-five bushels to the acre. That is not so. There is not one field of any great extent that will yield that amount.

In the Duluth Evening Herald of the 5th, appears the following:

A member of the large wheat firm of E. D. Childs & Co., Mr. Childs being a member of the Duluth & Winnipeg directory, who is in the city to-day, states that the result of the recent crop in Polk County is very discouraging. Polk is the great wheat county of northern Minnesota and has more than once marketed 4,000,000 bushels on a crop. "On one piece of land, a section," said this gentleman, "we expected to get 20 bushels, nobody estimated less, but the threshers gave us a return of only 14. On another piece where we looked for 20 again, it turned out nine. This result is general in Polk County lands south of Red Lake River; north of that stream the soil is of a character which will stand drouth better, so the crop will be somewhat larger."

"It is a mistake to state," continued that gentleman, "that there are good crops in the Northwest. Throughout the Red River Valley on the Minnesota side the crop will not average more than ten bushels per acre. I was at the Minneapolis board of trade yesterday and I found there was a determined effort to bear prices. Here is the basis of all this agitation that leads to the alliance movement. The farmers want to receive fair prices for their products, and give them that, they want no more. A week ago December wheat was selling at $1.07, and it is now down to 98¾ cents. I read in the papers that crops are exceedingly heavy in the Northwest, that wheat is turning out twenty-five bushels to the acre. That is not so. There is not one field of any great extent that will yield that amount."

As Mr. Childs was not in Duluth on the above date, and as the Dispatch reporter was the only one who interviewed him, it seems that the Dispatch reporter must have sent his report to the Herald also, as it is nearest to what Mr. C. did say. The Dispatch so garbles it as to destroy its force, and even the Herald did not make it as strong as told by Mr. Childs to the reporter, which shows clearly which side of the fence the great dailies are on. That Pioneer Press estimate will be used as the basis for wheat prices until the fact that the Valley has only ten bushels per acre becomes too apparent to be successfully denied, by which time many a poor farmer will have been robbed of his hard earnings for the season.

Booming.

THE JOURNAL predicts that the time for which the Polk County farmer has toiled and waited for so long is at hand, and very soon he will see his farm command in the market what it is really worth. A farm that will produce from 25 to 30 bushels of wheat to the acre, as our land will with proper cultivation, is worth at least $25 per acre to farm, and could our farmers have secured a competitive wheat market, our lands would have been selling at such figures, instead of from $5 to $10. Elevator stock is gilt-edged and the elevators only handle the wheat. Mill property is gilt-edged and the mills only grind the wheat, but the farm that produces the wheat has had no value in the market, because of the grip speculators have had on the market, which keeps out competition. But we find this year that there is a strong feeling in favor of establishing a competitive market, and also that the Valley has the best crop of any wheat producing country, all of which will tend to benefit the agricultural interests of the country largely. Again, THE JOURNAL is receiving calls for extra copies every week, more than for several years before, showing that outsiders are becoming interested in this country and beginning to look into its possibilities, and we know of one colony of eastern farmers, consisting of a dozen or more families, who are making arrangements to come here in time to make a crop next season. Everything considered, our farmers have every reason to rejoice and be hopeful over the good prospects of the good time coming.

Congressional Convention.

The Republican Congressional convention for the Fifth District, met at Little Falls on Thursday and re-nominated Hon. S. G. Comstock by acclamation. The following resolutions were adopted, viz:

The Republicans of the 5th Congressional District of Minnesota in delegate convention assembled do hereby affirm their faith in and allegiance to the Republican party and its principles, and we believe through it the great economic questions of the day can best be solved.

We commend the wise and prudent administration of President Harrison, and note with pride the conspicuous and able part therein of Minnesota's distinguished son, Hon. Wm. Windom, Secretary of the Treasury.

We heartily endorse the conservative and able administration of Gov. Merriam and pledge our support to the Republican state ticket.

We approve the action of our present congress in the passage of the silver bill whereby nearly $5,000,000 monthly are added to the currency of the country, and we believe its beneficial effects are apparent in the signs of more prosperous times.

We endorse the efforts made at tariff revision and ask that they be continued, on the lines of a reduction of the revenues to the point that only sufficient shall be raised to meet the necessities of the government economically administered, and that duties shall be so adjusted as to bear fairly and equitably on all sections and interests of the country.

We are unqualifiedly in favor of the idea of reciprocity of trade as advocated by the Hon. James G. Blaine. We believe that through it the tariff may most profitably be adjusted, and at the same time furnish a larger market for the products of our farms and factories.

We favor liberal appropriations by Congress for the improvement of the waterways of the Northwest, thereby cheapening transportation and increasing the value of our products.

We warmly endorse and applaud the efforts of our senior senator, Hon. C. K. Davis, in behalf of the Northwestern Waterways, the disability pension bill through which our party has redeemed its pledges to the brave defenders of the nation and for his advanced and courageous utterances on the tariff in his late address in the U. S. Senate.

We acknowledge the distinguished services and heartily approve the course of our member of Congress, the Hon. S. G. Comstock, in his untiring industry and zeal in behalf of the people and the many important interests of this district and state, notably for his persistent and successful efforts in securing the opening for settlement of the Indian Reservations of this state, giving to the people large and fertile tracts of land and large supplies of cheap lumber; for his labors in behalf of silver legislation and his successful efforts, in common with other members of the Northwest, in securing the entire removal of the tariff on sugar and the materials for binding twine, and the reduction of the duty on binding twine from 3½ to 1¼ cents per pound, and in behalf of the great agricultural interests of the Northwest we demand that this product shall be put upon the free list. We affirm our faith in Mr. Comstock's views and sympathies upon the great questions in which we are interested and pledge him the hearty support of this convention and of the loyal Republicans of this district.

Burlingame Declines.

James M. Burlingame, nominee for Attorney General on the alliance and labor ticket, publishes the following letter declining the nomination:

To the State Central Committee of the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union of the State of Minnesota:

Gentleman: First of all, let me thank you for the high honor which you have confered upon me in selecting me, upon a review of my past political opinions and actions, to a place upon your State ticket. It is no mean distinction to be thus honored by the great agricultural and other industrial organanization of the State of Minnesota.

After further consideration, I feel that I must still say, as I said at the meeting of your central committee on the 7th of August, that I cannot accept your nomination for the office of attorney General of the State. As I stated to the committee, I have always been in sympathy and acted in harmony with that element of the Republican party represented by its industrial classes. The demands of these classes, whenever and wherever I have been in a conditon to aid them have received my unqualified support.

The demand now made by the industrial party that the tariff, wherever it existed on the necessaries of life should be reduced or even abolished; that discrimination by transportation companies shall cease, and that reasonable rates shall be established that watered stock shall not receive the rewards of honest toil, and that the pooling of rates shall absolutely be prohibited; that mortgage indebtedness shall be deducted from the tax on realty; that the interest upon money shall be reduced, with many other of the demands in your platform, are such as I shall in any party to which I may belong give most cordial support, and if it should become necessary in order that the friends of those principles might hopefully work for their success, that the Republican party should become disrupted and its several elements gather in support of distinctive principles, I should not for a moment hesitate to ally my hopes and my labors with those who should struggle for the supremacy of the principles above named.

Most of the members of your new organization have, but lately, been either Republicans or Democrats, and as such until recently you have hopefully sought for the establishment of the above principles in your respective parties.

The Alliance and the Labor party and its friends will not, then, I am sure, misjudge me and the thosands of others who, wedded to the above principles, still believes, as the Alliance until now believed, that the reforms that they and we seek will come quicker by adherence to the Republican and Democratic parties which we now help to control and direct, than by a separation from them for the purpose of building a new party to carry out these principles.

With the Republican and Democratic parties existing as they have existed during the twenty-four years that I have been a resident of this State, the time has never been when any measure in the interest of the farming and laboring classes could have been defeated by any legislature which has assembled in the State within that period, if those classes could be convinced of the merits of the measure. Party lines have never been drawn, during that period, to oppose any such measure, and the farming and other industrial classes have had the power in every legislature during that period to enact any such measure if they chose.

If any such measure has failed during that period it has been because the farmers and others naturally allied with them have been opposed to it or divided as to its utility or necessity.

As evidences of this let us recall some of the reforms that have been inaugurated by the legislatures of the State under the control of parties as they have heretofore existed.

Money twenty-four years ago was loaning at 2 per cent. a month or 24 per cent, per annum; now the highest rate of interest allowed by law is reduced to 10 per cent., and contracts for more than that rate are void.

By the legislature of 1885 free and open markets, the freedom of traffic law, the grain law, the law for the distribution of cars and the right to equal and reasonable transportation were secured in such an approved form that the maintenance of these laws is demanded in the present platform of Alliance and Labor party. As to the reform demanded in the Alliance platform one or both of the great existing parties is pledged to the following namely: To secure the reduction of the tariff; to preserve our remaining lands to actual settlers in small quantities; to the improvements of our waterways; to the adoption of an improved system of voting; to the Prohibition of the employment of children under 14 years of age in our mills and factories; to the settlement of strifes by arbitration; and to equal pay for equal work irrespective of sex, while the right of the people to vote on a constitutional amendment has never, to my knowledge, been questioned by any party.

I am unable to discern a demand for a reform in the generally very excellent platform of the new party that has been submitted to the Republican party and its adoption refused.

The reduction of that tariff below what is needed to produce a sufficient revenue for the necessary expenditures of the government is not, and will not be, demanded by any party, nor will any party dare to declare as a part of its political creed the imposition of duties upon importation that will produce more than that amount

The control of the railroads by the government has never been asked by the Republican party, yet it is well known that many eminent Republicans are in favor of such control, and it is not fair to presume that the party will refuse its support to such a demand until it has been tried.

But of all the reforms demanded in the platform of the new party none is more vital to the safety and security of the Republic than that which asks for an improvement in the conduct of our elections. A reform is demanded whereby a hundred voting citizens in one part of the country shall have exactly the same representation in the lower house of Congress that they do in any other portions of the country. Nothing will so quickly burn out the life of Republican institution and leave the system but an empty shell as the honest conviction of any considerable number of our people that they are not equally represented and fairly treated in the law making branch of our government. Upon this point we as a people are peculiarly sensitive. Upon this important question which is now becoming a living, vital issue before the people of the country the Republican party is all right and its opponents all wrong.

Why then should the Republican party be disrupted and the country hurled into the maelstrom of uncertainty, if not of disaster?

In view of past favorable legislation in this State upon all industrial and economic questions, and of the faithful enforcement of this legislation by the present Republican administration of this State, I inquired of my farmer friends and ask them to seriously inquire of themselves, what gain can be hoped for in defeating the republican party this fall and installing in it place another party?

I am a republican, and must remain such as long as I believe that party is the best instrumentality through which to secure the just demands and protect the interests of the farmers and other industrial classes. When the republican party, in my judgment, ceases to be that party, I shall seek a home in another political organization. But it does not seem to me that that time has come.

Gentlemen, you may be right and I wrong, but if I am wrong I am honestly wrong in the belief that the only result of separate political action on the part of the Alliance and the Industrial Union this fall, if any result follows, will be the defeat of the republican party and the success of the democratic party. What will that mean? Aside from the uncertainty involved in the insinuation of a democratic administration in this state it will mean the defeat of some of our representatives in Congress and the possible or probable return of a democratic house of representatives to the next Congress. This will mean the long delay, if not final defeat, of much national legislation of great importance, the prompt enactment of which is now earnestly demanded by a majority of the people. For this, among other reasons, I feel constrained to decline the honor so generously tendered me by your convention.

Very respectfully.
JAMES M. BURLINGAME.

TWO SECTIONS COMPARED.

A Bonanza Farmer Compares the East and Dakota

To The Advantage of the Latter.

Has Tried Central New York and North Dakota and Cheap Lands Make The Difference.

Duluth Evening Herald.

John W. Dwight, who was for several years closely identified with republican politics in New York state, was in Duluth this week, and he gave a good deal of interesting information as to Dakota politics. Mr. Dwight is devoting his entire attention at this time to the development of farming interests in the Northwest. He is at the head of the great Dwight farm in the Red River Valley of North Dakota, a tract of 60,000 acres, one of the largest farms in that state. John Miller, the first governor of North Dakota, is superintendent of this great farm. Mr. Dwight has been operating in Dakota for about ten years and told me that farming in the Northwest is not only profitable, but farmers are at the head of public affairs and shape all legislation. His old experience in politics has enabled him to take practical part in the promotion of such legislation.

Knowing that Mr. Dwight has farms in the East, I asked him how the cost of farming in the two sections compared, when he said: "It is wholly to the advantage of Dakota, if the measure is made the cost of laying down wheat in New York city. If this cost is figured so as to charge 10 per cent on the valuation of Dakota land and only 5 per cent on the valuation of central New York land, there is still an enormous difference in favor of Dakota. Let me give you some approximate figures: Central New York land is worth on an average $80 an acre, 5 per cent on which is $4. It raises an average of sixteen bushels per acre, the cost of getting which to New York city is about eight cents per bushel, or $1,28 per acre, making the total cost per acre of putting the wheat product in New York $5,28. One-half on the Northern Pacific land was homesteaded. The balance was probably sold at $1,25 to $2.50 per acre, but allowing it at $5 per acre is an outside figure. Ten per cent on this is fifty cents an acre. Allowing only sixteen bushels to the acre, whereas they get more, it costs twenty cents per bushel to get the product to New York city through the Erie canal, or $3,20. Thus the total cost per acre on this liberal comparison is $3,70, or a difference in favor of Dakota wheat in New York is $1,58. The actual figures would show from $2 to $3 or even $4 difference, because some of the great farms of this section were bought at thirty to fifty cents per acre, when the railroad was embarrassed and let its land go to pay off bonds

"The disadvantage of the Eastern farmer," continued Mr. Dwight, "comes from paying an enormous tax to support the Erie canal, which should be supported by the general government, if it is to be used for putting the wheat product of the Northwest in New York city at a low rate. I do not expect it is possible for the New York or New England farmer ever to compete with the homesteader of the Northwest, who does all his own work, on cheaper land and deeper soil, because I believe the Northwestern farmer will eventually be the wheat raiser of the world."

Speaking of the fertility of the soil in the Northwest, Mr. Dwight said: "I have seen land which has produced twenty crops still bearing the enormous yield per acre that characterize the Red River Valley, without any apparent signs of let up, and I realize that it is possible for Northwest farms to pay their 20 to 50 per cent profit for a century to come easier than central New York farms now pay barley 2 per cent, with no prospect of an increase in the future. This is my judgment of the situation as regards wheat growing in New York and Dakota, founded on experience at both ends of the line." Mr. Dwight had many years of practical experience in farming in New York before he entered the farming fields of Dakota, and although now known as largely and closely interested with the farmers of the Northwest, his expression or judgment, as I have written above, was given from his daily experience as one identified with the farming interests of the entire country, and in that respect may be considered as highly important.

The Dwight farm was established by Mr. Dwight's father, the late ex-Congressman Dwight, of Dryden, N. Y. He was elected to congress in 1876, having, at 55 retired from a long and prosperous mercantile career. He succeeded Thos. C. Platt in the congressional district in which they lived. Congress was called in special session that year, and at its close Mr. Dwight found himself for the first time in his life with idle moments on his hands. He has been made a member of the public lands committee, and some problems os legislation in that direction having come up in committee he determined to make a western trip to secure accurate personal information. At that time the section of North Dakota where the Dwight farm is located, had no railroad through it. The town of Wahpeton, the seat of Richland county, wherein the farm lies, was barely founded. It had been the scene of an Indian massacre. Buffalo roamed over the prairies. A few homesteaders had occupied the streams known as the Antelope and Wild Rice river. The Wahpeton and Sisseton and Sioux Indians made life a burden.

They are for shipment to our Tacoma house, and are from McCollum & Suffel, Hallock, Minn., sixty miles north of Crookston. We handled all makes in Tacoma last winter. Eastern Iowa, Wisconsn and California cheese and these Red River Valley goods excelled all, even the finest California. Some day people will find out what kind of farming the Red River Valley was intended fore.

The Cosmopolitan.

The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest prices to novelists, scientists statemen, soldiers, and even kings and princes, for the best they can furnish in the literary line. The well-edited magazine becomes an educating influence in the family circle, whose importance cannot be over-estimated. The children, as they grow up, are attracted by its illustrations, and so come in time to have a taste for reading. There is always something that is new, something that is strange, something that is interesting; and we consider that we are doing our readers a positive benefit if we are instrumental in placing such a publication within their reach. The special arrangement which we have made with the Cosmopolitan presents very unusual inducements. That magazine, although only in the tenth month under its new management, is already recognized as one of the most interesting publications of the day. It is seeking subscribers everywhere and obtaining them. The proprietors believe that the Cosmopolitan has only to be examined to secure a permanent subscriber. That is why we are enabled to make, if the offer is accepted before January next, such a very low rate, by which our readers can obtain the Cosmopolitan for little more than the cost of this journal alone. Just think of what the combination means! You obtain your own home journal at about the regular price, and have thrown in a magazine which gives you, in a year 1536 pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including over 1800 pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution. Will it not pay you to send a subscription to this office for the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, and Cosmopolitan immediately? Remember, only $3—for the two.

HOME SEEKERS EXCURSIONS.

The attention of our readers is called to the low round trip excursions on the Great Northern Railway, Sept. 9th Sept. 23d and Oct. 14th. Persons who have friends in the East who have written about coming or ever expressed a desire to visit this country, should be informed of this chance. Tickets can be had at all principal offices of eastern, central and southern lines, connecting with the Great Northern, at St. Paul, Minneapolis, West Superior or Duluth. Ask your eastern friends to call and see their nearest ticket agent, or write to F. I. Whitney, G. P. & T. A., Great Northern Railway, St. Paul. Let us all unite in an effort for new growth and development.

Exposition and State Fair Exorsions.

The Northern Pacific Railroad Company will sell Aug. 27th and 28th, Sept. 2d, 4th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 16th, 18th, 23rd, 25th, and 30th and Oct. 2d, round trip tickets Crookston to Minneapolis and return, including admission ticket to the exposition, at the rate of $9.02. Tickets good until midnight of first Monday following date of sale. Excursion tickets to the Minnesota State Fair will be on sale Sept. 8th to 15th inclusive, good returning until Sept. 15th at rate of $9.27 for the round trip, including admission ticket to the fair grounds.

What Shall We Do With the Straw?

W. P. Brown, in Farmers' Review.

The threshing season is here again, and early and late the whistle of the steamer is heard. An important question for the farmer is that which heads this article, for I believe that one of the greatest wastes of the farm is to be found in the way a large percentage of the farmers manage their straw. In a wide breadth of country the straw this season is unusually good, for it is free from rust, and has been secured with little rain. Such straw is valuable for feed, and practical experience on the farm and chemical analysis agree that good bright wheat straw is worth four-fifths as much as average hay, and that the only thing necessary to keep horses or cattle in excellent condition with no other rough feed than straw is to give a little larger grain ration and one a little varied. Give a horse a small ration of bran and oil meal in addition to his corn or oats and the animal will winter just as well on good bright straw as on timothy hay. Many of the best farmers of my acquaintance, and men who keep excellent teams, always in good condition, never feed hay except during about two months in the spring when plowing, and one af the most successful farmers of my acquaintance, who keeps a herd of 30 or 40 short-horns, eight or ten brood mares and 40 or 50 sheep, feeds no hay, and publicly stated that no farmer can afford to feed hay when it will bring $8 per ton and upwards in the market. On this farm all straw and corn fodder is chaffed and fed as chop, and the grain is ground and mixed with it. There are many farmers of my acquaintance who allow their straw to go to waste, and feed a hundred or more dollars worth of hay each year which might as well be sold. The trouble with straw for feed is not so much that it is deficient in food values as that it is not well balanced, and unpalatable. Both these defects are easily remedied by feeding as chop and giving a suitable grain ration. Even when fed long, in mangers or from the stack, stock will do well on straw if the grain ration is plentiful and varied somewhat, and warm shelter is provided. Since baling machines have become so common there is a demand for straw and a market for it. While it is better to sell it at the price offered, which is usually less than $1 per ton, than to leave it in the field or wood lot, to go to waste, as is the practice on many farms, I do not think any farmer can afford to sell straw at one or even two dollars per ton. It is worth more than this to make the stock comfortable and to save the liquid manure. During the winter every animal on my farm has a good warm bed of straw each night and my barn-yard is so thoroughly covered that no animal ever sets foot in the mud. Thus all the liquid manure is saved. Every pleasant day all winter our cattle are turned into the barn-yard to the straw stack, and no matter how well they are fed with grain and hay, they always eat straw from the stack, and as they pull down enough to make it dry under foot, the cattle are often more comfortable at the stack than in the stable. When we need straw in the barn we cut down and draw in a section of the stack, and with this we bed our horses and hogs. I never leave a stack to stand over summer, but by the middle of March I tear down the last of it, and either house it or spread it in the barn-yard. There is still another use to which straw can be put on the farm that I believe will make it net more than $2 a ton value, and that is as a mulch. Often the yield of wheat can be increased several bushels to the acre by doing this, as it not only furnishes winter protection, but appears also to fertilize the crop. The best time to apply this mulch is during the first freezing weather of autumn or early winter. The straw should be spread evenly, not thrown down in bunches. It not only protects from wind, but also prevents the frequent alternations of freezing and thawing which so reduce the vitality of the plant and often kill it. The effect of a mulch of straw on pastures is to bring the grass forward much earlier in the spring, to thicken up the sward and greatly improve it. If one has a permanent pasture in which there are poor spots, covering them with a mulch of straw will bring them up to the average. Each year that I try it I become more of a believer in the efficacy of covering or shading land in order to set chemical forces at work to enrich it. I no longer leave a heavy stubble standing on a field through the autumn, or a growth of clover or weeds, but I pass over the field once or twice, if necessary, with a mowing machine and cut down stubble, clover or weeds, so they will lie flat and cover the land. Every farmer must determine for himself what is the best use to make of the straw, but no farmer can afford to make no use of it.

A Good Time.

N. J. S. in Prairie Farmer.

The partial failure of the crops in many localities has so lessened the supply of feed, that many who own stock are anxious to sell, because the forage supply is not sufficient to winter them, and rather than purchase feed under present conditions, they prefer to sell the stock. And this is not only the case with the common farmer, who is raising scrubs or grades, but also with the breeder who is raising stock to sell to others for breeding purposes. It is generally considered that the breeder can afford to purchase feed for his stock even when the farmer cannot, but it is only in exceptional cases that the farmer can make it profitable to buy grain. When it is evident at this time that the supply there is not sufficient to fatten what stock is to be wintered, as well as to winter the growing and breeding stock in a good condition, it will be found the best plan to sell off a portion of the animals during the latter part of the summer or early fall, rather than to attempt to purchase food and winter over. And it is often better to sell at a less price than to winter over with a short crop of corn. And this is often true of breeding stock as well as the common animals raised for market. Breeders will often sell stock in the fall at a much less price than they will ask in the spring, and the farmer who needs breeding animals and is so situated as to be able to take advantage of the lower prices, will find it profitable to do so. But the farmer who wants to improve his stock by using good blooded males, will find this a good time to buy. The difference in the cost will in many cases pay well for wintering, with the advantage of having more time to get accustomed to your manner of feeding and treatment, and of having ready for use whenever is needed. Thus it will pay in many cases to sell more of the common animals and secure a start of a good breed now, than to wait for better crops and better prices.

Country Gentleman: High-priced labor, increasing taxation, more stylish living in his own family and in those of his employes, prevail, and when the farmer tries to meet such demands he has an almost constantly decreasing price for his crops. More than half the farms are mortgaged. Where will all this end? A few young, healthy farmers will come out on top, while many will die struggling against the tide, and a large percentage will hopelessly sink.

Mortgage Sale.

WHEREAS, EDWIN P. CAPEN AND MATTIE C. Capen, his wife, of Polk County, State of Minnesota, as mortgagors, did, on the 4th day of August, A. D. 1885, duly execute and deliver to The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London, (Limited) of London, England, their mortgage bearing date of June 20th, A. D. 1885, whereby they mortgaged to said mortgagee the following described lands situated in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit; All of fractional Section 3, Township 148, Range 47 west, containing 652 96-100 acres, to secure the payment of the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars, with interest thereon, according to the conditions of one certain promissory note, with interest coupons attached, bearing even date with said mortgage, and made by said mortgagors to said mortgagee, or order, which said mortgage was on the 10th day of August, A. D. 1885, at 1:20 o'clock p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, in book 26 of mortgages, on pages 480 to 483 inclusive; and

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the sum of two hundred dollars, due as interest upon said mortgage on the 1st day of January, A. D. 1890, and on the further sum of ninety-four and 40-100 dollars due as interest thereon on the 20th day of June, A. D. 1890, and the said interest is still unpaid and due; and

Whereas, it was stipulated by and between the parties to said mortgage, that if default should be made in any of the conditions or covenants therein contained on the part of the mortgagors, to be kept and performed, that then and from thenceforth it shall be lawful for the said mortgagee, or its assigns, to consider and declare the whole sum secured thereby as immediately due and payable without notice to said mortgagors, or any other party; and

Whereas, The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London (Limited) has exercised its option to consider and declare, and does hereby consider and declare the whole sum of money secured by said mortgage to be due and payable; and

Whereas, there is now due, and claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of twenty-eight hundred thirty-two and 52-100 dollars, and no proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land therein described, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in said County and State, on the 27th day of September, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the sum due on said mortgage, together with taxes, if any, on said premises, and one hundred dollars attorney's fees therein stipulated to be paid in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Dated August 5th, A. D. 1890.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post office, whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the payment.
2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made and then collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.
3. In suits for subscriptions, the suit may be instituted where the paper is published.
4. The Courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, while unpaid for, is prima facie evidence of intention to defraud.

Republican County Convention.

The Republican County Convention met pursuant to call. Prof. J. J. Anderson, of East Grand Forks, was made chairman, and M. J. Anderson, secretary.

The chair appointed as committee on credentials, W. J. Nickle, K. O. Gigstad, J. P. Johnson, J. Sullivan and Ole Hanson.

Committee on resolutions, Dr. A. Nelson, J. W. Wheeler, M. W. Jensen, Frank Vetleson and Hugh Thompson.

The convention then took a recess until 2 p. m. Upon reassembling the committee on credentials made its report. Several towns unrepresented were allowed to be represented by citizens present. The committee on organization recommended that the temporary organization be made permanent. The committee on resolutions reported the following resolutions, viz:

The republican party of Polk county affirms its faith in and adherence to the time-honored principles of that party, as enunciated in its national and state platform, and affirms that the interests of all classes can best be promoted by a loyal adherance to its principles.

We commend the wise and prudent administration of President Harrison, and heartily endorse the conservative and able administration of Governor Merriam.

We especially commend the wisdom of the state republican convention in nominating for the office of state auditor our efficient county auditor, P. J. McGuire, and pledge our hearty support to the state ticket.

We favor tariff revision and heartily endorse the action of our members of congress from the state of Minnesota, and especially C. K. Davis, in their success in having removed the duties upon the material from which binding twine is manufactured, and also in the senate amendment removing all duties from binding twine; in removing the duties from sugar and placing the same on the free list, and especially favor the senate amendment favoring reciprocity of trade in accordance with the ideas of James J. Blaine, thus encouraging trade and commerce between the nations of North and South America, believing that this, together with the results of the late Pan-American congress, will most speedily draw into closer and more cordial relations the different nations and peoples of North and South America, resulting immensely in our material welfare, and in placing the United States in that position which she should occupy, as a protector of self-government and defender of liberty on the American continent.

We approve the action of congress in the passage of the silver bill, thereby adding nearly five million dollars monthly to the volume of our currency.

We believe that great evils have resulted and great loss entailed upon our farmers by the present system of elevator companies in buying and grading wheat, and demand that such needed legislation be had as will compel railroad companies to furnish promptly cars for the shipment of wheat by farmers; that the state system of weighing and grading wheat at St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth be perfected and, as far as possible, that every safeguard be thrown around it to insure exact justice to shippers, and that the fees for weighing and grading be reduced to the actual cost of efficient service; that all standards of grades or of grading wheat except at the terminal points be abolished and prohibited; that it be bought in open market upon inspection.

We favor the present system of high license and believe that the same, with proper enforcement of the law to be the best system for the regulation of the liquor triffic.

We favor such an extension of our public school system as will give to every needy child school books free of charge.

We request that our members of the State Legislature cause such a law to be passed as will authorize the county commissioners to cut down the fees of the register of deeds of this county to that point where he shall receive only a fair compensation for the duties he performs or that all the fees received in that office shall be turned into the county treasury and a reasonable salary be allowed the register for his services, in lieu of the present system of fees.

We recognize the vast interests of farming in our county and also the interests of the laborer, the mechanic, and the business man and affirm that the republican party of the nation and of this county represents no particular class of individuals, and no individual interests; that it stands for all legitimate interests; that it stands for the people; that the people as a whole and each interest must stand or fall together.

We confidently appeal to the past history of the republican party in proof of the assertion that the interests of the people can be best promoted by that party, and that all needed reforms can be best carried out by and through it the following resolution was offered by E. D. Childs.

Resolved, That this convention demands the speedy passage by congress of Senator Davis' bill for a liberal appropriation for the completion of the improvements of the Soo canal and the Hay Lake channel.

Dated at Crookston this 12th day of September, 1890.

Dr. A. Nelson,
Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions.
M. W. Jensen, Secretary.

NOMINATIONS.

The time for nominations being now at hand the name of Mathew Cornelius, for auditor, was presented by Tollef Farden, of Tilden. Dr. A. Nelson, of Fertile, made a neat little speech in seconding this nomination and moved to suspend the rules and make the nomination by acclamation. Carried, and Mr. Cornelius was so nominated. Mr. Cornelius responded to a call for a speech in his usual modest way, disclaiming any ability as an orator, but promising, if elected, to attend to the duties of the office to the best of his ability. As his ability in that line has been tested and found adequate, this should be an ample guarantee of a faithful discharge of his duties.

Ovid Moreau, of Terrebonne, was nominated as treasurer by acclamation, and being called upon for a speech, promised allegiance to the ticket and to the party. Mr. Moreau is a young business man of Terrebonne and is well spoken of by those who know him.

For sheriff the name of Delos Jacobus was ably presented by the talented young orator, W. J. Nickle, of Reis, who alluded to the services of Jacobus during the war, as well as his active efforts in behalf of every enterprise for the good of the city and county since he came here with the earliest settlers in '72. The name of James O. Hovland, of Winger, was also presented and and an informal ballot taken, as follows: Hovland 88, Jacobus 8. On motion the nomination of Hovland was made unanimous.

For clerk of court the name of E. M. Walsh was eloquently presented by Bennett, of Fosston, and G. H. Palmer, by Levi Myers. The informal ballot stood Walsh 58, Palmer 36. On motion the nomination of Mr. Walsh was made unanimous. Mr. Walsh is an old settler and has ever been thoroughly identified with the interests of our city, has made an excellent clerk, but he was too modest to respond to a pressing invitation for a speech. Ed. always works harder than he talks.

For judge of probate the present incumbent was renominated by acclamation. The judge has made an excellent official and in his speech of acceptance promised, if elected, to do so more.

For register of deeds, James Rosenau, of Fisher, was nominated by acclamation.

For county attorney, R. J. Montague was nominated by acclamation. He made an elegant speech of acceptance, pledging his best efforts to the ticket.

For Superintendent of Schools, Prof. T. Casey was nominated by acclamation. Mr. Casey made a neat little speech of acceptance. The Professor has been an efficient official since his appointment, proving his fitness for the office by his deeds.

Geo. Ralph was nominated for surveyor and Henry Shepard for Coroner, by acclamation. For County Commissioner in the Second District, Levi S. Myers was nominated and K. O. Gigstad in the Fourth. The following delegates were declared elected, viz:

Wm. Marin, J. J. Armstrong, J. W. Wheeler, O. Berthiaume, J. M. Bain, K. O. Gigstad, C. M. Lindell and H. A. McClatchie.

Moved that the chair appoint a county central committee of nine.

Adjourned.

The Tariff Bill.

The tariff bill passed the senate last night by a strict party vote. As it came from the house it was a measure that raised the barrier of protection almost to the prohibitive point. It leaves the senate materially amended in many particulars. With one important exception the changes which the upper house has made in the bill are due to the irresistible pressure of public opinion. To this pressure may be attributed the general lowering of the scale of duties by the senate; but the one redeeming feature of the whole measure in its present form, the reciprocity amendment, is the fruit of Blaine's broad gauged and foresighted statesmanship. The public mind is ripe for reciprocity and the country needs it. Blaine saw his opportunity and also the imperative necessity of rescuing his party from certain defeat, and with one stroke of his lucid pen he brought the country around to his view and started a popular move that buried the whole McKinley crowd in its broad sweep.

The house will probably proceed to a consideration of the amended bill without delay; but will it recede from its original position and yield to the senate? It is safe to say the reciprocity feature will be allowed to remain; but beyond this the members do not know themselves what they are going to do. Reed and McKinley, the foremost champions of the bill as passed by the house, have received the emphatic endorsement of their constituents. The republican congressmen from Minnesota and other states in the West and Northwest have been told by their constituents in equally plain language that the McKinley bill is a death blow to that kind of a tariff reform they were elected and expected to secure. Can Reed and McKinley yield without compromising both themselves and their constituents? Or can the Minnesota delegation in the house insist upon the original House bill without smashing the platforms upon which they are to make their respective campaigns? To harmonize a conflict of interests that just now has been so signally emphasized will be no easy task. With some of the congressmen from Minnesota it is simply a question of life or death. If they can keep binding twine on the free list, where it has been put by the senate, and prevent the McKinleyites from wiping out other material concessions to the wishes and demands of western republicans, our congressmen can enter upon the campaign with a chance of re-election. Otherwise some of them may just as well save the expense and trouble of a campaign this year.

The Democratic Nominee.

Minneapolis Journal.

The Democrats profess a great deal of satisfaction with the result of yesterday's convention.

But they cannot be any better pleased with the nomination for governor than Chairman Joel Heatwole and other republicans responsible for the management of the republican campaign were last evening. For whether these republican leaders are right or not they do not regard Mr. Wilson as a hard man to beat.

And they probably are right. The most dangerous man from the republican standpoint mentioned in yesterday's convention was S. M. Owen. When his endorsement was made a political impossibility by his letter the next most dangerous man was Daniel Buck. And after Buck the best vote-getter in spite of his utter unfitness for the office and unworthiness of the nomination, was Dr. Ames.

The probabilites are that the result of the election will show Judge Wilson to have been overrated as a candidate, especially as a leader against Gov. Merriam. It can not be said that Judge Wilson is not an able man, or that he would not make a good governor. His nomination from the standpoint of the charactr of the man and his capability is a credit to his party. But his availability as a candidate rests largely upon his performance in the politics of the First district. He defeated John A. Lovely four years ago. Lovely was unpopular and his party was torn all to pieces at the time by internal dissensions. It was no particular credit to Wilson that he won. Two years ago he was renominated, but was defeated by M. H. Dunnell, who cannot be said to be a popular man. There is nothing in his recent record to justify the expectation of any phenomenal performance on the part of Judge Wilson in the way of vote getting.

Added to that is the fact that he was the cadidate of two of the most arrogant and domineering political bosses that ever sat astride the neck of any political party; and that there was a general though scarcely audible murmur of protest and resistance prevalent in the convention against the dictation of the bosses and the nomination of their candidate which failed to make itself more decidedly felt only for lack of organization and the want of a leader. If Dr. Ames had been large enough man he might have been able at the proper time yesterday to have led a movement for such a man as Daniel Buck that would have carred the day.

The Tariff Bill's Career.

Minneapolis Journal.

The new tariff bill, which will doubtless become a law this week, was reported to the house on April 6 and was passed on May 21 by a vote of 164 to 145. The discussion of this important measure only lasted two weeks. It was whipped through by Speaker Reed and Congressman McKinley, no opportunity for any serious discussion being given and most of the amendments being entirely rejected. Scores of men were compelled to vote for the bill who had no sympathy with its rigorous provision.

In the senate the bill was reported by the finance committee June 18 and was taken up July 21. The discussion has been very full and exhaustive and the results of the reciprocity and some other amendments are somewhat compensatory for the prohibitory nature of the original house bill.

The bill, if enacted, will remain in force no longer than did the tariff measure of 1883. It does not meet the nation's demands and it cannot last. The nation is doing a good deal of thinking for itself on the subject of the tariff, and that thinking is all in the direction of practical tariff reform, in the interest of the nation and in the direction of a reduction and not an increase of the imposts.

Mr. Owen's Position.

Minneapolis Journal.

S. M. Owen's letter to H. B. Wells is impregnated with that rare spirite of honor and fealty to principle, born of deep conviction, which is always gratifying in this period, when men are so prone to barter principle for political advantage and effect political unions for party aggrandizement.

Mr. Owen would keep himself and the Alliance from this political prostitution. He wants the Alliance to stand before the public for what it claims to be, a genuine reform movement, stimulated from within by true convictions and that it should be preserved in its integrity and be kept from all incongruous combinations. Mr. Owen's views will increase the respect of the general public for himself, and to his own party, his position ought to be for them a substantial satisfaction and cause of rejoicing and congratulation. Mr. Owen has taken the highest ground of political morality, and, while he and his party must have the satisfaction of knowing that, following the course he has marked out, they have made a fight for principle, pure and simple.

The Cosmopolitan.

The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest prices to novelists, scientists statemen, soldiers, and even kings and princes, for the best they can furnish in the literary line. The well-edited magazine becomes an educating influence in the family circle, whose importance cannot be over-estimated. The children, as they grow up, are attracted by its illustrations, and so come in time to have a taste for reading. There is always something that is new, something that is strange, something that is interesting; and we consider that we are doing our readers a positive benefit if we are instrumental in placing such a publication within their reach. The special arrangement which we have made with the Cosmopolitan presents very unusual inducements. That magazine, although only in the tenth month under its new management, is already recognized as one of the most interesting publications of the day. It is seeking subscribers everywhere and obtaining them. The proprietors believe that the Cosmopolitan has only to be examined to secure a permanent subscriber. That is why we are enabled to make, if the offer is accepted before January next, such a very low rate, by which our readers can obtain the Cosmopolitan for little more than the cost of this journal alone. Just think of what the combination means! You obtain your own home journal at about the regular price, and have thrown in a magazine which gives you, in a year, 1536 pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including over 1800 pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution. Will it not pay you to send a subscription to this office for the Polk County Journal and Cosmopolitan immediately? Remember, only $3—for the two.

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more fully shown by the following statement: A, aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his insurance.......$88 44
Each year on his loan for interest.......... 80 00
Total yearly payments...$ 168 44
Total for ten years..........1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest...........$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of.......... 500.00
When the loan is due he pays.. 1000.00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years.......... 1500.00

As much within $184.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest..........$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years..... 1000 00
Total..........$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

Best water white kerosene only 15 cents per gallon at A. Holmboe's, Robert street. [14-27]

The Bjoin block is up to the first story and the floor joists all on. The derrick is up and the work progressing favorably.

Mrs. S. H. Barteau left for Minneapolis on Tuesday night to attend the W. C. T. U. convention. She expects to be gone a week.

Nils Muus was up from Fertile on Tuesday. Nils does not talk much with his mouth, but he is a mighty good worker all the same.

"I am going to trade it for a sled," said alderman I. U. Jennings, as he trundled his Paddy's buggy along Broadway in the snow storm on Friday.

Fred Rauch received a valuable present from Dr. Warninger, of Aberdeen, one day last week in the form of an excellent bird dog, which he prizes very highly.

The Congregational social at the residence of A. A. Miller on Monday evening was largely attended and a very enjoyable affair. It was made a sort of farewell reception to the pastor, Rev. F. B. Noyes.

Farmers, don't sell your hogs to shippers when you can get double of the price by having them cured at the packing house. [f-tf]

Friday of last week was a day long to be remembered, as the first snow-fall of the season occurred on that day. Not much of a snow, yet enough to say it snowed. The weather since then has been warm.

Mr. Wm. Johnson, of Brandon, Manitoba, came up from Minneapolis and St. Paul to join his wife in a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Hunt and Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Chapin, with whom she came from Brandon last week. Mr. Johnson thinks Crookston a right smart little city.

Brother farmer, when you come to Crookston go to Hack & Gallasch' old stand and see what the old farmer can do for you.

THE JOURNAL is in receipt of a handsome catalogue gotten up by the Glyndon News man, relating all about the big Clay County fair that is to be held at Glyndon on Oct. 1, 2 and 3. If the fair is as slick as the fair catalogue it will be a dandy.

Our thermometer is broken. So far this season our little corn patch has stood the racket bravely, but Friday night proved too much of a good thing, and on Saturday those corns withered and drooped. This we may consider the first frost of the season.

The fire bell summoned the department at 10 a. m. on Wednesday to attend to a fire at the stock yards. About one section, including a shed and a stack of hay was destroyed. The boys got the chemical engine from the Fifth ward and settled the business in short order as soon as they got there.

Carl Kretzschmar was down from Thief River Falls last week to attend the republican county convention and to visit old friends. Carl is as full of enthusiasm as ever and says: "Vait till de reservation opens den ve get a bum." If everybody had had Carl's faith (and works) in the early day, this city would have been way ahead of where it is now.

On Monday evening Mr. W. O. Wilson received word that his little daughter, who was visiting in the family of Mr. Tveiten, out in the country, was severely sick. With Dr. Dunlop, he drove out there at once, and when they left for home he had the pleasure of seeing the little one very much better and on the high road to recovery.

Gorton's minstrels on Oct. 13.

Ed. Wile returned from the lake on Tuesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Z. Lusian lost their little baby girl on Tuesday night.

The Mendelsohn Quintette club will appear in this city on Oct. 6th.

Martin Johnson, an employe on the new Bjoin block, got his left hand caught in the elevator cutting it severely, Wednesday afternoon.

J. H. Pratt, a brakesman on No. 19, caught his right hand between a high and a low draw-bar, while making a coupling in the yard about 8:30 Tuesday evening. Dr. Dampier removed the two middle fingers and part of another, and Pratt was around again on Wednesday.

H. H. Phelps, O. H. Myran, and Dav Lightbourn came up to see that Doc. Koyle should vote right in the Legislative convention on Monday. They nailed their colors to the mast-head and sailed right in determined to secure two places on the ticket for Norman Co. They got there with both feet and went home happy.

Mrs. J. W. Wheeler's father, Mr. Hil is visiting his daughter in the city.

H. G. Mitchel, of Woodside, walked into our den on Friday with a huge snow ball in his hand, remarking: "The first of the season; thought I would bring it along for the novelty of the thing." Mitchel says farmers are saying but little, but will cast their votes for S. M. Owen next November. As to the remainder of the ticket he thinks it will be considerably mixed. The grain is nearly all secured in good shape and farmers are hoping for good prices.

Rev. F. B. Noyes departed on Tuesday's train via the Great Northern for Rock Rapids, from whence he has received a call. Mr. Noyes, though he has been in our city but three months, leaves many warm friends who regret to see him go, and who unite with THE JOURNAL in best wishes for his future welfare. Mr. Noyes is a young man of great promise and we can congratulate the church at Rock Rapids should he conclude to accept their call. We regret that circumstances are such that he could not see his way clear to accept the call here, but think his decision a wise one.

The week has been full of discouragements to farmers, especially to those who are attempting to thresh out of the shock—too much rain they all say, and even the good housewife has her share of the trouble. THE JOURNAL man overheard one relating to another her troubles saying: "Why, just think of it. I have cooked over 600 lbs. of beef for our threshers already, to say nothing of pork and vegetables, and the discouraging part of it is we do not get along very fast; we have been over three weeks now and don't seem to be near done yet." And so it goes all round. Those who stacked are feeling more complacent.

The latest joke we have heard yet is on the clergy. It is related that one evening recently as one of our city divines was walking abstractedly along Houston avenue, communing with his thoughts, he was awakened by the "swish, swish" of a silk dress close at hand, as a dark object appeared so close as to endanger a collision. Quickly raising his hat and donning his most effective bow, he was about to add a mild and gentle "beg pardon, madam," when the old cow, startled by the Noyes she saw coming, hurriedly departed for the middle of the street, and the pastor continued his walk meditating whether he had better give it away or not. But he "didn't have to," a little bird gave it to our reporter.

Last Sunday we received a bit of a pamphlet from New York City that set our old heart bounding like unto a fine young maiden of 60 or 70 with her first beau. It was the Fifth and Sixth Annual Proceedings of the Survivors Association of the old 27th and 33 N. Y. Vol. Infantry and the 1st N. Y. Vol. Cav., with the roster of the survivors. In it we found a letter from our old commander, Col. R. F. Taylor, (who was later promoted to Brig. Gen.) and one from comrade W. B. Stedman, of old Co. F. Again, we saw the name of John E. Ronk, our old 2d Lieut., than whom a handsomer man never bestrode a cavalry horse nor a braver, and here we found the names of Sergeants Bacon, Harmon and Orderly, S. Girard Case, (later promoted to 2d Lieut.) of comrades Marsh, of Freeman, of Farmer, of Nick Baker, of Charles Heldt, of Lovejoy, of Moses Lapointe, of Maxon, of Paddleford, of Seth Wells, but missing others we did not find. Where are the Bradburys, the Whittleseys, the Nashs, the McFarlands, the McCunes, the Southworths, the Moores, Jake Lester, Bob Way, Paine, Len Corby and the hosts who come trooping into mind as we gaze upon this the reminder of the times that tried men's souls? The old boys are going to re-une in Binghampton on the 24th and 25th of this month, and sa-a-a-y—wouldn't we like to buckle on the old saber and fetch a rail to that camp fire? Well, ask anybody who was in the swim and see what he says! Now that we have caught on we propose to keep posted and—

"When we get back to old New York,
Foot balls, foot balls,
When we get back to old New York,
Foot balls, says I,
When we get back to old New York
We'll bid farewell to beans and pork,
And we'll all re-une
When Johnny comes marching home."

FATAL ACCIDENT.

Anton Mickelson Instantly Killed by Train No. 3.

On Saturday Morning

The Inquest.

The passenger train from the south on Saturday morning was 50 minutes late, and, at the Robert street crossing, collided with a horse and buggy, making a complete wreck of the buggy, killing one man instantly and bruising another. Anton and Andrew Mickelson were coming from Sampson's Addition in a one horse rig and when they had arrived at a point opposite the round house their horse became excited by an engine standing on the track just north of the crossing, blowing off steam. A dining car, standing on the first sidetrack south of the crossing and an engine on track No. 2, so obstructed the view that the approaching passenger train was not observed by the occupants of the buggy whose attention was confined to the engine north of the crossing that was blowing off steam, and just as their buggy reached the crossing it was struck by the engine. Anton was pitched into the air, alighting on the engine, and Andrew was thrown backward and clear of the train. Several parties had shouted to the occupants in the buggy to warn them, but it seems they were unheard. The body of Anton was taken from the pilot and an examination showed the right temple crushed and the neck broken. Andrew, as soon as he struck, was not too severely injured to jump up and run. The dead body was taken to the undertaking rooms of Wyatt & Ziegler for the inquest and coroner Shepard summoned the following named gentlemen to serve as a jury:

W. J. Nickle, John Bowman, G. P. Houg, Maj. H. E. Stansbery, Adolph Bruner, W. J. Nelson. The jury met at 10 o'clock and the first witness sworn was engineer Pat Clary, who testified substantially as follows:

Am an engineer on the Great Northern Railroad. Have seen deceased. Saw the accident. Walked from the round house to the crossing just as the passenger train was coming in. Saw a horse and buggy approaching. Was standing close to crossing; put up my hand and said "whoa;" The engine was coming along; the bell was ringing; I tried to seize the lines but did not succeed, and thought they were going to make the crossing all right; it was a single rig with two men in it; the pilot hit one of them. Question: Was there a flagman stationed there? Answer: No. Question: Had there ought to be? Answer: That is out of my line of business. The rig was coming from the west; the train was coming from the south; it was late; it was train No. 3, engineer George Conklin; Engine No. 106; not positive as to fireman's name; tried to stop the horse and the driver seemed to be trying to check him; I don't think he hollered; he was close onto me; did not see him killed; his brother was thrown on the side where I was; the buggy was thrown right in front of us; the crossing was clear and the track was clear; just happened to meet at the same time.

(At this point Attorney Steenerson appeared for a brother of deceased.)

Was standing between the rails of track No. 2; my duty was to take engines in and out of round house; no other duties except to see the work done at the round house; I started to take engine No. 106 to take it into the round house; there was another engine somewhere, I don't know how close, I did not pay any attention; there were no cars standing on the crossing; the dining car was 25 or 30 feet from the crossing; not within the limits of Robert street; about 25 or 30 feet south of the planks of the crossing; think the dining car was about from 60 to 75 feet from depot platform on the track next west of the main track, what we call No. 1 track: deceased was about 25 to 30 feet to my left when I first heard the racket; by the racket I mean the horse and buggy; could not say positively where the engine struck the buggy, think it was about the front wheels, as the buggy was thrown back.

At this point the inquest was adjourned until 2 p. m. Upon assembling at 2 o'clock motion was made to adjourn to City Hall, which was done.

GEORGE CONKLIN SWORN.

I live at Barnesville; saw the accident; the first I saw was the horse running around the pilot with the thills fast to him; I then saw the buggy dragging along the opposite side of the engine attached to the steam chest; I saw one man get up out of the road and walk off; I did not see the man on the pilot who was killed; that is all I saw about the case until Mr. Morrisey and the hotel porter told me there was one of them on the front of the engine; the porter of the hotel, I do not know his name, jumped up on the pilot; my fireman rings the bell; his name is A. J. Adams; The orders from the company are to ring the bell at all city crossings and to blow the whistle at farmers' crossings; whistled for the station but did not for that crossing; was 60 or 70 feet south of the crossing when I first applied brake after crossing bridge; moved about two coach lengths, I should think, after I struck him; ran 70 or 80 feet to the front of freight depot; could have stopped sooner had I known a man had been struck; I saw the horse come round the dining car; I thought I could get in ahead; got in at 7:50; about 40 minutes late. Question: How long does it take to stop the train? That depends on how fast we are running, I could stop inside of 30 feet when running from four to six miles per hour; I put the brake on at the bridge, and slowed to six miles, and again when I saw a man throw up his hands to stop the team; released brakes again, thinking crossing was all clear; struck the buggy about 8 or 10 feet south of the depot platform, horse ran between the engine and the platform; put the brakes on again after I struck him: the dining car was on track No. 1, about 45 or 50 feet south of the depot platform, about 4 to 8 feet from the crossing plank; there was a stock train on track No. 3—west of track No. 2, the engine facing the crossing, about a car length from it, north of the crossing; the Fosston engine, No. 22, was standing beside the dining car, south of the crossing. Question: At what rate of speed was you running? I could not say exactly; I think from four to six miles; my attention was first attracted by the apparent excitement in the crowd at the depot.

FRANK CERNOUSEK SWORN

I live in the Town of Tabor. I was standing on the south end of the depot platform close to track: the engine on side-track was blowing off steam; saw a buggy coming from the west; somebody behind me hollered and motioned to stop. I think the driver could not hear the man holler owing to the noise of the engine blowing off steam; the horse appeared to be unmanagable through fear of the same engine; at the same time I saw the passenger train coming from the south; saw the engine strike buggy releasing the horse; should think the train was then running ten miles an hour.

I. U. JENNINGS SWORN.

Live in Crookston; am alderman in the first ward; am familiar with place where the accident happened; was not present at the time; there is an obstruction caused by the round-house projecting into the street, between 10 and 30 feet. I was a member of a committee appointed to confer with the railroad company in regard to the Robert street and Loring street crossings; there was a motion made by a member of the council that the railroad company be requested to place a safety gate on each side of the crossing on Robert street. The committee made a report recommending that gates be placed there; the committee received a letter from the company saying that they would protect the crossing by placing a flag-man there. I think that was in Nov. 1888. There never were any gates placed there. I do not know whether there was ever a flagman placed there or not. The council had knowledge of the obstruction in the street, do not know by whose permission the building was put in the street.

IRA JACOBS SWORN.

I live in the town of Queen; am a farmer; was present when Anton Michelson was killed; stood on the platform about 6 feet south of the depot door; first saw the passenger train at the bridge; saw a team in the bend down by the roundhouse; one man near me beckoned and hollered; the horse did not stop and just as he crossed the main track, the cow-catcher struck the buggy, threw it on one side and one man jumped out of the buggy backward and the other flew up out of the buggy and came down on his head on the cow-catcher. At that time the train was a little past me or nearly so; I believe the train was running about 10 miles an hour; I saw no safety gates nor flag-man at the crossing the train ran up to near the water tank before it stopped.

ANDREW MICHELSON SWORN.

I am a brother of deceased; live on Sampson's Addition; was coming up Robert street; my brother was driving; going east: when we came to the track there was an engine standing there and the pony got scared so that we could not hold him; the next I knew we were caught by the train; I was thrown out backward; did not see what happened to my brother; did not see the engine before it struck the buggy; it was hid by the dining car from our view; was driving on a slow trot when we passed the round house; the horse was scared by the engine blowing off steam; we passed the ice-wagon down by the big house below the roundhouse; did not see the freight engine until near the track when the horse got scared; I did not see any person beckon to us; did not hear any one holler.

At this point inquest was adourned until Tuesday morning.

Upon re-assembling on Tuesday morning City Clerk, E. O. Carruth, August Skalman and Conductor Harry Norie testified and the case went to the jury who rendered the following VERDICT.

We, the jury convened to investigate the cause of the death of Anton Michelson, on the morning of the 13th instant, between the hours of 7:30 and 9 a. m. in the city of Crookston, on the track of the Great Northern Railway, do say that the deceased came to his death by being thrown from his buggy and falling upon the front of engine No. 106, Geo. Conklin, engineer, crushing his skull and causing instant death. We do say that the gross carelessness of the Railway Company in maintaining a portion of its roundhouse in the street, and in keeping a dining car standing in such position as to prevent seeing the approach of a train, and also in failing to maintain safety gates, or a flag-man at the crossing of a main street in the heart of the city is due the death of the said Micholson. We also say that the common council should have taken such action as would have removed such obstructions on a common thoroughfare, and we attach no blame to engineer George Conklin.

POSITIONS FURNISHED OUR GRADUATES.

J. B. LANIGAN, Proprietor.

E. J. Grefthen returned from a visit to Northwood, Iowa, on Tuesday, refreshed for the fray.

Miss. Hattie Bivens has been kept indoors for some days trying to break up a threatened fever. At last accounts the efforts promise to be successful.

Frank E. Hunt was down from Red Lake Falls this week looking pretty pecked, all owing to recent illness. He is getting along nicely, however.

Conductor W. H. Norrie received a dispatch from Toronto, Canada, on Tuesday, announcing the illness of his father and left for that city that evening

Rev. F. B. Noyes delivered a powerful sermon on temperance at the Congregational church on Sunday evening. The edifice was filled to overflowing.

Rev. S. Currie was down from Euclid on Monday. Says a great deal of grain is yet in shock up that way.

Mr. E. Lanctot was in on Tuesday preparing to thresh. Says wheat is not damaged a particle where thoroughly capped.

Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Davidson, and Miss Minnie Pirnie accompanied conductor Copeland on his run to Minot on Monday. They were highly elated with the scenery and much interested in Dakota-land, her inhabitants, original and aboriginal. They inspected the mining interests and will be fully prepared to descant upon the great possibilities of the New Northwest when they return to their homes in the effete east.

Sheriff Paterson went down to Alexandria on Sunday evening, with a warrant for the arrest of an individual who was wanted at Fosston. He returned on Tuesday morning with his man, took the train for Fosston, met the plaintiff who returned with them to this city where Judge Lewis quickly settled the case by performing a marriage ceremony. John is a rustler when he gets started.

Cope is in clover. House full of company. Mrs. Copeland's father, Mr. J. Pirney, of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Davidson, (her sister) and two children, of Cleveland, Miss. Minnie Pirney, of Canton, Ills., Mr. Copeland's uncle, Mr. Daniel Budd, from Kansas, (only he left for home Tuesday night,) and Mr. Sprague and daughter, of Springfield, Mass. If John enjoys any one thing more than another it is to have the folks come to see him. "Jerusha put the kettle on, &c."

The funeral services of Anton Michelson, whose sudden death is chronicled elsewhere in this issue, occurred at ten o'clock yesterday, having been delayed to await the arrival of a sister from Michigan. Anton Micholson was about 26 years old, unmarried; he leaves an aged father and mother, four brothers and two sisters to mourn his loss. How forcibly are we reminded, in his sudden taking off that verily in the midst of life we are in death.

Democratic Legislative Convention.

This intelligent body of our fellow citizens met in solemn conclave on Tuesday and proceeded to put in nomination a legislative ticket "alle samie Melican man." Here she goes as far as she goes at date of present writing:

For Senator, Hon. Alex. McKinnon.

For 1st Representative, S. B. Cragin, of Norman County.

For 2d Rep., Geo. Johnson, of Norman County.

For 3d Rep., ——— of Polk County, or ——— of Polk County. Don't know yet; wait till we see what the Repubs and the Alli-Pro-obituary parties will do.

We loan money on improved farms and city property and have facilities for placing large loans at low rate of interest. We give special attention to collection and all commercial business pertaining to our profession.

H. H. Sibley, of the Fertile Journal, was up on Tuesday. Mr. Sibley has been made the victim of one or two slanderous, disgraceful attacks since he saw fit to espouse the alliance cause, and for that sole reason. We care not by whom such vile attacks are made, they are outrageous and a disgrace to any party who tolerates them. If any cause has to be bolstered up by such means, it is utterly unworthy the support of honest men, and no honorable man will consent to engage in such warfare. The object that the farmers seek—a free and open wheat market, is one that is to the interest of every business man in the country to see attained—men only differ as to the best way of attaining that object. The Labor-Alliance thinks that can best be accomplished by placing in the field an entire independent ticket, from poundmaster to president, and while The Journal does not agree with them on that point, we don't believe in opening up mud batteries and deluging every newspaper man with filth who comes out in support of their ticket, and will do it. It is a disgrace to mankind that these same things, created in the semblance of man will rack the hidden recesses of their vile imaginations to traduce those who have the independence to urge a free and independent market on the line they think the most available to accomplish that desired end. These very men who are indulging in these dirty methods are far inferior to those whom they seek with develish malice to injure, in that they have no mind of their own, but are the subservient flunkeys of designing men—their masters. The men they revile are honorably seeking a remedy for the evils existing, while they are not caring a snap what becomes of the country—their only interest being to yelp and bark when the master cracks the whip. But this state of things will not answer—the people are aroused and determined on the accomplishment of their laudable object, and we confidently believe that it will be accomplished. It is right that it should, and we have the promise that the right shall prevail, though all the powers of darkness combine with their mud throwing representatives on earth to defeat it. A sovereign people cannot long be enslaved even in chains as strong as the golden chains of the monopolistic capitalist.

Fifty-First District Republican Convention.

The convention was called to order at 3 o'clock. On motion H. H. Phelps was nominated temporary chairman, and Hugh Robertson, secretary.

The chair appointed O. H. Myran, Tim Sullivan and C. H. Lindell as committee on credentials, and Ole Woller, A. D. Stephens and O. Berthiaume as committee on permanent organization, and Hugh Thompson, Dr. F. T. Koyle and Dr. C. E. Dampier as committee on resolutions. On motion convention took a recess of thirty minutes pending reports of committees.

Upon re-assembling the committee on credentials reported the following members entitled to seats, viz: Hugh Thompson, Hugh Robertson, Dr. C. E. Dampier, Frank E. Hunt, A. D. Stephens and Tim Sullivan, proxies for Wm. Marin, J. J. Armstrong, J. W. Wheeler, K. O. Gigstad, J. M. Bain and H. A. McClatchie, and Jas. Gilmour, O. Berthiaume and C. H. Lindell, of Polk County, and H. H. Phelps, O. H. Myran, Ole Woller, W. E. Casselman and F. T. Koyle, proxy for A. Stromstead, of Norman County.

The committee on permanent organization recommended that the temporary organization be made permanent. Carried.

The committee on resolutions reported the following

RESOLUTIONS.

The Republicans of the Fifty-First District of the State of Minnesota, in convention assembled, declare their loyalty to the time-honored principles of the republican party and accept as their platform the following resolutions:

Resolved, That while we favor the principle of protection, we believe in such an adjustment and reduction of tariff schedules as will remove the duties upon binding twine and from the materials from which the same is manufactured, and also upon sugar and such articles, necessaries of life, as can be placed upon the free list without seriously interfering with the upbuilding and maintenance of American manufactures; and we heartily commend the action of Senator C. K. Davis in his efforts to accomplish this result.

We furthermore believe in and endorse the principle of reciprocity recommended by the Hon. James G. Blaine. We favor the present system of high license and believe that the same with proper enforcement of the law, to be the best system for regulating the liquor traffic.

We favor such an extension of our public school system as will give to every child school books free of charge.

We recognize the vast interests of farming in our state and also the interests of the laborer, the mechanic, the and the business man, and affirm that the republican party of the nation and of this county represents no particular class of individuals, and no individual interests; that it stands for all legitimate interests; that it stands for the people; that the people as a whole and each interest must stand or fall together.

We confidently appeal to the past history of the republican party in proof of the assertion that the interests of the people can be best promoted by that party, and that all needed reforms can be best carried out by and through it.

That this convention demands the speedy passage by congress of Senator Davis' bill for a liberal appropriation for the completion of the improvements of the Soo canal and the Hay Lake channel.

The Supreme Court of the United States having declared the present railroad law of the State of Minnesota in certain respects unconstitutional, thereby practically abolishing the powers of our railroad commission, we demand that the present law be so amended as to restore the powers intended to be conferred by the original act creating the commission, and that hereafter the railroad and warehouse commissioners of the state be elected by the vote of the people.

Moved by H. Thompson that the convention proceed to nominate a candidate for senator and three candidates for representatives. Carried.

Jas. Gilmour presented the name of John Cromb as candidate for senator. No other name being presented, Hugh Thompson moved that the nomination by made by acclamation. Carried.

Mr. Cromb made a brief speech thanking the convention for this unanimous expression of confidence, and promising, if elected, to do his best to secure such laws as would satisfy all parties, the farmer, the laborer and the millionaire alike.

Moved by O. H. Myran that B. M. Chesley, of Norman County, be one of the representatives. Hugh Thompson seconded the motion and moved to make it by acclamation, which was done, and O. A. Myran moved that Ole L. Rindal, of Rindal, Norman County, be made the second representative by acclamation. Carried.

Moved by A. D. Stephens that the chair appoint a legislative committee of seven members, said committee to select the remaining candidate for representative and place him on the ticket.

Hugh Thompson moved to instruct said committee to select such candidate from Polk County and to make such selection in ten day. Carried.

The chair annouced as such committee, Felix Fournet, John Alderman, Hugh Thompson and Frank E. Hunt, of Polk County, F. Krebs, of Beltrami County, and D. C. Lightbourn and O. H. Myran, of Norman County.

When it comes to the point that one man dictates the politics of the county the rest of the people might as well give him their proxy and move out. It seems easy enough for one man to control a convention but the ballots belong to the people.

Fergus Falls Weekly Journal: The Little Falls convention in re-nominating Congressman Comstock by acclamation did only what it was expected to do, and what Mr. Comstock's due after his faithful services in behalf of his constituents, but its action must have been something of a surprise to those who have been announcing disaffection and dissatisfaction in the republican ranks, It is a good time to speak of Mr. Comstock's conscientious and satisfactory work in congress. During his short term of two years he has established a reputation for himself in the national councils that far overtops that of any of his follow-members who enterd congress at the time he did. He is recognized as one of the hardest working, most thoughtful and intelligent men in the chamber among the recently-elected members. His work for his constituents has been persistent and successful. He is now in a position to do better work than he has ever done before because the first two years of a congressman's service are in great measure years of probation and scrutiny. He has passed that period and will hereafter become one of the recognized leaders from the nothwest. His action on all questions has been charaterized by conservatism and good judgment. His position on the tariff question is the position that would be taken by any intelligent man in his situation. He counted the cost carefully, and did what seemed the wisest thing for the benefit of his constituents, As one of the republican adherents he could obtain many advantages for the First district which otherwise could not have been secured, His vote and successful work for a lower tariff on binding twine materials and free sugar shows that his first thought was for the benefit of his district. To have done more would have been to butt his head against a stone wall and sacrifice many other advantages equally as important to northwestern farmers as a lower tariff. There is no part of the district in which his intelligence and clear-headed regard for our interests is not conceded. His second term will be prolific of even better things for his constituents than the first. It is correct to speak of his second term as a settled fact, because it is such. It it as certain as any future event can be. There are too many thoughtful, independent voters in the Fifth district for his defeat to be a possibility. It will be to the advantage of Otter Tail county particularly to see that his vote is increased not diminished, for he has in all ways shown himself our friend, and will continue to do so if he is permitted by our conduct toward him.

"Always in Front"

Both in point of time and merit, can be said for "Peterson." The October number is splendid. One of the engravings gives the portrait of a popular poetess, and illustrations are numerous and good in quality. There is a complete novelet by M. G. McClelland called "The Watch of the Big Heart Lode" which is the most dramatic and interesting of her stories that we have ever seen. "An Unforseen Crisis" by Frank Lee Benedict opens in a spirited fashion. There is a capital sketch by Lucy H. Hooper. The shorter stories are all good, and so is the poetry, among which is a little gem from Minna Irving. "Successful Moving" is an article to interest every housekeeper, and the paper on "Ferns" will be welcome to all who indulge in window winter gardening. The fashion department is rich in fine plates showing novel costumes for fall wear. Fresh improvements are contemplated for the coming year, which will make "Peterson" more attractive than ever. Terms Two dollars a year. Address Peterson's Magazine, 306 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

Fergus Falls Weekly Journal: Congressman Comstock did not attend the convention which nominated him. Work at Washington prevented him. His regard for duty is in sharp contrast to those members of the house who have been absent half the session setting up the pins for their own selfish advantage. The district will remember it.

Wabasha Herald: The coroner's jury which acted in the case of Frank Netzer, who was killed in a cable car accident in Chicago, returned a verdict censuring the car company, and placed the blame on the employes of the company. Mrs. Netzer will commence an action for damages unless the matter can be satisfactorily settled between the company and her. She expects to be able to collect large damages.

Fisher Bulletin: Mr. W. M. Skinner, who has been trying for the past two years to find the will left by his father, who died in England several years ago, was rewarded for his search by receiving from the probate Judge of the court of Exeter, England, a copy of the will, last Friday, which makes him heir to £1200. Mr. Skinner contemplates a trip to the old country this fall to claim his heritage. We are very glad that Mr. Skinner has been so fortunate in this matter. He has two brothers and two sisters who will receive like amounts.

Princeton Union: And Sol. Comstock was renominated, of course. Everybody knew he would be and it was right, Seldom has a district had a more faithful representative than the great Fifth of Minnesota. And he has been extremely fortunate too in matters of legislation. It is said that the bills he has got through will result in distributing about $800,000 of government money in that district. Well, that is a help, A great deal of it will stay there and neary every man will be benefited by it. Oh, yes, the Fifth will do well to return Comstock and Republicans seem to be well aware of it.

The Alliance's Mission.

Minneapolis Jurnal.

This is said to be an "off year" in politics; but it is not much of an "off year" as that term is usually understood; for it is the first year in which the Farmer's Alliance has so solidly massed its forces against the old parties, those forces having now swollen to nearly 4,000,000 members. It is a far more formidable movement throughout the country than was the Prohibition new departure, for it draws votes from old parties, is more aggressive, and does not interfere with personal habits or inclinations. The Farmer's Alliance is a new element in politics which, with several impracticable features, yet means legitimate business sufficiently to make congressmen and senators revise their opinions and hustle around vigorously to get in touch with the Alliance men.

This vast organization, if maintained a year or two, will inject a decided element of uncertainty into the calculations of the old parties. The Alliance will never be a dominant political party, because it is made up of a class and proposes class legislation; but its work will be to lift politics out of the old ruts and make new issues for the older parties to array themselves upon. It promises to be the solvent of the Solid South problem, and do more than all the reconstruction acts and force bills assumed to do, in bringing about the desired accord between the sections.

There can be no "off year" in politics with the Alliance in motion. Its strongest feature is the unmistakable demand for tariff reform. Not all the sophistry of the advocates of the McKinly bill, protesting that the new tariff is "the farmer's tariff," has deceived the alliance. In platform after platform, the demand is reiterated for tariff revision in the interest of the nation. The influence of the alliance in this direction is very great. It will inevitably work a healthful change in the tariff system, removing the extreme, selfish, one sided, unpopular features and giving us a tariff devised on the true American system which is protection to native industry and labor without elevating the manufacturers into a selfish guild of monopolists.

Grand Forks Daily Herald: Joe Roberton, a farmer residing near Mallory had a singular misfortune yesterday. Mr. Roberton was drawing water from a well and accidentally toppled over, falling a distance of forty feet. There were five feet of water in the well at the time. No one was present when Mr. Roberton fell and it was fully half an hour afterwards before his predicament was discovered. Mr. Roberton's injuries were comparatively slight—a broken leg—condering the distance he fell.

Value of Independence.

West Duluth Sun: That it would be better for the state and better for the nation were there independence enough to make either party fear the results of wrong doing, is not to be questioned. Both of the great parties have too many members whose allegiance to the party is blind to the people's interests, and who will, to use a common expression, vote for the party if the devil were in the lead; for it is such allegiance that permits, nay encourages the political crimes too often committed by the mrjority party. If the balance of power could be placed in the hands of citizens who would be guided in all matters political by their devotion to country, and not to party, it would be a blessing indeed.

A Relentless Foe.

Selected: "It may seem strange, but is nevertheless true, that alcohol regularly applied to the thrifty farmer's stomach will remove the boards from the fences, let the cattle into his crops, kill his fruit trees, mortgage his farm, and sow his fields with wild oats and thistles. It will take the paint off his building, break the glass out of the windows and fill them with rags. It will take the gloss from his manners' subdue his reason, arouse his passions bring sorrow and disgrace upon his family, and topple him into a drunkard's grave. It will do this to the artisan and capitalist, the matron and maiden, as well as to the farmer, for in its deadly enmity to the human race alcohola is no respecter of persons."

An Iniquitous Mortgage.

Kan. Farmer: A land mortgage as framed and operated in some of the western states must have had for its author no less a personage than the devil, and must have been sent forth by him among men to blight, rob and distroy, driving families from once happy homes, hopeless and penniless, and pursuing them relentlessly for years after, ever ready to grab what they may acquire. A love for equity and justice had no place in the mind that formulated the loan-company land mortgage, with its coupon interest notes and its "cut-throat" clauses. The laws which have legalized it, and which provide for its collection and foreclosure, are a disgrace to a civilized people.

Emancipate Industry.

Lyman Abbot: "So long as there are women in cities who buy their food only by selling their womanhood, so long as there are men in the rich coal fields of Illinois that must stand without, shivering at the door with pick in hand and muscle ready for work, while wealth locks the coal field up against them and against a shivering population; so long as in the iron fields of Pensylvania men are working twelve hours a day, with no time even to court their wives or kiss their children, so long my hand and my heart are enlisted in any and evey movement that gives fair promise for the emancipation of man by the emancipation of industry."

MINNESOTA

State Normal Schools

—AT—

WINONA, MANKATO, ST. CLOUD AND MOORHEAD.

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the common schools of the State.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments—the Normal Department and the Training department or Model School. The Normal Department embraces:

(a) An Elementary Course, for teachers of rural schools and elementary grades.

(b) An advanced course, for teachers of advanced grades.

(c) A Professional Course, for teachers who have completed the required academic work elsewhere.

(d) A Kindergarten Training Course, (at Winona.

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and colleges, and teachers holding County Superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted without examination. All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of three dollars a year. Provisions are made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished room with board is about $3.00 per week.

The next school year opens Sept. 1st, 1890.

For particulars concerning the several schools send for catalogues to the Presidents as follows:

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more fully shown by the following statement: A, aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his insurance	$88 44
Each year on his loan for interest	80 00
Total yearly payments	$168 44
Total for ten years	1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $184.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

The Reason Why.

By J. A. Tetts, in National Economist.

Every body knows that of all classes of men the producer pays a higher price for the pleasures and comforts of life than any other. When I say producer I mean the man who by muscular power drags forth from nature's storehouse the elements that go to make a distinction between the comforts of civilization and the meagre necessities of barbarism. The man who guides the plow through seed time and gathers through the harvest; who digs from the bowels of the earth the iron ore, the coal, or anything else that adds to comfort for humanity, is a producer. The mechanic, the lumberman, the weaver, the seamstress, the dairyman, the stock raiser, are all producers. Again I say that of all classes of men the comforts and luxuries of life cost most to the producer. Why? Let us investigate a little. In primitive America every farm and village contained all the elements that went to make up the comforts and most of the luxuries of the inhabitants. As time went on men began to see that specialism was more sensible than universalism. So far as production went Thomas Jones was better as a wheelright than as a farmer, so Thomas went to making wagons and depended for his farm products on his neighbors, who were better farmers that he. Jack Brown made such a poor job at blacksmithing that he concluded that he had better hire Bill Smith to make his plows and pay him for them in corn and potatoes. So the division of labor brought better results, but with it was developed a class who were destined to be a great trouble to all concerned. This was the distributing class. Thomas Jones and Bill Smith were capable of making more plows and wagons than were needed by their neighbors, so they had to find a market for their products. This set on foot the class who distribute or find a market for the surplus produced. So long as Tom Jones and Bill Smith and Jack Brown could make and do their own trading all went well, because if Bill Smith charged high for blacksmithing Jack Brown could charge more for his corn and potatoes and keep even with him; but when it came to disposing of the surplus there arose a difficulty, Tom Jones had to take for his wagons whatever Peter Thompson, the speculator, chose to give him. Peter Thompson was a sharp trader and at first brought to Tom Jones and Bill Smith good returns for their labor, and they prospered and were well pleased. Jack Brown also employed him to dispose of his surplus corn and potatoes. As time went on each narrowed the field of his labors, until the lrrger part of his product became a surplus to the neighborhood, and Peter Thompson came more and more into demand, and by his shrewdness he made for himself a good living by the exchange and sale of the products of his neighbors, until he came to be looked upon as the most important man in the community. If any one of the people wanted anything not made or raised in the neighborhood Peter Thompson would always supply it from somewhere else.

As the country developed the idea of specialism developed with it, and one point devoted its almost entire attention to manufacturing; another to grain growing, another to cotton planting, and so on. This more widely separated the different classes of actual producers, and called into use more extensively the class represented by our friend Peter Thompson. As continued progress was made toward developing the agricultural, mining and manufacturing interests of our country the Peter Thompson system was too simple to suit the tastes and ambitions of the class he had represented with so much honor to himself, and use to his friends. This class began to reason that they were the more intelligent, and were in a position to make themselves more useful to themselves. They soon inaugurated numerous systems that required much money, and they saw the opportunity to do more for themselves than they had been doing, and what they consider a fair week's pay for their wonderful services a poor farmer or mechanic whose produce they handle would be glad to get for a half year's hard labor. While this class do not mine the gold or precious stones, they handle them from the first, and all that is of value is appropriated thet they dare to appropriate. While the working men could meet on equal terms and exchange product for product, they could keep the wealth they produced between them in their own hands, but now since this cumbrous system of exchange and distribution has taken full possession of the channels of trade the simple producer is lost sight of in the scramble for possession of his wealth. Poor Thomas Jones now no longer makes wagons and trades for corn, pork and potatoes with farmer Jack Brown. Bill Smith still makes plows, and Jack Brown still buys them, but they have moved so far apart that the plow that he used to get two bushels of corn for now only brings him a peck—it takes so much labor for young Mr. Pierre Thomasson to bring the corn to him that he must have the other seven pecks to remunerate him for his services—that is, remunerate him and his co-laborers. Jack Brown gets the plow but he now has to pay three bushels of corn for it, so that Thompson & Co. must have the two extra bushels to remunerate them for having it carried through the progressive civilization system of mercantile distribution, While Jones and Brown are daily growing poorer, the managers and employees of the distributive system are daily growing richer. The produce of Brown that used to make comfort his and Jone's families is now divided, and the lion's share goes to the distributor. The luxuries that the working man produces are taken from the class in the process of distribution. A very good illustration of the system is this: A is the owner of a cow, M is the owner of a churn; A must have butter; he hands B the pail of milk after milking and tells him to pass it on to M to have it churned as he wants butter, and B passed it to C after taking a cupful, C passes it to D after taking a cupful, and so on though E. F. G. H. I. J K. and L. M churns the remainder, takes his remuneration and starts the remainder back through the hands of L. K. J, I. H. G. F. E. D. C. B. and finally A gets probably the empty vessel. This is about the system we, the working men, have allowed thrust upon us through the class we call the distributor. Until we get nearer together, and shorten the distance between the producer and the consumer, we need not hope for permanent relief. All the money in the world divided among the working poor of our country would not keep them from being poor twenty years hence if the same system of distribution remain in vogue. A large number of men and a large amount of money are necessary to handle the produce of American labor, but as the matter now stands the surplus left from a special producer will not market itself and purchase his necessities, in which he comes up with a deficiency.

A produces 1,000 bushels of corn. He needs 800 for his own use; 700 bushels are a surplus. He needs sugar, molasses, clothing, and other thing. This 700 bushels will not appear in the market in which he has to purchase these things at half its value, because it will take over half its value to pay cost of delivery in a market where there is a deficiency. In the market where rice, sugar and molasses are a surplus corn is in demand, but it takes a great deal of the surplus to buy a little of the deficiency. In the exchange of these two surpluses and the supplying these two deficiencies is where there the distributing class, who should be a blessing, become a curse. They toll both ways. They toll the milk as it is going to the churn and they toll the butter and buttermilk on its return. They fatten while A and M grow lean. A represents the agriculturalist, M the mechanic; B. C. D. E. etc., represent the tollgates that stand between them and rob both of all the wealth they produce. Let us take a little spell at figuring. Since the war there has been produced in the South one hundred and sixty-two million and a half bales of cotton at $50 per bale, which is too low an estimate. This would amount to seven billion dollars. How much of this seven billion remains on the farms that produce it? But very little of it. On over half of the farms of the South diversfied farming is practiced to some extent, which shows that this almost incalculable wealth was not consumed by those who created it. Some parts of the South are wealthier then previous to the war, if the press tells the truth, but this is owing more to imported capital than created wealth remaining. Go to the cities and you see where it has partly lodged in course of transit. Go to the manufacturing cities and the speculative centers of the North and East and you will see where much more of it exists. It passes out of the hands of the cotton planter, and in many cases he yet owes for part of the necessities he consumed while creating it. It is not only so of the South and her cotton fields; it is so of the West and her grain fields. Her stock farms are equally as bleak a picture. Where wealth and comfort are produced the producers have only poverty and are bankrupt. Why? Because the producer are too far apart; the lines of distribution are too long; the opportunities for fraud and robbery are too great. The great army of middle men look upon the producer as only their legitimate prey. They are the eagle who sits upon the tree top watches the fishhawk. The producer is the fishhawk. When he catches a fish the eagle swoops down on him and takes the fish. Peter Thompson was a friend and useful neighbor to Tom Jones, Bill Smith, and Jack Brown, but from him sprung a race who are like the Bedouins of the desert, who rob the honest caravan. Some narrow minded, short sighted people advise the farmer to live at home. These would have the farmer's wife spin and weave the family clothing; have the Southern farmer trying to grow three dollars worth of wheat where ten dollars worth of cotton would surely grow; trying to raise sugar and rice where it is almost too cold for cotton, and where it would not be certain to mature seed. I am well satisfied with the distribution of agriculture. The North and West each grow wheat and raise pork cheaper than we can and we can raise cotton, sugar and rice cheaper than they can; and the men who make cloth, shoes, plows and wagons can make them cheap enough. The trouble lies in the robbery between producer and consumer. Let us all work to bring the different classes of producers closer together and try to keep the wealth we create more in our own hands. The labor in the field ought to be a friend to the labor in the factory and the mine, The labor in the cotton field ought to be a friend to the labor in the grainfield. The sugar raiser should be a friend to all, for all consume his product and he consumes a part of each of theirs. They ought to unite to crush off the leeches that are sucking the life blood of all, and then we could see where more of the wealth we produce remains with us.

Mortgage Sale.

WHEREAS, EDWIN P. CAPEN AND MATTIE C. Capen, his wife, of Polk County. State of Minnesota, as mortgagors, did, on the 4th day of August, A. D. 1885, duly execute and deliver to The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London, (Limited), of London, England, their mortgage bearing date of June 20th, A. D. 1885, whereby they mortgaged to said mortgagee the following described lands situated in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: All of fractional Section 3, Township 149, Range 47 west, containing 652 96-100 acres, to secure the payment of the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars, with interest thereon, according to the conditions of one certain promissory note, with interest coupons attached, bearing even date with said mortgage, and made by said mortgagors to said mortgagee, or order, which said mortgage was on the 10th day of August, A. D. 1885, at 1:20 o'clock p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, in book 26 of mortgages, on pages 480 to 483 inclusive; and

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the sum of two hundred dollars, due as interest upon said mortgage on the 1st day of January, A. D. 1890, and on the further sum of ninety-four and 40-100 dollars due as interest thereon on the 20th day of June, A. D. 1890, and the said interest is still unpaid and due; and

Whereas, it was stipulated by and between the parties to said mortgage, that if default should be made in any of the conditions or covenants therein contained on the part of the mortgagors, to be kept and performed, that then and from thenceforth it shall be lawful for the said mortgagee, or its assigns, to consider and declare the whole sum secured thereby as immediately due and payable without notice to said mortgagors, or any other party; and

Whereas, The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London (Limited) has exercised its option to consider and declare, and does hereby consider and declare the whole sum of money secured by said mortgage to be due and payable; and

Whereas, there is now due, and claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of twenty-eight hundred thirty-two and 52-100 dollars, and no proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land therein described, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in said County and State, on the 27th day of September, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the sum due on said mortgage, together with taxes, if any, on said premises, and one hundred dollars attorney's fees therein stipulated to be paid in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Dated August 5th, A. D. 1890.

The National Farmers Congress.

The National Economist.

The tenth annual meeting of this body at Council Bluffs, Iowa, was largely attended. A number of interesting papers were read, one on the political obligations of farmers, by Alonzo Wardall, of Huron, S. D., showing something of the animating feeling in the farmer's movement in the great Northwest:

We have gathered from the four quarters of the country to counsel together as to the best methods of conducting our business, and to learn by each other's experience that we may profit by our successes, and guard against a repetition of our failures. And it is well that we should thus meet. Each year adds to our store of knowledge, and should render us more useful and helpful to each othor.

I have been asked to present a few thoughts upon the political obligations of the farmer, which I shall do from a purely non-partisan standpoint, and although written especially for the farmer, they are applicable to every man who follows an industrial occupation. Two-fifths of the voters in the United States are directly engaged in agriculture (and the other three-fifths are as directly interested in the welfare of the agriculturist). Four-fifths of the taxes of the nation are paid by the farmer and our interests extend to every county and township. Our products enter into nearly all the commercial transactions, furnishing 80 per cent of our vast export trade, and the raw material for many of the manufacturers that contribute to the prosperity of the people are furnished by us. The immense carrying trade of our railroads, aggregating in freights and fares for the year 1889, nearly a billion of dollars, is mainly dependent upon agriculture. In the role of commerce, a generous portion of our imports must also be credited to the farmer. In a political way he easily holds the balance of power in the nation, while in many of the States he has an actual working majority. He is intelligent, patriotic, conservative, frugal, temperate, law abiding, home making and home loving. The primary prosperity of the country rests upon his success. Crime, vagrancy, pauperism, idleness, vice, are at a minimum with him. The country undoubtedly owes a great debt of gratitude to its rural population; but here comes the question. Who constitute the country? Are not the farmers, themselves, component parts of the that same country, and does not the possession of numbers, power, wealth, and other deep and important interests with it a corresponding responsibility? Are we not citizens? And does not that entail upon us certain duties that we have no right to neglect? Possessing as we do such vast interests that must be controlled under our form of government by political action, are we fulfilling our duty, if through indifference we fail to study and practice political as well as scientific agriculture? There exists, and no well informed man will question it, however he may differ from my conclusions as to the remedy, a grievous and disastrous agricultural depression in nearly every portion of the union; farming has ceased to reward the husbandman as it was wont; his debts increase, and his debt paying ability steadily decreases. Dissatisfaction and unrest pervade the land.

For generations prior to tne war, the American farmer was the peer, socially, politically and financially of any class in the land. Slowly but surely he grew with the country; as the national domain broadened by opening up new States, so his acres increased. His children grew to manhood and womanhood, and settled contentedly upon new farms, and added their share toward the general progress of the country. Socially either at home or abroad, he was respected and self-respecting. Politically, he filled creditably the position of President, Senator, Congressman Judge, Governor, Cabinet and Foreign Minister, State and county office to the full extent his numbers and interest entitled him. The country prospered; strikes were rare; tramps unknown, and the Breærian-armed mortgage flourished not. Then came the war and a new order of things. While the patricoti farmer boys were at the front, shoulder to shoulder, with their town and city brothers fighting for the land they loved, because it was their very own, a set of politicians managed to secure the reins of Government, and by bold chicano and secura intrigue, by golden arguments and treacherous falsehoods, have held it for five and twenty years, and to-day mark the change. Have we a farmer President? No. Have we farmer Senators? Two out of eighty-four. Have we farmer Representatives? Fifteen out of three hundrad and thirty. Judges? Unheard of. Governors? Rarely. Control of State legislatures? Very seldom. Has the country grown? Very rapidly; population doubled; wealth wonderfully increased. How is it with the farmer, has his numbers increased with the increase of population? Yes. Have his acres increased in proportion? No. Has his wealth increased in just proportion? No; far from it. In 1850, he owned 70 per cent of the property of the United States; in 1880, 33 per cent: and it is almost certain that the census of 1890 will reduce that to 15 or 20 per cent? Has he been relieved of a proportionate share of taxes? Ah, no. In 1860, he paid 80 per cent; and in 1885, 80 per cent; that is one blessing he still enjoys unmolested. Are his sons taking warning by their fathers mistakes, and seeking to better their conditian? Yes; by leaving the farm and flocking to the already overcrowded cities. The only crop that seems to flourish and succed on every kind of soil, always commanding a high price, without danger of overproduction, so far as the market is concerned, seems to be the imported, high bred, real estate mortgage at 7 per cent interest and 3 per cent bonus, and the mongrel domestic, half savage, cross grained chattel mortgage at 10 per cent interest and 10 per cent bonus renewable every 60 days or until death. Like the Russian thistle and the English sparrow, the crop of mortgages have wonderfully increased the past few years, until it has become a question of their overthrow, or the delivery of the land into their possession. The increase of mortgage indebtedness is particularly alarming; more than doubling in the State of Illinois and Indiana since 1880; Illinois increasing from 204,000,000 in 1880 to 416,000,000 in 1887; 103 per cent in seven years, and nearly every Western and Southern State is in a similarly unfortunate condition. Farm property has been steadily decreasing in value for the yast fifteen years. The remarkable spectacle is presented of a country growing rich with great rapidity, while the mass of the people who produce all the wealth are steadily growing poorer. A prominent economic writer states that in 1889, 5,200,000 men and women in these United States worked for an average of less than $200 each for the entire year, and I assert without fear of successful contradiction that the average farmer does not receive $300 per year net for the labor of himself and family. When he contrasts this meagre income, out of which he must feed, clothe and educate his family, pay his taxes, interest on his mortgage, (no hope of meeting the principal,) with the millions harvested by single individuals or corporations annually, and from the very products he helps raise, small wonder that he complains, and less wonder that he begins to look about him for the cause of all this, and a remedy therefor. The result has been inquiry, agitation, education on economic lines, organization for self help and co-operative assistance, and after long consultation, thoughtful men have become satisfied that the only hope for the farmer is to demand a radical change in the system of vicious class legislation that has grown and flourished in the past quarter of a century.

They believe that our legislation is controlled in the interests of Wall street and the national banks; that our curency has been contracted until it is insufficient for the successful and profitable of our commerce; that our railroads and our telegraphs, being public necessities, should be run by the government in the interest of the people; that our rates of interest are unnecessarily high; that corporations and combines for the manifest purpose of enhancing unduly the costs of the necessities of life are against public policy and should be prohibited; that taxation is unequal, the greater the wealth, as a rule, the less proportionate tax paid. (In 1850 the total estimated valuation of all property in the United States was $7,135,000,000, which was assessed for taxation at $6,024,000,000, while in 1880 it was valued at $43,642,000,000 and taxed at $16,902,0000,000, of which in both instances land paid full 80 per cent, leaving the necessary inferece that banking, railroad and corporate wealth generally must have evaded taxation). That our farms and the public domain are rapidly and surely being absorbed by corporations and alien landholders, thus threatening the stronghold of American liberty, the free, independent farmer and home owner; that our votes are being debauched in the interests of monopoly by intimidation or bribery; that the American saloon, that foul octopus whose hydro head, upreared in every hamlet, brings sorrow, discord and destruction, and whose slimy arms would drag down every virtue and strangle every industry, has become a dangerous factor in politics as well as morals; that one-half of our citizens, and they the best, purest, and most law abiding, our own true wives and mothers, are deprived of the rights guaranteed them by our great charter that says "All just governments derive their powers from the consent of the governed."

In view of all these things, and many more that might be enumerated, that can only be remedied by state and national legislation, it becomes evident that the farmer must wake from this Rip Van Winkle sleep of the last twenty-five years, during which time he has been voted by his party bosses like so many automations, and if perchance he flared feebly up and threatened to assert himself the bloody shirt was flapped in his face, the straw man yelped, tariff was pounded more vigorously than ever and the party lash, wielded by skillful and unsrupulous hands, kept the party line intact and the boodlers and vultures son hung to their prey.

But at last, thank God, the morn is breaking; like a great tidal wave the Farmers' Alliance has been growing, that cradle of patriotism and intelligence swells high above partisan protest and hatred one united demand for

1. More money; issued direct to the people by the government, at a low rate of interest, without the intervention of national banks.

2. Government ownership of railroads and telegraphs; and that they be run in the interest of the people and at actual cost.

3. The restoration of all unearned land grants to the public domain and provisions made to prevent the securing or holding of large tracts of land by aliens or corporations.

The uniform decision is that we must send representative men to the legislature to give us these reforms. We believe that a legislature composed of one or two classes can not, will not and should not be expected to understand and provide equally for all other interests. (Our legislatures, as a rule, are composed of a strong majority of lawyers and bankers, thus giving to those two classes, the smallest numerically, the absolute veto power of all legislation.) We must exercise good common sense on this as well as other subjects, and if we want work done do it ourself and not send a substitute who neither understands nor cares for the situation.

There are two ways of acomplishing this object first by organizing an Independent Reform Party, with specific objects in view, plainly set forth in the platform, and with representative farmers and laborers nominated to carry them out. This a large number of the States are doing with a strength and enthusiasm that is causing the old parties no little uneasiness and bids fair to replace many a corporation attorney or national banker in Congress with a representative of the people. Second, by asserting our strength and possessing ourselves of the old party machinery and putting true men to the fore on a platform recognized our demands and condemning the failures of the past, and particularly pledging them to ignore party caucus (that grave of good intentions) whenever the people's interest and our specific demands are at stake, otherwise we shall gain nothing, as a partisan, be he ever so true and honest is but a tool of the designing managers of his party, who are pledged body and soul to our enemies, the monopolists. Where neither Independent party nor pledged candidates are in the field, we urge every farmer and laborer to see to it that a series of questions, including the demands of the Alliance as outlined here, be publicly propounded to the candidates of both parties and a full and positive answer demanded, and where a refusal is made, defeat them if you can. Every farmer should register a solemn vow that with him principle shall be stronger than party, and men be better than platforms. Organize yourselves for protection and education; respect yourselves and honor your calling. Leave the lawyers and bankers at home for a time, and strive to secure legislation for the masses and not the classes.

Blaine's Lead.

Toledo Blade.

In 1888, James G. Blaine, in a letter from Europe, gave the keynote of success in the presidential and congressional elections of that year. In his plan of reciprocity, he has done the same thing for 1892. There is, doubtless, in the minds of some other prominent republicans, an envious sting, that they did not have that marvelous prescience, that comprehensive grasp of the whole situation, to evolve the plan instead of Blaine; but the tremendous favor with which it is received all over the country has shown them, if they ever doubted it, that Blaine has again asserted his sagacious statesmanship by indicating the only true and safe line of national policy.

Hence they are coming into line in support of the idea. Senator Sherman followed the lead by his resolutions for reciprocity with Canada. His proposition is, when Canada will admit free coal from this country, that we shall admit Canada coal free; and that the president shall have power to appoint a commission to formulate a plan for the extension of our reciprocal relations whenever Canada shall signify her willingness to appoint a similar one; and that the result of their joint labors shall be reported to the president and be by him communicated to congress for its action.

Mr. Sherman's method of beginning is a safe one. Canada does not mine as much coal as she consumes. Her principal mines are in Nova Scotia, and are nearer to a great part of New England than the Pennsylvania coal fields are. That part of the Dominion along the great lakes is much nearer our Pennsylvania and Ohio coal fields than to the Nova Scotia mines. Hence, reciprocity in the matter of coal will harm neither country's coal mining industry. It will give New England people a closer source of supply, and hence at lower freight rates; it will do the same for the Canadians along the lakes, and westward to Vancouver. And we shall sell more coal to Canada than she will sell to us.

Nor can Mr. Sherman be accused of copying from Ben Butterworth and Erastus Wiman, who have been talking of reciprocity with Canada for several years. These gentlemen advanced an abstract proposition; they wanted reciprocity, but had formulated no plan for obtaining it. Mr. Sherman comes to the front with a business proposition, whose merits or demerits can be at once ascertained and discussed. The tariff issue is certain of settlement in the minds of the practical masses, now that it has been put on a business basis and the free trade doctrinaires of the Mills and Hurd School will find their occupation gone.

National Economist: U. B. Guinn, of Nance, N. C., sends a telegram clipped from a daily paper, telling that the banks of Kansas City and a few other Missouri points are overwhelmed with silver coin, which they are shipping to the sub-treasury at St. Louis to exchange for silver notes, paying an express charge of $1 for each $1,000 so shipped. He concludes: "This statement rather staggers a financial dunderhead. If silver coin is such a drug as therein stated, it's hard to understand how the free coinage of silvea is going to help matters in the way of making money more plentiful by its circulation or distribution, for according to this statement, the greater the quantity of silver coined the more it will be disgorged from the banks back into the Treasury to be exchanged for silver notes. If the banks become so overwhelmed with silver coin that they have to return it to the Treasury, I don't see how a flexibility of the currency is to be effected by unlimited silver coinage, nor by what process it can get into circulation. If such is to be the fate of unlimited coinage why not issue Treasury notes and be done with it." One of the gold-bug arguments in the late silver discussion was that the fashionable shoppers in Macy's New York store refused cart-wheel dollars in change, evidencing the unpopularity of siver. Paper is certainly preferable to any kind of metal as a currency. The great significant fact, however, stares the people in the face, that the bonded debt is payable in coin, and in failing to provide coin preparations are being laid for a "corner" which will compel an issue of bonds to extend the public debt when it becomes due. Why not cease silver coinage? Because, by virtue of manipulation of public debt, neither Treasury notes nor silver certificates are full legal tender. Perhaps the banks, the holders of bonds, help create this impression of the unpopularity of the "dollar of our daddies."

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more fully shown by the following statement: A, aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his insurance.........$88 44
Each year on his loan for interest.......... 80 00
Total yearly payments...$ 168 44
Total for ten years.........1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest..........$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of.......... 500 00
When the loan is due he pays.. 1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years.......... 1500 00

As much within $184.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest..........$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years.... 1000 00
Total..........$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

Pete Cornelius informs THE JOUANAL that he has threshed out 10,000 bushels of oats and barley and will commence to pound out wheat to-day. We hope his wheat pile will equal the oats and barley yield.

Mrs. S. H. Barteau returned on Monday morning from the W. C. T. U. convention at Minneapolis. The papers speak of the convention as the "finest body of earnest women ever gathered together in the state."

Fred Chapin went to Devil's Lake on Friday to take his engine, after a month's vacation, during which time he has become a full-fledged benedict. Mrs. Chapin will remain in the city awhile, probably during the winter.

The Alliance has placed the name of Adolph Biermann, democratic nominee for State Auditor, upon its ticket, in place of Pat Rahilly, resigned. This nomination will hustle our Mac more than any other combination, but then Mac is a hustler anyhow.

An emissary came up from St. Paul on Saturday for to pour some 'ile' onto the troubled waters, but found the boys using electric lights—at least they're pretty well charged with electricity and don't use 'ile' in their business. Oh, [illegible] fiddle, de banjo am unstrung; no more will you hear de ol' slave singin', when de master cracks de whip an' blows de horn.

A. R. Holston was in from the Falls on Tuesday to attend the committee meeting. Referring to THE JOURNAL'S remark last week about his harvesting, he says his harvesting is all done and he has now started up his threshing machine.

The Alliance has put a strong legislative ticket in the field and now if they stand by their guns they will elect it. With Governor Owen to back it up it will be surprising if a way cannot be found to establish a free and open wheat market.

A. R. Holston's brother-in-law, John Swanson, of Cokato, Minn., has been nominated for the legislature by the republicans of Wright County. A. R. says that he is sorry Mr. Swanson don't know any better than to run on the republican ticket this year.

Jake Francis says the cow-yard under the Seventh street bridge is an unmitigated nuisance and should be abated at once if the people in that neighborhood wish to preserve their health. Says he has complained several times but it does not seem to do any good.

Governor Owen spoke at the St. Cloud fair last week to a large audience. Mr. Owen is not one of your ranting political speakers who pose for effect, but an earnest, upright man engaged in a good cause, and he makes friends wherever he goes. He will continue on the stump during the campaign.

Fred M. Brown, republican nominee for Secretary of State, was in the city on Tuesday, looking the field over. Mr. Brown is a quiet farmer-like man and makes a good impression wherever he goes. We believe he is the best man for the position now in the field, and THE JOURNAL advocates the election of the best men. In this way only can the best interests of the State be subserved.

We sit in our den at midnight when the clock is ticking away, and we think of the cash subscriber, who has wandered in to-day. We con over all the good things that dollar 'n a half will buy, and the joy which the thought brings o'er us gushes forth from our mild blue eye. How often, oh how often, in the days that are to come, do we wish for the subscribers to hustle themselves and come. How often, oh, how often, as the days go moseying past, we would long if that could help it, that this cash down business would last; but, alas! our heart is weary, likewise our pale blue eyes, for few and far between meals comes to us such glad surprise. Yet we sit in our den at midnight, and scratch with stubby pen, and long for the cash subscriber to wander in again, and we think mayhap some delinquent, may want to see our smile, and happen in to-morrow and swell our little pile.—[Ex.

The alliance central committee met in Crookston on Tuesday and placed in nomination Will Carlton, of Angus, as candidate for the legislature, in the place of Thos. Erwin. They also endorsed O. L. Hamery as county surveyor. The selection of Will Carlton was a wise one. Mr. C. is an American farmer, a man of liberal education and an old soldier, a member of Col. Cobham Post, of this city. Should he be elected he will fill the bill to the ample satisfaction of all. THE JOURNAL hopes and expects to see him elected.

Seven Up.

Red Lake Falls News: An Emardville farmer reports pretty tough luck. Says in the last two years he lost seven horses, and during the past few weeks seven sheep died on his farm besides three families of young pigs, 7 cattle and a calf seven months old, seven chickens and seven pigeons also died, all of the same disease, which is not known to him by name, the animals taking sick and dying suddenly by strangulation. He fears that some supernatural vengeance is visiting him and is strengthened in this conviction by the fact that number "seven" has run through the whole list. If the man is telling straight goods he has our sympathy, but we doubt him.

The Ogden Critic, says: Lew Johnson's minstrel troupe appeared last night at the Union Opera House and was receved by a large audience, the house being filled to overflowing. The evening was heartly enjoyed by all. The troupe has been in Ogden every year for four years in succession, and always was a favorite here. It was the judgement of all that this was the best troupe ever brought here. Many of the jokes were quite new and the hits really up to the standard. At the Opera House, Sept. 30th.

The Farmer's Movemnt.

Minneapolis Times.

The withdrawal of P. H. Rahilly from the farmer's alliance ticket does not signify that the movement is falling to pieces. It means that Mr. Rahilly would rather take his chances of being elected to the legislature as a farmer than to being defeated for auditor as a farmer. Every politician will understand Mr. Rahilly's position. He wants to succeed immediately. Mr. Owen's aim is a higher and broader one. He wants to bring the farmers of the north and west into line with the farmers of the south in a new party that will be in the control and in sympathy with the agricultural interests of the country. Such a movement is doomed to one or two defeats nodoubt. But one or two defeats did not kill the anti-slavery party, and one or two defeats will not squelch the anti-monopoly movement. Mr. Owen's position as outlined in his letter to the democratic convention is as logical as logic. It asks no man to follow him under a false pretense as that spoils are at hand and the fat of the earth will roll in the path of every voter who supports him. The entire movement, however, does promise an upward and onward trend in politics. The November election may bring decisive results, the battle may be drawn but it will be fought over again. The farmers are in politics this year with malice toward none but with a firm determination to clear the atmosphere of false and flippant issues and bring the old parties sharply face to face with the question. "What do you propose to do for the fundamental industry of this country?"

Owen's Chances.

Minneapolis Times.

The Evening Tribun denies the rumo that Hon. S. M. Owen contemplated withdrawing from the contest for governor on the Alliance ticket. As the rumor originated with the Tribune the denial was quite superfluous. So far from withdrawing Mr. Owen is the most conspicuous figure and the most popular candidate in this campaign. And his strength with the people is growing every day. He improves upon acquaintance. The more the people see of him the better they like him, and the more disposed they are to trust him. He has the faculity of winning friends wherever he goes, not by the ordinary trick of the stump, nor by demogogical appeals to the ignorance and prejudices of the people, but by clear, cogent and instructive discussions of questions that directly interest them, and concern the national welfare of the state. He is a manly man—an educated thoughtful, self-respecting gentleman—who holds his personal honor and his obligations as a citizen above any selfish ambition for office.

The alliance did not nominate Owen in the hope of electing him. In his speech of acceptance he stated that he did not expect to pull through, and he has never claimed that he will be elected. But the political situation is favorable to his candidacy and the cause of which he is so worthy a representative, and is within the range of possibilities that he may divide the vote of the state pretty evenly with the republican and democratic opponents. If W. W. Erwin's figures tally with the facts, Owen has the best of the triangular fight. The astute lawyer's estimate may be a trifle sanguine; but it is plausible and certainly interesting.

Chairman Boyd Appoints the Republican Fifth District Committee

The following are appointed as a Republican district committee for the Fifth congressional district of Minnesota.

OFFICE ON ROBERT STREET,
CROOKSTON, MINN

Minneapolis Times: In speaking of the alliance campaign yesterday, a gentleman prominently identified with that movement, said that the greatest source of weakness was its poverty. The other political organization were counting on the lack of means of the alliance to prevent it from thoroughly organizing and conducting a vigorous campaign and the thing most to be feared by the alliance in the event of its developing unexpected strength is the money that will be poured into the other campaigns. The great corporations are watching with unusual interest the growth of the new industrial party and they have already decreed that it must be defeated. The corporations principally interested are the railroads and elevator system. A rigid enforcement of the laws, that are already on the statute books of the state, would curtail their opportunites for making exorbitant profits and the election of the alliance ticket would place in power a railway and warehouse commission which would not stultify itself by winking at the violation of the law and entering into a compact with the railways and elevators to let them alone. For these and other reasons which the gentleman assigned, these corporations stood ready at any moment to contribute almost any sum to the campaign fund of the republican party should the strength of the alliance develop so rapidly as to require any unusual precautionary steps. This is what the alliance leaders fear most, that the monied influence of the state may find it necessary to literally buy Merriam's election at the polls in order to defeat the new party.

Marshall County Leader; Our Republican State Central Committee does not appear to have got on to the band wagon of real modern republicanism. In its recent address to the people it inclines to the waning idea of high protection. This would suit any of the parties in the east that are carried in the breeches pocket of the millionaire manufacturors, but it surely is not in line with the sentiment of the rank and file of any party in the west. The tariff plank enunciated in the platform of the Little Falls Republican convention and upon which our candidate for congress Mr. Comstock must stand without wavering, unless he is a self-confessed political pirate, is good enough for the republicans of the Fifth district, and it certainly does not stand as a shining mark of a strong high-protective feeling here. The Little Falls platform is not an uncertain jingle of words made, to satisfy the demands of all classes of political opinion but is square toed in its demand for a reduction of tariffs to the point necessary for government expense revenues. That is the way the republicans feel up in this part of the country, regardless of what a few professional politicians may profess.

The Alliance Tide Rising.

St. Paul Daily News.

The marked contrast between the reception accorded Mr. Owen, the Alliance candidate for governor, and governor Merriam, the Merriam candidate for re-election, at St. Cloud shows the popular sentiment which is running through the State.

It is in keeping with accounts which reach us from all parts of the State, and though the Daily News has not been one of those sanguine enough to believe that the new movement could win in its first round, it begins to look as though that judgment would have to be revised, and that the election of Mr. Owen is really quite a probability.

The contest as it stands to-day is between Owen and Wilson.

Merriam is out of the race.

Whether the lavish expenditure of money can recuperate his shattered fortunes only time can determine. But it seems very doubtful whether this will be possible.

This is a year when the Meraiam Republicans cannot safely count upon the strength of the regular Republican party being cast for their candidates.

There are two branches to the Republican party in Minnesta, and the Republican party proper is not supporting but is on the other hand rebuking, Gov. Merriam this year.

Merriam Republicans will find themselves in a hopeless minority when the votes are counted in November, and the anti-Merriam Republicans will become the party and take charge of the workings and machinery for the future.

WINONA, MANKATO, ST. CLOUD AND MOORHEAD.

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the common schools of the State.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments—the Normal Department and the Training department or Model School. The Normal Department embraces:

(a) An Elementary Course for teachers of rural schools and elementary grades.

(b) An advanced course, for teachers of advanced grades.

(c) A Professional Course, for teachers who have completed the required academic work elsewhere.

(d) A Kindergarten Training Course, (at Winona.

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and colleges, and teachers holding County Superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted without examination. All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of three dollars a year. Provisions are made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished room with board is about $3.00 per week.

The next school year opens Sept. 1st, 1890.

The Times intimates that Henry talks of starting a Wight man's party.

Laboring men, if you would subserve your own interests see that you cast your ballot for S. M. Owen.

Hon. S. G. Comstock voted for the Senate amendment to the tariff bill in the House. Mr. Comstock is an able man, a man of the people as everybody who knows him well knows. He is just the man to represent this District next term.

All of the great corporations, the elevator companies, the milling interests and the railroads oppose S. M. Owen's candidacy for governor. Such a man is a pretty good man for the ordinary mortal to tie to.

Abraham Lincoln was a man whose great heart beat in sympathy with the common people and his best efforts were always made in their behalf. S. M. Owen is just that kind of a man and that kind of republicanism is good enough for us.

Farmers, if you are faithful to your own interests S. M. Owen will be your next governor. You have a leader in whom you may well be proud and if you do your duty by him he will succeed. Remember Wisconsin and let us have a farmer Governor for Minnesota.

Farmers, it lies with you to say whether the evils that exist in the market system shall be corrected or not. The only chance you have lies in the election of S. M. Owen and a farmer legislature. Others are too busy with their own personal schemes to give a thought to the needs of agriculture.

The Litchfield Saturday Review contains an excellent portrait of P. J. McGuire, the future state auditor, and with other good things, says of him; "Mr. McGuire is very popular in his own county and when elected state auditor will no doubt be fully as popular all over the state." Right you are, Mr. Review.

Red Lake Falls News:—"Wouldn't it be a great joke if Owen should be elected?"

Thief River Falls Press:—"It would be a still greater surprise."

And it would be the very best thing that could happen to the State of Minnesota. S. M. Owen is pre-eminently a man of the people and his election will be a victory for the rank and file—the common, every-ay people.

The Republican legislative convention took one step in the right direction by endorsing B. M. Chesley, the Alliance candidate for the House. A most excellent example to follow. The Journal "sees" their "ante" and "raises" it to a 'full band."

And now every scalawag newspaper in this county and legislative district will turn its mud batteries loose upon The Journal, hoping to kick up enough of a dust to blind the eyes of doubtful voters. But it will not avail. Farmers have been fooled too often to be mis-led into voting against their own interests again. They have got their eyes wide open this trip, are doing some good hard thinking in their own behalf, and a mud slinging campaign wont wash. They know that S. M. Owen is not only their true friend but that he is pledged to their interests and they will not be humbugged into voting for any other candidate. Open out your mud-factories.

The Journal has strongly urged the farmers to elect a governor who is in full sympathy with them, one who fully understands their needs, and also a legislature to back him. The schemers in the republican party did not see it to their personal advantage to concede the reasonable demand of the farmers, while the rank and file of the party was in full accord with it. The Journal believes that the welfare of Polk County depends upon the regulation of the wheat market, believes that S. M. Owen and a farmer legislature is the best calculated to obtain this result, and therefore will support the farmers in their efforts to obtain these greatly to be desired results.

In 1885, the farmers of Minnesota, driven to desperation by the exactions of the wheat ring, brought their influence to bear upon the republican party and elected a farmer legislature. By this legislature, a law was passed intended to protect the farmer against the unjust methods of handling his wheat, but the law was not perfect and last fall the farmer found himself laboring under a system that gave him barely the cost of production for his wheat, and so, in looking the field over, he saw that other business interests were subserved and built up by organization; so the Alliance was formed, and as it grew in numbers the farmer saw in countless ways where it was a great advantage to him. He saw that one great defect in the grain law, that had been created for him and for which he pays good hard dollars was, in the method of making the appointments on the Board and under it, whereby the wheat ring secured full control of the making of the grades and operating the law in exchange for political influence to build up some aspiring politician. He then demanded control of the legislature and the election of a governor who would operate the law in the interest of the producing classes as far as it could be done, and not as a stepping stone to further his own political ambition. Upon the issue of the call for the republican State convention, interpreting that call to mean the furthering of the political ambitions of one man regardless of the interests of farmers and producers, the alliance issued a call to its members to meet to consider the question of independent action. The Journal, believing that the farmer could best secure his rights through the old parties by acting in and controlling them, opposed independent action to the best of its ability, foreseeing how easily the end sought could be thwarted by this means, and well-knowing that the rank and file of the republican party were in full and hearty sympathy with the farmer in his efforts to secure equal rights with the shipper in a free and open market. Believing that we were right (and we believe it yet,) we tried to secure the end sought through the republican party. The wish of a majority of the people of Polk County was for the nomination of the Hon. Knute Nelson, but the convention said to the farmers, "no, we will not give you Nelson, whom you consider the best man for the emergency, but we will give you a man whom WE consider just as good." Again, the farmers, considering that those who had been pinched by the system, who knew by experience what it is to raise wheat at an actual loss, were best calculated to represent their interests in the legislature, desired that only farmers should be sent to the legislature, and here again they were met by refusal of their reasonable request. The Journal has not changed its opinion in the least; we said in the start that farmers should send men of their own calling to attend to this important work, and we still insist that this is the proper thing to do. The schemers in the old parties have absolutely refused to recognize the most important issue that is before the people of this state to-day, and the only thing left for every patriotic citizen to do is to vote for the farmers' candidate for governor and the farmers' candidates for the legislature. The farmers have placed in nomination for governor, an able man who is in hearty sympathy with the needs of the hour, a man of broad and liberal views, one who, when the life of the government was threatened, gallantly shouldered his musket and fought in the front ranks of that noble army of freemen, and a man who ever since has fought the monopolist, which is now the greatest foe to American liberty. If every man who feels that the cause of the farmer is a just cause will vote for S. M. Owen he will be the next governor of Minnesota.

Riot Act.

To the Late Lamented R. C. C.

The Spectator On Deck; Harry at The Bat!

St. Hilaire Spectator.

As an illustrious example of ring rule politics, the Republican County Convention at Crookston last Friday was decidedly successful. The call gave the various precincts in the county 156 delegates, but only 94 votes were cast by about 60 men, many having a number of proxies. Of this number nearly one-half were from the cities and villages, leaving the farmers of the county very poorly represented, considering the great interest heretofore taken by them in former Republican Conventions. The Polk County Political Organization, better known as the Crookston Ring or Banker's Alliance is now in a very prosperous condition, and carried things with a high hand, no one being allowed to be a candidate unless properly countersigned by them. Mr. A. D. Stephens is now Captain General of the organization with Hugh Thompson and John Cromb as active Lieutenents, and P. J. McGuire and Marcus Johnson as silent but effective partners. The Convention last Friday, the majority of which was their personal property, was duly organized by J. J. Armstrong being elected chairman, and we can here state that he served his masters well and is deserving of praise. Great harmony prevailed, and the ring candidates were nominated with but little opposition. Of the candidates nominated the following are residents of Crookston; Auditor M. Cornelius, Clerk of the Court E. M. Walsh, Judge of Probate C. O. Christianson, County Attorney R. J. Montague, Supt. of Schools Thomas Casey, Coroner Henry Shepard, State Senator John Cromb. Ovid Moreau was discovered at Terrebonne and nominated for Treasurer, and James O. Hovland, of the Thirteen Towns, was nominated for Sheriff, James Rosean of Fisher, for Register of Deeds, and Geo. Ralph, of Red Lake Fall, for County Surveyor. Considering the fact that it is reported at Crookston that it will be almost impossible to overcome the opposition and elect the Republican nominees for Sheriff, Treasurer and Register of Deeds, the magnanimity of the ring in having men outside of Crookston nominated for these offices will be readily seen. And it is also rumored that they will be willing election day to trade votes on those offices so that no member of the ring will be defeated. The editor of this paper always has and will support the Republican party, but we do not consider that the late Republican County Convention expressed the true sentiment of the honest Republicans of this county. That there exists a ring in this county which is controlling Republican conventions none can deny. It is also plain to be seen that they are using the party for their own private ends greatly to its damage. In conclusion, we will say to every honest Republican who desires the future success of his party—work for the Rupublican State ticket and Congressman Comstock, and leave the balance of the ticket to be cared for by the ring which has assumed to dictate who shall be the nominees of the Republican party in Polk County.

Rich men all tell you that S. M. Owen cannot be elected. In this case clearly the wish is father to the thought. The Hon. Knute Nelson was once sent to Congress from the Fifth District in spite of Kindred's barrel.

Will Owen Withdraw?

Minneapolis Times.

The Evening Tribune has discovered that S. M. Owen is likely to pull out of the race for governor, and curiously enough it bases its rumor on the fact that the Great West is not friendly to Mr. Owen. If Mr. Owen wished to withdraw from the field he could hardly pull out honorably in the face of such opposition. No man can afford to have it said of him that he ran before a flock of magpies. It would hurt him worse than if he had never started in the race. Mr. Owen is not going to withdraw. He is addressing some of the largest meetings ever held in the state and his appearance is everywhere greeted with enthusiasm from the farmer audiences that he addresses. Does this look like withdrawing? Does the fact that Gov. Merriam has followed the alliance candidate and spoken at every fair Mr. Owen has addressed look as though he believes Mr. Owen was going to withdraw? Mr. Owen is not half as near withdrawing as Gov. Merriam was the day after the Hennepin county delegates to the state convention were elected.

Absolutely Independent.

St. Paul News.

As soon as the Alliance movement was inaugurated the Merriam-Republican papers started the hue and cry that it was a Democratic movement.

We style a portion of the press of the State Merriam-Republican, in contradistinction from Republican papers, which have the independence to act for the best interest of the party regardless of party conventions. Many Republican papers welcomed the alliance movement, but the ones in the class we have named took the ground stated.

Republicans were strenuously urged not to allow themselves to be led into the movement lest they should find themselves in the midst of the Democratic lines.

There was never a more disappointed lot of politicians than were developed when Mr. Owen's letter was read in the Democratic convention declining the use of his name and asking that the independent movement stand by itself, with no entangling alliances. All the stock in trade of the Merriam organs was suddenly snuffed out.

The Alliance movement stands squarely before the people, as one of principle and not as merely thrown into the field for political effect. It is a contest, too, not for a single day, but for the organization of a new and permanent party, representing the industrial interests of the country.

So long as the old parties chose to cling to the monopolists there will be room for an organization such as the Alliance presents. It is true the tendencies of the Democratic party are anti-monopolistic, but there are multitudes of Republicans who cannot be induced to formally join that organization, and the consequence is that it is essential that there should be a new party which can invite and welcome people of all classes and political preferences who believe in protecting the people instead of protecting the monopolies, to act in harmony for their own interests.

That is what the Alliance offers, and the declination of Mr. Owen to allow the movement of the Minnesota party in any sense to merge into the Democratic party, defines the issue squarely and sharply, much to the discomfiture of those who had hoped that the new party would vanish into thin air.

The Heatwole Homiletic.

Minneapolis Times.

The Chairman of the Republican State Committee has issued a manifesto to the voters of the state of Minnesota. It is an interminable document made up of wearisome and uninteresting details, and special partizan pleading. There is nothing in it to be controverted. As a review of the history and legislation of the republican barty it is accurate enough but thoroughly commonplace. It goes back to the organization of the party and attempts to revive the waning enthusiasm of the voters with the stale platitudes of bygone campaigns. It threshes over a great amount of old straw, and as a specimen of perfunctory, made-to-order, machine eloquence it is more orthodox than unique. The republican party is all right. The trouble with the situation this year is that the party is in bad hands. It has fallen under the control of a self-seeking and corrupt faction of which the chairman of the State Committee is merely the mouthpiece. The question is not whether republican shall win in this contest but whether this unscrupulus and vicious gang shall continue to control the republican party, and through it the politics and administration of the State. The defeat of Merriam—the repudiation of the methods and the mercenaries he represents will be the worthiest and highest triumph the republicans can hope to achieve this year. At present republicanism is misrepresented in Minnesota. It has principles, but they are neither proclaimed in its platform nor represented by its leadership. The Chairman of the State Committee has undertaken in two columns and a half of solid type to inform the people what the platform means. His discourse is a tiresome one, and from firstly to thirteenthly it has no more relevancy to the text than the Ptolemaic theory of astronomy has to the planetary system. It is merely Mr. Heatwole's declamatory statement of what the platform might have said, and what he would be glad to make the voters believe it does say. But no intelligent man can compare the original platform with Heatwole's verbose commentary upon it without a sense of amusement. The chairman is conscientiously trying to earn his $5,000 salary. He evidently believes that he must furnish a certain amount of copy for the money and is simply writing against space.

Thanks Due Davis.

Chicago Tribune: Senator Davis of Minnesota earned the thanks of the farmers of this state and the nation when he induced the senate to take off the duty on binding twine. The following Western senators had the interests of the farmers sufficiently at heart to vote with him: Messers Allison, Cullom, Davis, McMillan, Mitchell, Moody, Paddock, Pierce, Plumb, Squire, Washburn, and Wilson of Iowa. The Western house members must see to it not that this amendment is put through. If they fail let them beware of their constituents. The importance of freelisting this article will be apparent when it is known that the whea crop of the United States last year wast 490,500,000 bushels. The cost of binding twine for the entire crop was $9,800,000, or two cents for every bushel of wheat. The State of Minnesota alone paid $909,000 for binding twine.

Rum in Ohio.

Toledo Blade.

The report of the auditor of the state of Ohio for the fiscal year just closed, shows that there are at present in the state 10,754 places where rum in some form is sold. They all pay special tax under the Dow law; and as that law is well executed, there are probably no other places in the state where it is sold at retail. It is to be remembered that drug stores have to pay the Dow tax as well, if they sell liquors, except on prescriptions, and many drug stores in the state do this. The Dow tax is paid half-yearly. The state auditor's figures for the past six months, are given below. The money received from this tax is divided—a part going to the state and the remainder being divided up among the three city and county funds mentioned:

State	$ 253,301
Municipal police fund	423,726
Municipal general revenue fund	301,798
County poor fund	297,693

When we consider that Ohio has a population approximating four millions, it will be seen that 10,754 places where rum is sold at retail—including all saloons and some drug stores—is not as large a number as one would suppose who is familiar with the larger cities of the state. The saloon is, in Ohio, almost entirely found in the cities. This results from the fact that the foreign element drifts into the cities and avoids the country. The country districts are very largely Prohibition in sentiment. The cities would give a majority for rum, at any time.

The history of the fight against the saloon in Ohio is an interesting one. The present constitution was framed in 1851, and the convention, recognizing the evil of the saloon, embodied in the constitution a provision that the sale of intoxicating liquors shall never be licensed in Ohio. The convention appeared to hold to the mistaken idea that this provision would prevent utterly the sale of rum in the state. It never prevented the sale of one gill of the poison. On the contrary, under it the saloon flourished like a green bay tree. From the time of the adoption of the constitution, up to the legislature of 1882-3, not a rum-hole paid a dollar of revenue, nor were there any steps taken to control or regulate the traffic.

That body passed the Pond law, which taxed the saloons. This measure excited tremendous opposition from the rum power of the state. Thirty years of absolute immunity from interference had created the impression that the traffic was a sacred thing, not to be meddled with by anybody. The Democratic Supreme court decided the law unconstitutional, and the "Scott law" was passed, similar in tenor, but avoiding the point on [illegible] Dow law was wrecked. Then [illegible] power appeared in politics, and the republicans were defeated by a coalition between the democratic party and the saloon. At the same election two constitutional amendments were submitted to a popular vote—the first providing simply for the repeal of the anti-license clause in the state constitution, thus leaving the entire control of the traffic in the hands of the legislature; the second providing for prohibition. The first was defeated by a big majority; the second had a majority over the "no" votes, but not a majority over all the votes cast at that election, as the constitution provides, and hence failed of adoption. A great many voters did not vote on the amendment at all.

The Scott law was pronounced unconstitutional on a technical point, and the saloon [illegible] again without restriction or [illegible] the people of the state [illegible] their senses on the question. They saw that there was simple justice in the proposition that the saloons should be made to pay at least a part of the cost it makes to the state, and that the low dives and drinking hells should be crushed out of existence. [illegible] course of the democratic state government, elected by a coalition of that party and the rum power, disgusted every decent democrat. So in 1885 the republican party was again put in power. The present Dow law was enacted, taxing every saloon $250 per year, or a proportional part for the portion of the year it is in existence.

The Dow law has worked well. An amendment has been added to it, allowing municipalities and townships, under which a number of townships and villages have banished the saloon entirely. The uneducated foreign drinking element in our cities is the stumbling block in the way of prohibitory legislation. It will combine against any party that attempts prohibition, and surely defeat it. The country is prohibition, the cities rum, and there is but one way to obtain prohibition in Ohio—educate the ignorant classes up to a realization of its need.

This matter is not one of politics. It needs no party; in fact, a party is a hindrance to it. It is a moral, not a political work that is to be accomplished. The churches must be aroused to do their whole duty; it must be the prime educator in this work. Unfortunately, there are sects which do not and will not declare for prohibition, and which do not even make non-drinking a requisite for membership. They must all be roused to their duty, till every pulpit shall throw its influence for prohibition.

Then the various temperance organizations must go into the work of education; and that, too, on strictly nonpartisan lines. People must be led to see the reckless, extravagant waste that rum drinking entails; the frightful expense to the state and the taxpayers; the evil to the physical system of the drinker; the injustice of allowing a man to drag his wife and children down to the lowest depths of poverty; and the other terrible evils of the habit. they must be educated to the point of not only becoming non-drinkers themselves, but of being willing to aid in the effort to keep the ignorant and weak-willed classes from falling into the pit of the drunkard; then they will be ready to work for and vote for prohibition.

The one great drawback to the growth of prohibition sentiment in Ohio has been the desperate effort to drag it into politics. We doubt if the vote of the entire state, if polled to-day, would show as large a vote for prohibition as was cast for the prohibitory amendment in 1883. The attempt to build up a party on the issue has very greatly injured the orders of Good Templars, Sons of Temperance, and other temperance organizations in the state: for the political prejudice of the masses is easily roused, and the prohibition movement was construed into an aid for the third party, which it was not and is not. The cause will not prosper in Ohio until the political prohibitionists stop their useless effort to build up a distinct party, and all moral forces, including both church and school, join in earnest, persistent work to educate the people up to the point where they will join the effort to pulverize the rum power.

Politician and Statesman.

Minneapolis Times.

No word in the language has been so thoroughly debauched as the word "politics." Webster's definition makes politics a "part of ethics," but the modern usage has perverted the term from this original high significance to mean simply the art of securing votes. Instead of standing for the science of human government—for whatever concerns the well-being of the state—it is now used to distinguish the manœuvres of parties in their contests for the control of the government, and the campaign intrigues and fine work of politicians to secure the public offices. We make a very wide distinction between a "politician" and a "statesman." It is common to say of a man that he is a statesman but not a politician, meaning that he is profoundly versed in the science of government and competent to wisely apply its principles to great public questions and the affairs of the state, but lacking in a certain practical shrewdness, the finesse, and the cunning devices by which partisan success is won.

This illustrates the character and tendency of our present political methods. When men speak of a candidate as a "statesman" they do it in a tone of sincere respect. When they say of a man that he is a "politician" they do it with a shrug of the shoulders or a thrusting of the tongue into cheek, which signifies the reverse of respect. To talk of political morality and the elevation of the public tone in connection with a "politician" is recognized as absurd. Instead of parties dividing on great questions of public policy, instead of candidates arraying themselves on one side or the other of moral questions; and elections being contested with supreme regard to the common welfare, we have merely a wild scramble between parties and candidates for the offices and spoils. A man's moral character, the viciousness of his political practices, the debasing effect of his influence is not permitted to be urged as a disqualification for public place. It is only a few years ago that clergymen insisted that the personal character of a candidate for the highest and most honorable office in the land could not properly be reviewed or considered. It was openly argued, from both press and pulpit, that the fact that a candidate was a notorious debaucher was no reasonable obstacle to his political advancement. In the present campaign in this state the objection raised to a candidate, that his past political success had been notoriously won by the corrupt use of money is treated as too hackneyed and trifling for serious consideration.

How shall politics be elevated to mean something better than a corrupt and selfish strife for place and power? First the people must learn to discriminate between politics and partizanship. No man is a politician in the true sense who trades upon the greed of office seekers, the conscienceless avarice of corporations, the sectarian ambition of churches of whatever name or creed or the corrupt use of money in caucuses and at the polls. Such a man is simply a demagogue, and fidelity to truth requires that he should always be so characterized. The true politician is a man trained in broad and liberal policies of goverment, and skilled to carry them into execution, not by appealing to sectionalism, or race antipathies, or class prejudice; not by shrewd deals and skillful playing off ward against county, or county against state, or candidate against candidate, but by planting himself upon eternal principles of right and appealing to the patriotism, and if need be the self-denial and conscience of his fellow citizens. The science of polities may be practiced on the highest plane of morality. But partisanship and demagogism are incapable of such treatment; to succeed in these the appeal must be made to the meanest prejudices and the darkest passions of the human heart. "Politician" and "Statesman," "politics" and "statemanship" ought to be synonymous terms.

Who Does the Nominating?

Sauk Rapids Sentinel.

In every voting precinct in the State the question of the obligation of Republicans to support their party nominations will be discussd and arguments with which most people are familiar will be used. In a former issue we have asserted that only from one-fifth to one-tenth of the members of our party participate in caucusses on an average. That fact may be considered in discussing the question at issue, and it is also fair to consider the character of the managers of the caucuses and conventions whose work we are asked to ratify at the polls, the object they had in view and the methods used to attain those objects. Let the Republican voters of each voting precinct of Minnesota consider these points after obtaining the fullest information relative there to, and then act intelligently.

But, the machine politician will say, you and your kind of people neglected to control the caucuses and conventions and must not complain if your interests have been trespassed upou" To this you might reply that you had also neglected to lock up your horses and your farming implements at night, but would not suppose their theft to be a justifiable consequence.

Now it may be that in precincts beyond the scope of your knoweledge a majority of the reliable and substantial Republicans who are without personal interest in the result attend caucuses and see that they are conducted wiih the interest of the party and of the public safety in view. We would say that Republicans who have that experience ought to have a high regard for the ticket, if it be a good one. But when details are all the reverse of those outlined above; when intrigue, deception and self-interest are dominant, or attendances at the caucuses insignificantly small, it is a very soft-pated Republican who will humiliate himself by being whipped or wheeled into supporting a ticket of which his judgment does not approve.

The Cosmopolitan.

The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest prices to novelists, scientists statemen, soldiers, and even kings and princes, for the best they can furnish in the literary line. The well-edited magazine becomes an educating influence in the family circle, whose importance cannot be over-estimated. The children, as they grow up, are attracted by its illustrations, and so come in time to have a taste for reading. There is always something that is new, something that is strange, something that is interesting; and we consider that we are doing our readers a positive benefit if we are instrumental in placing such a publication within their reach. The special arrangement which we have made with the Cosmopolitan presents pery unusual inducements. That magazine, although only in the tenth month under its new management, is already recognized as one of the most interesting publications of the day. It is seeking subscribers everywhere and obtaining them. The proprietors believe that the Cosmopolitan has only to be examined to secure a permanent subscriber. That is why we are enabled to make, if the offer is accepted before January next, such a very low rate, by which our readers can obtain the Cosmopolitan for little more than the cost of this journal alone. Just think of what the combination means! You obtain your own home journal at about the regular price, and have thrown in a magazine which gives you, in a year 1536 pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including over 1300 pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution. Will it not pay you to send a subscription to this office for the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, and Cosmopolitan immediately? Remember, only $3—for the two.

Big weights and small prices—that's Holmboe's motto. [14-27]

Mortgage Sale.

[First publication August 14, 1890.]

WHEREAS, EDWIN P. CAPEN AND MATTIE C. Capen, his wife, of Polk County, State of Minnesota, as mortgagors, did, on the 4th day of August, A. D. 1885, duly execute and deliver to The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London, (Limited) of London, England, their mortgage bearing date of June 20th, A. D. 1885, whereby they mortgaged to said mortgagee the following described lands situated in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: All of fractional Section 3, Township 148, Range 47 west, containing 652 96-100 acres, to secure the payment of the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars, with interest thereon, according to the conditions of one certain promissory note, with interest coupons attached, bearing even date with said mortgage, and made by said mortgagors to said mortgagee, or order, which said mortgage was on the 10th day of August, A. D. 1885, at 1:20 o'clock p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, in book 25 of mortgages, on pages 480 to 483 inclusive; and

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the sum of two hundred dollars, due as interest upon said mortgage on the 1st day of January, A. D. 1890, and on the further sum of ninety-four and 40-100 dollars due as interest thereon on the 20th day of June, A. D. 1890, and the said interest is still unpaid and due; and

Whereas, it was stipulated by and between the parties to said mortgage, that if default should be made in any of the conditions or covenants therein contained on the part of the mortgagors, to be kept and performed, that then and from thenceforth it shall be lawful for the said mortgagee, or its assigns, to consider and declare the whole sum secured thereby as immediately due and payable without notice to said mortgagors, or any other party; and

Whereas, The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London (Limited) has exercised its option to consider and declare, and does hereby consider and declare the whole sum of money secured by said mortgage to be due and payable; and

Whereas, there is now due, and claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of twenty-eight hundred thirty-two and 52-100 dollars, and no proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land therein described, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston, in said County and State, on the 27th day of September, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the sum due on said mortgage, together with taxes, if any, on said premises, and one hundred dollars attorney's fees therein stipulated to be paid in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Dated August 5th, A. D. 1890.

Mr. Owen at Sauk Centre.

To the Editor of the Daily News:

SAUK CENTRE, Sept. 24. Mr. S. M. Owen addressed a large and enthusiastic Alliance meeting here to-night. The speech was a fine effort, and for an hour and a half held the vast audience in close and interested attention. The Alliance party is strong here, and growing stronger every day. The meeting to-night will greatly accelerate the movement. Mr. Owen goes next to Fergus Falls, where he addresses a mass meeting.

J. LYMAN.

Hill's Position Toward Merriam.

Duluth Herald: Perennial Candidate Gilman is now out and chirping, we notice, about "the Jim Hill ring which is supporting Merriam for Governor." How Chirper Gilman has clımed over the ropes of a ring into which he has slung his white hat so often, we can't imagine, but the effort must have turned his head or he wouldn't be babbling about "Jim Hill" backing Merriam. Every child in politics knows the relation in which Mr. Hill stands toward the Democratic nominee, Judge Wilson, and that the biggest knife which Gov. Merriam has to fear in this campaign is that which Hill holds.

That looks likely when Hill's employes are racing around this county, fixing up the Merriam fences. Did not the Merriam delegates to St. Paul get free passes on the Great Northern road? At this distance it looks as though Owen is the only candidate objectionable to railroads. How many passes did his delegates get over any road to go and nominate him?

Mr. Owen's Speech at Rochester.

Hon. Sidney Owen, Alliance candidate for Governor, delivered an eloquent address at Rochester the closing day of the Southern Minnesota Fair.

In the evening a mass meeting was held on the public square. Geo. Muller, of New York, made the opening address, and arraigned both of the old parties for their disregard of industrial interests.

When Mr. Owen appeared he was greeted with enthusiasm. He said, among other things:

From 1850 to 1860 the increase in farm values was 101 per cent, live stock values 95 per cent; from 1860 to 1870 farm values 40 per cent; live stock 30 per cent; from 1870 to 1880, farm values 9 per cent increase, on live stock values, a decrease of $25,000,000. In 1860 the agricultural wealth was one-half the entire national wealth; In 1870 it was one-third; in 1880 it was one-fourth, and in 1890 it is about one-fifth. Thus in 1860 the agriculturists owned one-half the national wealth, but in 1890 the agriculturists own only one-fifth of the total wealth. Showing that relatively the farmers' condition is growing worse.

On taxation he said that every year the percentage of property exempt from taxation increased. From 1820 to 1860 the amount exempt was about 20 per cent; in 1870 the amount exempt was 50 per cent; In 1880, 60 per cent—that is, 40 per cent of the property paid all of the taxes. The portion exempted consistg largely of stocks, bonds, jewelry, &c., the property of the rich, while the home of the poor mechanic and the farm bear their full burden of taxation. In a powerful arraignment he presented the facts of overcapitalization, and the burden thus placed upon the productive interests of the country.

Mr. Owen is logical, convincing and eloquent, yet careful and conservative in his statements. His personality will be a winning factor in the contest this fall.

Gov. Merriam Masquerading.

Sauk Rapids Sentinel.

We would by no means be a party to such raids as are continuously being made to incite the farmers and others against the railroad companies unreasonably, as we believe there is a better way in which to reach a fair solution of the question of transportation upon an equitable basis. But we would call attention to the fact that Gov. Merriam is masquerading between the farmers and the railroad companies. His addresses to the farmers have been designed to convince them how greatly he sympathized with them in their controversies and contest with the railroad companies, being no doubt more emphatic and pronounced because of the well known fact that he was raised in a railroad circle and that class of men. No fact is now better known among those who are posted than that Mr. Merriam's relations are of the most intimate and confidential character with the railroad companies, especially the Nothern Pacific, and that with the possible exception of the Duluth & Winnepeg, all the companies have been very solicitous for his renomination and are now preparing to exert themselves for his election by all the means at their cammand. This is known to the writer hereof personally. We also know that the railroad commission appointed by the Governor is satisfactory to the said companies. Undersand, we are not by this, objecting to the action of the companies, but are calling attention to the fact that the Governor of this State is deliberately practicing a deceit upon the people—is masquerading upon the great questions pending between the people and the railroad companies. That is all.

After the spirited ballad of "Piping Jean," by Caroline D. Swan, which opens the October Wide Awake, the reader comes upon a good foot-ball story, a story of Phillips-Exeter Academy, written by Mrs. Adeline A. Knight, and entitled "John MacGreggor's Lesson;" curiously enough, while this story describes a foot-ball game between this school and Phillips Academy at Andover the chapters of Mr. Ward's serial, "The New Senior at Andover," chronicle a base-ball contest between the same two schools; the first story is illustrated from life photographs of a typical team of each school.

Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford is at her splendid best in the war-story "One Good Turn." "An Adirondack Camp," by Margaret Sidney, is a breezy chronicle of a particularly jolly time had by some particularly jolly young people. "Jack and Æsop's Jackdaw," by Amos R. Wells, is one of the brightest of the School and Playground series of stories, while "The Scarlet Specter of Sandy Ridge" is perhaps the strongest yet of Miss McLeod's Acadian Old-Folk Lore tales. "Brer Lizard's Coats," by Martha Young, is a quaint bit of story such as Southern negroes like to tell. Alexander Black's "Camera Club" has seven fine photographs by amateurs. "A Quilt Expedition," by Henry Cleveland Wood, brings back to notice an old-time species of sewing-work, and gives twenty-four popular counterpane designs. "A Story of 1812, Part 1," by Olive Sisley Seward, is a true story of Commodore Perry and an ancestor of the author. Mrs. Claflin's "Margaret Patty Letters," Mr. Bridgman'r Puk-Wudjie tale of "Father Maple's War-Paint," Miss Steinhauer's sketch of "Jack Weatherwax, Hero," Mrs. Rayne's "Pets of the Treasury," Helen North's "Letter-Writing for Young Folks," and Mrs. Sallie Joy White's article upon "Insurance and Advertising" agencies as business openings for women, together with the "Men and Things" department, complete the prose of the number. The poems are by Graham R. Tomson, Mrs. Whiton-Stone, Kate Putnam Osgood, and Mary E. Wilkins.

Wide Awake is $2.40 a year. D. Lothrop Company, Publishers, Boston.

The Alliance Campaign.

Minneapolis Times.

The Farmers' Alliance campaign formally opened last night in a meeting at Harmonia hall addressed by Mr. Owen and W. W. Erwin. The meeting was intended to be an open air one, but the weather compelled adjournment to a hall, hence the attendance was not commensurate with the dignity of the occasion. The meeting was really an interesting one. The speeches were able, and the temper of the audience that of men willing to be convinced by reason. Mr. Erwin devoted his attention to a destructive argument against protection, which must stand on its merits as an economic argument. It was plausible and skillfully constructed. Mr. Owen confined himself to an attempt to justify independent political action, and he made a strong case. Starting with the proposition that agriculture is the fundamental industry he showed, how under the administration of both the old parties farm values have been steadily losing ground. The increase in the decade from 1870 to 1880 was only 9 per cent, and Mr. Owen ventured the prediction that the census of 1890 would show an actual decrease in farm values. This has all taken place under regimes that have claimed to have done all for the country and maintained a condition of unprecedented prosperity. These facts are alarming enough and bring the farmer face to face with the question, "What am I going to do about it?" Mr. Owen says organize a new party which shall not be dominated by the capitalist and the manufacturer. Certainly if the farmers have a grievance, their right to organize against the aggressor is morally unassailable. The Farmers' alliance movement does not expect to elect many men to fat offices this year. It is unselfish, and if a majority of its leaders are as virtuous and able as its candidate for governor of Minnesota the campaign can but have a salutary effect on the old parties which have accomodatingly divided the world into an outside and inside, and are fighting periodic battles to determine which shall nestle in the downy bed of ease and which shall go forth to weep and wail until it come again.

In The Swim.

Duluth Short Line.

Senator Davis and his friends "need not lay the flattering unction to their souls," that the banker Governor is out of the swim. If re-elected he will succeed Cush Davis without a struggle. If defeated it will only require a little more boodle to bring the hayseeds who will constitute a majority in the next Legislature into line.

The Industrial Party.

Minneapolis Times.

The encouraging characteristic of the political situation is the growing independence of the people. Narrow-minded partisans may cling to old parties with a tenacity born of bigotry, but the intelligent non-partisan voters are constantly increasing in numbers, and the political party that would win their support must make its appeal to their judgment, and show itself in sympathy with the new ideas and issues and the progressive spirit of the times. The history of this country shows that parties with any vitality are of slow growth. Ideal elements and forces are vastly more important and potential than we are apt to suppose. Force is back of form. The soul rules the body.

The idea is the vitality of the institution. Ideas create political parties. No political party can exist upon its past achievements. Its theories and measures and movement must be based upon vital principles. It must lift the public mind above the dead level of mere partisan monotony and put itself in the line of progress toward a benign future. It cannot stand still in this day of great ideas.

It is objected to the Farmer's Alliance that it is a movement to create a new political party. It is urged by the old party leaders that the farmers can accomplish the results they seek through the instrumentality of the old political organizations. That their movement is a march toward nowhere and must end in confusion, and to the injury of the very interests it would serve. But the events of the last year demonstrate that the farmers of America have learned the secret of political power, and how to wield that power successfully for the accomplishment of legitimate political ends. This is a pre-eminently agricultural country, and it is impossible to over-estimate the importance of the farmer's movement, or its possible influence upon national and state politics. The shrewdest politicians recognize that the balance of power in the national congress is within easy reach of the united agriculturists. To what extent this political power shall yet be developed only the future can be determined. But it is by no means impossible that from the present auspicious beginning the farmers may lay the foundation of a political party that will draw to itself the best elements of both the old parties, and enter upon a course of prestige and power that will only end with the complete fulfillment of its mission.

The Alliance organization has the advantage of either of the old parties in being in absolute touch with the industrial and laboring interests of the country.

No class of our citizens are better fitted to pass judgment upon the great issues of the day than the toilers whose taxes are wrung from the sweat of their brows. Their great need is union and compact intelligently-directed organization. And today we have the varied labor organizations working in harmony with the farmers to control legislation in the interest of agriculture and labor. Some crudeness of expression of vigorous ideas, and some impracticableness in the demands for legislation may be expected. But it is also true that all great political parties have been created by just such issues as are now being forced upon the consideration of the people by the farmer's movement. It has ideas. It is moved and inspired by a moral purpose, and justifies its claims to support upon solid industrial and political grounds.

Duluth Tribune: Aside, however, from these questions, the salient point of the canvass, which stands out in bold relief, is the personal merit of Mr. Comstock. Our representative has done his duty to the district and to all parts of it. For a new member his success in securing justice for his constituents has been extrordinary if not phenominal. That he can do better in a second term is a reasonable conclusion from the conceded fact that acquaintance with legislators and with legislative methods doubles the influence of a member of congress. And, right here, let it be noticed that Congressman Comstock has been at his post in Washington day after day and has trusted his personal political interests to his friends at home. For this among other merits he will be affectionately remembered by his constituents in November.

Duluth Times: Many people insist upon calling the Alliance movement the "Farmers' Alliance" movement. This is a mistake. The word alliance means an association of laboring men, farmers and all who believe in reforming present political methods. The Farmers' Alliance, as such, is not permited to engage in politics; neither are the labor organizations; but the members of all have the right to do so, and they have banded together under the name of the Alliance.

Davis Friends Should Vote Against Merriam.

St. Peter Herald.

There seems to be a general feeling predominating that a vote for W. R. Merriam means that it is cast against C. K. Davis. That if Merriam is elected, it means the defeat of Davis. If this is so, every friend of C. K. Davis should vote against W. R. Merriam.

Globe: T. F. Knappen, who has just returned from a professional trip to Freeborn County, states that the Alliance movement is formidable in that quarter. Judging from careful observation, he would not be surprised if S. M. Owen received more votes for governor that either his Republican or Democratic competitors.

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more fully shown by the following statement: A, aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm; at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his insurance........$88 44
Each year on his loan for interest........ 80 00
Total yearly payments...$ 168 44
Total for ten years........1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest........$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of........ 500 00
When the loan is due he pays.. 1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years........ 1500 00

As much within $184.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:
Interest........$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years........ 1000 00
Total........$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

On Thursday last Miss Cassie Mix was united for life to W. L. McDonald, of Tacoma, Wash. The happy couple left for St. Paul in the evening for a short visit to the bride's relatives before going to their new home on the coast. Their many friends here wish them joy and prosperity without stint.

Hans Samuelson, of Beltrami County, was united for life to Miss Annie Steenerson, at the residence of the bride's brother, Elias Steenerson, Esq., on Saturday evening last, the Rev. Mr. Westphal officiating. The happy couple will visit Polk County friends about a month before going to their home in Beltrami County.

A. E. Ball, of Rockford, Filmore Co., gave THE JOURNAL a pleasant call last week, enroute for the Red Lake Reservation on business connected with the census department. A. E. says that Filmore County will give a majority for S. M. Owen, and he says that Mr. Owen will run like a race horse in the south part of the state. He thinks if the north part does as well, Mr. Owen will be elected by a good majority.

Mrs. D. A. Robinson, who has been attending the Kellogg Dressmaking school in Minneapolis the past month, will return to Crookston this week prepared to do fine dressmaking after the famous Kellogg French Tailor system, including the seamless waist, the Worth dart, dartless basque, French bias basque, and all the latest and most fashionable styles of dressmaking. She will also take orders for Accordian skirts at greatly reduced rates.

The wedding of Mr. E. J. Loken and Miss Carrie Halvorson, which took place at the Sherman House parlors on Saturday evening, was a grand affair. The Rev. George Rygh performed the interesting ceremony that united for life two happy hearts, and the popularity of the high contracting parties was amply testified in the large list of presents they received. Over one hundred guests were in attendance. THE JOURNAL adds its blessing to the congratulation of hosts of friends.

Wisconsin is immensely pleased with her farmer Governor. Let Minnesota follow suit by electing S. M. Owen.

Wheat dropped down to 81 this week, and yet politicians wonder why the farmers are not all happy as clams.

Owen should come up and make a speech in Polk County. Get a move on you, fellows, and see that this is done.

If the people cannot get justice in conventions, thank goodness, they can at the polls, and they propose to try that plan this year.

Jens Walbeck was up from Fisher on Saturday. Says the large majority down there will vote the Owen ticket notwithstanding the desperate efforts of the bosses.

The regular meeting of Crookston alliance occurs on Saturday next. As this is the last regular meeting but one before election there should be a good attendance.

Millinery opening at Mrs. I. U. Jennings, Saturday, October 4th. Special inducements offered on that day. Jorgenson block, Robert street. All kinds of farm produce taken in exchange for millinery.

Geo. M. Swift was in from Mentor on Saturday. Says the alliance ticket will carry everything in that vicinity. The farmers propose to do a little voting on their own hook this year. Bossism is played out.

Geo. Ralph was up to Thief River Falls last week to survey a cemetery plat. He will go to the White Earth Reservation soon to work on his contract. He has a job on the Red Lake Reservation, also.

The annual junket of the Board of Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners has commenced. They will show up at Crookston on Oct. 7th, at 7 a. m., and remain all day. So the notice sent us for publication says.

They seem to be getting uneasy in St. Paul. On Monday the Merriam party was summoned to headquarters in hot haste. Evidently something must be did, but the farmers are not "in it." They will vote for their own interests this year. S. M. Owen represents the farmers' interests this trip.

Harris & Glenn met with a streak of bad luck last week. While moving H. Steenerson's house a pin came out in the capstan, letting the sweep fly round, striking the horse in the fore leg, breaking it. The animal had to be killed. Mr. Harris missed the sweep by ducking his head. The horse was a valuable animal.

Will Carlton, our next member of the legislature, drove down from Angus on Thursday, accompanied by his wife. Elsewhere will be found his letter of acceptance, which should be read by every voter. It has the true manly ring about it that gives assurance that Mr. Carlton fully appreciates the situation and will do his best to correct it.

THE JOURNAL is in receipt of a request from Wm. Olson, of St. Hilaire, to insert two articles in its columns. As the articles in question do not accompany the request, of course we cannot comply with the request. Send 'em along, William, and we will do the best we can for you. THE JOURNAL always likes to oblige its patrons to the extent of its ability.

James Novotny was down from Tabor on Tuesday. He was surprised and pleased to find so much alliance sentiment as he found in Crookston, and he says this fact will encourage farmers greatly in their efforts to secure an open market. He is of the opinion that all of his countrymen will stand solid for the alliance cause and cast a good solid vote for Owen and the legislative ticket.

A. R. Holston, the alliance candidate for county attorney, is a hustler from way back—just the kind of a man the county needs to attend to the duties of that important office. He is the son of a veteran and lost a brother in the service, and he would have been in it himself had he been old enough. The legal affairs of the county will be safe in his hands. Vote for Holston for county attorney.

John C. Welles came up from the farm on Monday, en route for his home in Fon du Lac. Has his threshing all done and has a splendid crop. Says his experience this year convinces him that stacking is the best thing to do, and he will try it next year. Mr. W. is a strong Owen man and says he hopes Minnesota will follow Wisconsin's example by electing a friend of the farmer this year. He says Wisconsin will elect her farmer governor this year by a much larger majority than before. They know a good governor when they see him, and Minnesota has a chance to get as good a one by electing S. M. Owen. If the farmers and laborers and all who want to see an open wheat market are true to their interests, they will elect Mr. Owen sure.

Millinery Opening.

Mrs. E. E. Bangs invites the attention of the Ladies of Crookston and vicinity to the

on Saturday, October 4th, Monday, October 6th, Tuesday, October 7th, and Wednesday, October 8th. Having received a large and complete stock of millinery, she is now prepared to meet the wants of the ladies in this line. Call and examine those elegant Pattern Bonnets, Pattern Hats, Fancy Feathers and Millinery Novelties. Remember the place, Second street, two doors east of Slure's store.

Same Old Game.

One of Mr. Wavra's boys, living in the town of Tabor, took two loads of wheat to market and the buyer would only give him No. 2 Northern for his wheat. On his way home he called at his father's house and told him what he got. "Why," said the old man, "that is not right, they give me No. 1 Hard for mine, no better wheat than yours." It was then arranged that the old man should take the rest to market for the young man, which he did, and got No. 1 Hard for the same wheat the same buyer only gave No. 2 Northern for! When will this steal stop? When you farmers go to work and elect Owen and a farmer legislature to back him. Then you will stop it, and not till then.

Organize Alliance Clubs.

Organize an alliance club in every village in the county, and in every township except those where every man, or almost every man, belongs to the farmers' alliance, as you will get men in who would not otherwise be with you. For a constitution for an alliance club, and how to organize, address D. E. Hatlestad, Atty. at Law, Crookston, Minn. Clubs of this kind have already been organized in Crookston and Red Lake Falls. Organize well; get every man in the town to join you. We want to see an alliance club in every town in the county before October 10th. Don't wait for some one else to take hold of this matter, but do it yourselves. Go at it now, every man who wants Owen elected.

Attention, Alliance Officers.

Some of the secretaries fail to do their duty by neglecting to report the names of members, the number, etc., to the County Secretary, Nels Muus, of Fertile, Minn. Those who have not done so, do so at once. Don't delay this matter any longer; the officers should do their duty and do it at once. Let every alliance hold weekly meetings from now until the election, and let every voter attend these meetings, as the time is short before election. Hold your meetings often from now on. It would be best where there are many farmers or workingmen in a town who are not members of the alliance to organize an alliance club, as many will join an alliance club who would not, or who cannot join the farmers' alliance.

NELS MUUS.
Sec. County Alliance.

ANGUS, Sept. 25, 1890.

E. E. Lomen, Crookston, Minn.:

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 23d received Saturday, notifying me that I had been placed on the Farmers' Alliance ticket as the Representative for Polk County.

Thanks to the Alliance County Central Committee for the honor thus shown me. On my part this honor came unsought, unasked, as you know, and with pleasure I so accept the nomination, and should I prove to be elected it shall be my simple prayer to so act that the committee and county may hereafter say and feel that your choice was a fair one. Yes, I feel the sting of oppression as most of our farmers do, and it shall be my great aim to relieve myself and Bro. farmers from the yoke of monopolists and corrupt politicians, and the step has been taken and another step we hope to take at the next election, and place men at the head of government affairs. I may not be with you but my vote will. I believe that defeat means more taxation, more and higher freights, more and higher elevator charges, higher rates of interest and more of everything but money and comfort to the farmer and laboring people. Then with victory written on our banner, may we not with one bold, honest front face the ballot box and vote for liberty. My duties on my farm will not admit of my going out electioneering, yet I shall be with you at some of the public meetings.

Again thanking you,
I am, respectfully,
WM. CARLETON.

The Jackson Repuilic, for many years one of the leadig Repulican papers in Southwestern Minnesota has hoisted the Alliance state ticket, and in its last issue says:

If the same feeling exists all over the state that does in Jackson county S. M. Owen will be elected by 20,000 majority. It is almost impossible to find men in any township in this county who will suport Merriam, while they are all enthusiastic for S. M. Owen. And still you see such papers as the Pioneer Press full of such statements as "Merriam steadily gaining," "farmers abreast for Merriam." If the Pianeer Press would interview a few people from the rural district other than political strikers, they might get a few facts that is, if they are after facts.

"Straws show which way the wind blows." A vote for Governor was taken on a train coming from Waseca to St. Paul, resulting as follows:

Owen	54
Wilson	31
Merriam	11
Total	96

A Minnesota merchant put up the names of the three candidates on a card in his store a few days ago, inviting the farmers who called to cast their votes by marking their choice opposite each name. At night the record stood Owen 20, Wilson 2, Merrim 1. The merchant, being a Republican took down his card at the end of the first day.

NO MAN IS GOOD ENOUGH TO GOVERN ANOTHER WITHOUT HIS CONSENT.—ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

The Thief River Falls Press misquotes THE JOURNAL ticket.

At last the farmers have what they have ardently desired—a chance to show their independence. They have a candidate of their own—S. M. Owen.

If the Merriam party don't quit fooling, they will elect a democratic governor. A vote for Merriam is a half vote for Wilson. Better give a square vote for Owen and make a sure thing of it.

If the present sentiment holds, Owen will carry Polk County by a big majority next month. Wilson and Merriam don't seem to be "in it" very extensively. The common people are awake at last. Let the good work go on.

Do not be fooled. A vote for the Merriam party is a half-vote for railroad attorney Wilson. If you believe in a free government "of the people, by the people and for the people," be sure to vote for a man who is in sympathy with the people—S. M. Owen.

What earthly good has Merriam's government done the farmers? Our wheat market placed in absolute control of the elevator system and taxes on the old cow for double her value in the market. That's a healthy "farmers' friend," aint it. But then you ought to elect Merriam because if you don't he can't knock out Cush Davis for the Senate, don-cher-know.

Gov. Merriam, in his speech accepting the nomination, said that the republican party

HAS ALREADY DONE

all that the farmers ask. Well, if the present condition of our wheat market is the best the republican party can do for our farmers, they will have to look elsewhere for a remedy or perish. If the presebt system of equalization is the best the shop affords the farmers had better come to the front and run the business for themselves awhile.

A free and open wheat market—the object for which the farmers are waging this campaign, is for the interest of every laborer or business man in this county—except the elevator system. With the farmers prosperous, business flourishes and every laborer has plenty of work to do and good wages. Why can you not for once vote for yourself by casting a vote for S. M. Owen, who will be elected on this issue? No other candidate is pledged to this purpose nor cares to see it accomplished. With S. M. Owen as governor we shall have justice in our wheat markets if it can be had.

If Polk County raises 2,000,000 bushels of wheat this year, one cent per bushel means $20,000 in or out of Polk County. Last year the loss to the farmer was from 10 to 20 cents per bushel under the system of marketing wheat, and Mr. Merriam assures the farmers that the Republican party has already done all they have asked of it—i. e. has established a free and open market for our wheat. If it costs each farmer from 10 to 20 cents per bushel, besides his taxes, to support the system to keep this robber system in vogue, what's the use of keeping it? Mr. Owen is anxious to see this deal changed and give the farmer a chance for once, and it is clearly for the interest of this country to give him a chance to see what he can do. Vote for your own interests by voting for S. M. Owen.

The efforts of the Merriam party to disintegrate the alliance ticket are worthy of the severest condemnation and defeat of all who have used these underhanded schemes. We are glad to note that one man on the alliance ticket, John H. Locken, has had manliness enough to resist all of the specious blandishments of the adversary of the farmers cause, and to stand firm at his post. For days he was followed with all kinds of temptations, but in vain. He stood for the right and now he should be rewarded by a triumphant election to the office for which he is a candidate, register of deeds. That he is well qualified no one who knows him for a moment doubts, and that the Merriam party considers him one of the strongest supporters of the farmers' cause is shown in their frantic efforts to proselyte him. He should be elected, and THE JOURNAL hopes to see him and will do all it can to that end.

Wonderfully Precocious.

The claim was made in the late republican convention that J. J. Armstrong was selected because, being a new man, he is connected with no ring or clique, but the knowledge that this five months old citizen of Polk has acquired seems wonderful when we consider the make up of the committee he (is supposed to have) appointed. An old stager, of the Merriam party, could not have struck the combination closer. It suggests the idea that the fine Italian hand of the would be boss of Polk County was in the deal. The Fertile Journal suggests that the Merriam infant was considered in a precarious condition, needing a consultation of physicians, as Dr. Watson was called in to advise with Dr. Nelson. It was very evidently doctored, but what good it will do the patient is problematical.

Midway News: "A few years ago the farmers kicked on the grounds that the railroads and warehouse men controlled the state. Now, Gov. Merriam has incurred the illwill of these people by striving to serve the farmers and the farmers are now conniving with the democrats for his defeat. What is the matter with the farmers anyway?"

It is one thing to make an assertion and quite another to sustain it. The farmers cannot see wherein the Governor has put himself out in the least to serve their interests; on the contrary, quite the reverse, and there is where their kick comes in. A few years ago the railroad and elevator men controlled the situation absolutely, and the farmers fail to see wherein this control has been lessened. The farmers imagine that control of the Board and employes under it is equivalent to a control of the situation, and they wonder wherein the railroads and elevator men fail in this. Was not the wishes of the railroads in the appointment of the Board obeyed to the letter? Did not Chas. A. Pillsbury dictate the appointment of the employes under the Board in Minneapolis, and Chas. H. Graves do the same in Duluth? If the elevator men and the railroads have their own men appointed on and under the Board, how much do they lack of as full control as they could wish? It is a fact that the elevator men absolutely control the making of the grades, and that they absolutely control the markets, and the farmers have to pay for the operation of this system. That's why they kick. Governor Merriam has never done one thing to remedy this evil. The only thing that he has done has been to go to railroad companies when complaints have reached him that said roads failed to furnish cars, but that's no more than his simple duty as Governor. The law obliges the companies to furnish cars, and the farmers' legislature made that law. Under the law it is the Governor's duty to appoint the Board, and the duty of the Board so created to appoint the employes under it. But was that done? Did not Governor Merriam, after creating the Board, dictate every appointment under it; and that, too, for political purposes of his own? That's what the farmers kick, Bro. Paradis, and you cannot blame them if you are honest. The farmers have every reason to feel that if the present governor is re-elected the same state of things will continue. Last year, up in this county, farmers raised wheat at an actual loss; the system did not give them the actual cost of production, and they are fully determined to have a change of some kind. Again they kick when the Board of Equalization, apppointed by Gov. Merriam, raises the valuation on cows from $10 to $15 per head and lowers bank stock in proportion. Last year the very best cows in Polk County would not bring more than one-half their assessed value, yet the same old tune is played this year. Put yourself in their place, Mr. News, and see if you wouldn't kick and kick with both hind feet vigorously. Confront a man with ruin, as the situation does, and you will find that he will do lots of things that you are led to wonder at.

"What Ails the Farmers?"

Well, they are a good deal like the fellow who went into the hotel dining room and was brought a cup of luke warm drink—they want a change. The fellow took a sip, then turning to the waiter, said: "See here, waiter, if this is tea, bring me coffee, if it is coffee, bring me tea. I want a change." The farmers want a change in the present market system, and they are bound to have it!

That's What's the Matter With the Farmers.

Marshall Messenger.

Wheat 85c., a good crop. The farmers are happy, and with good crops and big prices, they have little or no time to engage in politics "to better their condition," save those who would better it by getting into office. The average farmer is satisfied with the present political status, and he will not vote to put the democrats in charge, over the shoulders of the alliance.

Well, that looks lovely, but the facts don't justify the roseate view. When No. 1 Hard wheat brings 85 cents in the local markets, it should bring the farmer one dollar if he had his rights. But the system is so thoroughly under the control of the buyer that he can lay down the rule: "Give no No. 1 Hard grades," and no No. 1 Hard is given, and the farmer has to sell his No. 1 Hard wheat for No. 2 Northern, or even rejected in some cases. The average farmer is not satisfied with a "political status" that tolerates such robberies as have been committed under the present system, and they are bound to have a change in the deal. It was the duty of the republican party to correct this evil, but the managers were making too much money out of elevator and railroad stock, and they thought the farmers were all a set of fools who would keep right on voting under the party lash to perpetuate the system. But the farmers demand a change in the system and are going to vote for it, and "that's what's the matter with the farmers."

Every alliance man should be a committee of one from now until the polls close on Nov. 4th. See that every man is out at the polls, and see that no frauds are committed, such as stealing alliance tickets, bulldozing, and the like. Remember the opposition to the farmers' cause is desperate and will hesitate at no frauds to defeat the will of the people.

The only way to make republican principles win is to vote for S. M. Owen.

Cant Stand The Racket.

Hon Frank Ives Brother of the Merriam Candidate for Lieut Gov. Repudiates Bossism.

Crookston, Minn., Sept. 20, 1890.
Editor Red River Dalen:

In your issue of the 10th inst you say of me, that I am no longer a Republican. In this you are not wholly correct. It is true that I have been a Republican for thirty-six years and have always worked for the interest of my party. I was a Republican, when to be known as such carried with the name the hated and opprobrious name "abolitionist" and the contempt of nine-tenths of the voters of the whole country. But times changed and so did men's minds, and in 1860 that band of patriots, which had been kicked and cuffed about for years by both Democrats and Whigs, came to the front, and the great slave oligarchy, which had ruled and almost ruined the country, was forced to retire, and the people again ruled.

The principles of the platform upon which Mr. Lincoln stood, and was elected, were the grandest and most worthy ever enunciated by a political party. I loved those principles and had the profoundest respect for the untiring and unselfish patriots who spent the best years of their lives in advocating them. Then men were elected to office because they were capable, honest and devoted to these grand principles, which inspired the breast of every lover of freedom and right in the broad domain of the nation. To these principles I still adhere, and the party and the leaders of those times I still love. I feel safe in asserting that if the Republican party had been true to itself, true to its followers, and had maintained, even the bulwork of liberty from that time to this, not one of the great throng of devoted men who cast his ballot for freedom would now object to the domination of the party for all time to come. But times as well as the minds of men have changed, and gold and pelf, not principles, have became the gods of the party. The trouble is not that honest men have abondoned the principles of Republicanism, but that the party has left its moorings, and is drifting toward the roks of destruction, with none to guide it but a crew of selfish unprincipled men whose only watch-word is "money" and power. I was prepared to hear that the self-styled leaders of the once great party would resort to almost any ordinary measures to accomplish their ends and perpetuate their power, but I was astounded and humiliated when I learned that these men, false to every principle of honor and justice had subverted the rights of the people and had actually purchased their victory:

A party is in a sad predicament when to perpetuate its power it becomes necessary to send its strikers into the rural districts and hire and purchase delegates to represent it in its primaries, a sad condition, when all the old utility-men of the country are foremost in directing its course, and to place men in power whose only fitness is availability and a pocket full of money.

For these and other reasons I cannot support the nominees of the so-called Republican party this year. One of the most vital objections is, that the nominees of the party are not placed in the field by the people representing and belonging to the party; but was forced upon the party by a few selfish arrogant demogogues, with a horde of hirelings who had no interest in the party greater than the money paid them for their services at the dictation of the bosses. It is a humiliation commentary on a great party when its supporters in the primaries must be bought or hired and paid for as a farmer pays for a flock of sheep; and it would be a stain upon the good name of an honest Republican or any honest, freedom loving member of any other party, to submit to such outrageous fraudulent practices. An honest expression of the people cannot be had by any such course and they mistake their man if they think to bind us by any such dishonest action.

The bosses have manipulated the nominations, and is now the people's turn, and if the signs of the times are any indication of the results to be expected, the verdict of the people in November will be a lesson which these self-styled bosses will long remember. I reiterate, that I am still a Republican, but not of the sort I have just described; and I think it just the time when such Republicans should show themselves and make a strong effectual effort to stamp out and eradicate such men as now dominate the party. These men have the control of our organization and hence we cannot fight them within the party lines, and I am not afraid to tell to all the world that I cannot and will not support the rump of any party. So for the present Mr. Editor, you will find me on the side of the long-suffering, much abused farmer, and whenever and wherever my services can be of any use for their benefit they can command me.

Very tauly yours
FRANK IVES.

Todd Co. Argus: It is a good time to speak of Mr. Comstock's concientious and satisfactory work in congress. During his short term of two years he has established a reputation for himself in the national councils that far overtops that of any of his fellow-members who entered congress at the time he did. He is recognized as one of the hardest working, most thoughtful and intelligent man in the chamber among the recently elected members. His work for his constituents has been persistent and successful. He is now in a position to do better work than he has ever done before because the first two years of a congressman's service are in great measure years of probation and scrutiny. He has passed that period and will hereafter become one of the recognized leaders from the Northwest.

Another Letter.

Great West.

The following letter tells what a terrific compaign Mr. Donnelly is carrying through for W. R. Merrium! It is in response to a letter on the subject:

HASTINGS, Minn. Sept. 1, 1890
B. McGovern Esq., St. Vincent Minn.
DEAR SIR:—

If any man says I am not supporting the Alliance ticket be kind enough to knock him down, and charge the cost to me. I was not a candidate for Governor; the vote given me was purely spontaneous; I would not take the nomination to-day with $5,000 to back it. I insisted that Secretary Lathrop should obey the constitution and pay over the Alliance money to the Alliance treasurer. If this was treason I am ready to get out of the Association; for I would not remain in a body where it is the proper thing for the Secretary NOT to obey the cotstitution and to pocket the funds. All the fight made on me in the Alliance and outside of it, comes from the hired tools of the railroad corporations, who seek in this way to break up the Allience. Keep up the good fight, and get out every vote you can for the Alliance ticket, state and local. I will be found doing yeoman's service when the proper time comes. Sincerely your friend.

The Cosmopolitan.

The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest prices to novelists, scientists statemen, soldiers, and even kings and princes, for the best they can furnish in the literary line. The well-edited magazine becomes an educating influence in the family circle, whose importance cannot be over-estimated. The children, as they grow up, are attracted by its illustrations, and so come in time to have a taste for reading. There is always something that is new, something that is strange, something that is interesting; and we consider that we are doing our readers a positive benefit if we are instrumental in placing such a publication within their reach. The special arrangement which we have made with the Cosmopolitan presents pery unusual inducements. That magazine, although only in the tenth month under its new management, is already recognized as one of the most interesting publications of the day. It is seeking subscribers everywhere and obtaining them. The proprietors believe that the Cosmopolitan has only to be examined to secure a permanent subscriber. That is why we are enabled to make, if the offer is accepted before January next, such a very low rate, by which our readers can obtain the Cosmopolitan for little more than the cost of this journal alone. Just think of what the combination means! You obtain your own home journal at about the regular price, and have thrown in a magazine which gives you, in a year 1536 pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including over 1300 pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution. Will it not pay you to send a subscription to this office for the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, and Cosmpolitan immediately? Remember, only $3—for the two.

Big weights and small prices—that's Holmboe's motto. [14-27]

HOME SEEKERS EXCURSIONS.

The attention of our readers is called to the low round trip excursions on th Great Northern Railway, Sept. 9th Sept. 23d and Oct. 14th. Persons who have friends in the East who have written about coming or ever expressed a desire to visit this country, should be informed of this chance. Tickets can be had at all principal offices of eastern, central and southern lines, connecting with the Great Northern at St. Paul, Minneapolis, West Superior or Duluth. Ask your eastern friends to call and see their nearest ticket agent, or write to F. I. Whitney, G. P. & T. A., Great Northern Railway, St. Paul. Always on Time.

There is no line so handsomely equipped for Through Passenger Service as "The Northwestern Line"—C. St. P., M. & O. R'y—and the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago trains over this line have a better record for reaching either end of their run "on time" than those of any other line in the country.

THE

All well posted travelers between the Twin Cities and Chicago take this line—particularly favoring the "Vestibule Limited," which carries the finest sleeping cars and coaches ever built, and also all classes of passengers, without extra fares. On the Lake Superior portion of the line, between Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth, and St. Paul and Ashland, Pullman sleepers are run on night trains, and parlor cars on day trains.

NORTHWESTERN

Pullman sleepers are also run through between Duluth, Superior and Chicago. Fast through trains are also run between Minneapolis, St. Paul and Kansas City via Sioux City, with through Pullman sleepers St. Paul to Omaha and Kansas City. Dining cars are run on all through trains over this line between Minnesota is, St. Paul and Chicago, and between St. Paul and Kansas City. Besides being the best between these principal cities, The Chicago & Northwestern system of lines composed of the Chicago, St. Paul & Omaha, Chicago & Northwestern, and Fremont, Elkhorn & Mo. Valles R'ys—(all advertised as "The Northwestern Line,") traverses a rich and populous country, and offers the quickest means of reaching all the large towns and villages in the territory intersected by it. Before selecting a route, travelers should get a folder, with a map of this line, and they will quickly see the advantages offered. All particulars, with maps and time tables, may be obtained at any station, or write direct to

LINE

STATE TEACHERS INSTITUTE.

An Institute for the County of Polk, will be he held at the Court House, in the city of Crookston, during the week commencing Monday, October 6th, 1890. The State will provide efficient instructors, who will be furnished with such professional books, apparatus and material as have been thoroughly tested and found to be of special service to teachers. Great pains will be taken to make the instruction pointed and in the highest degree practical, in matters pertaining to the management and grading of schools and the teaching of common school branches.

One evening will be devoted to a lecture by some good speaker; another to literary exercises under the care of the conductor. The literary study this year will be Longfellow's Evangeline. An edition of Evangeline to be used in the Minnesota Institutes will be issued by Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., of Boston. Teachers may procure copies of them by mail, or from the conductors at the institute. It would be well to read it once before coming to the institute.

Teachers are requested to note that, after this fall, examination questions in "Theory and Practice" sent out by this Department will be based on Page's Theory and Practice; and the instructors will make free use of the same work. Every teacher should procure a copy for use in the institute and for subsequent study.

Teachers who take a proper interest in their calling, and who desire by self-improvement to advance to higher positions, will be present at the opening Monday afternoon and remain till Friday evening. At the close of the week, a certificate, signed by the State Superintendent, county superintendent and the conductor, will be issued to all who have been neither tardy nor absent at any session, and who have been diligent and shown progress in the work of the institute.

All schools can be legally closed during institute week at the request of the teachers or the county superintendent.

The institute will be in charge of the superintendent, who will make all required arrangements for its success, as well as for the accommodation of teachers, who are requested to give him early notice of their intention to be present, that he may provide board for all at the lowest rates.

Our Old Friend of Thirty Years.

Midway News.

For one to either cunningly or brazenly seek to subvert the general good to his own selfish agrandisement or elevation has been depreciated by the good and wise of all ages. The sublimest human conception of the Divinity is that God took upon Himself the form of man and suffered torture and death to save the people. The grandest yet most awful conception of the diabolical is that satan eternally plunged his followers into irretrievable perdition in the vain hope of himself equaling the Most High. Here is a principle more enduring than all party platforms. The true American is not he who is drawn from one side to the other, like a follower of Robispierre, by the promise of patronage or position, but he who is bound to truth by some deep, firm, enduring principle. There are no doubt among the readers of the Midway News, especially among those not acquainted with the editor and his former publication, the Plainview News, who fancy that many of the personal thrusts we have made at the very nice, very smooth, very polite, very smart, very bold, but, alas! also, very vain and very selfish old gentleman upon whom the Democratic nomination for governor has just been conferred, that in these attacks we but fell into the common error of modern journalistic beligerence. It is not so. We are free to say that as a man we entertain the kindest of feelings toward the genteel affable judge, Thomas Wilson, and as a journalist our expressions, even though they may have seemed unkind at times, were dictated by the sincere sense of duty. Whatever bitterness we may have manifested was but the resentment, natural in all human beings, of one whom it was sought to entrap by a mixture of affable kindness, compounded with a certain amount of judicial dignity, much serpentine subtility, a nerve of cast-caststeel effrontery, and falsehood diabolical. Naturally enough, too, we may feel a litle vain over our easy escape from the wiles and snares laid for us, by, reputedly, "the smartest railroad lawyer in the West." For the benefit of such as may regard the so-called "roasts" we have heretofore given judge Wilson as the stabs of a malicious tongue, we wish to explain that Thomas Wilson has not always been a great railroad lawyer. Thirty years ago he was a young country lawyer. Smart as a steel trap, soft as a glove, and audacious as hell, he found no difficulty in climbing the ladder of legal technicalities. Politically he was a Republican then, but, as now, the party, with him, was a means, not an end. As the Republican party of Minnesota was then overwhelmingly in the majority, young Wilson found it very convenient to use it as a ladder to reach the county attorneyship of Winona County, which then included what is now Wabasha County, where for ten years we ran the Plainview News and got acquainted with him. From county attorney he climbed the same ladder to the judgship of the district; from that to the supreme court; from the supreme court he grasped for the United States Senatorship' but, unfortunately, somewhat after the manner of the late Mr. McGinty, and his first predecessor in vain ambition, the early Mr. Satan, he fell to the bottom of the hole, since which time he has been a democrat, or, more properly speaking, a "jiboose," that is, as he explains it, "he is a Democrat who is almost as good as a Republican." It was about this time that "King Corporation" formally made his royal entrance in this country, and to convince the king of his valor young Tom Wilson attacked him, figuratively speaking, "on the bridge at midnight," that is, the Chicago & Northwestern Railway company undertook to compel the people of Winona to pay for their bridge over the Mississippi, and young Wilson, then defeated and hard-up, took the case of the people and routed the railroad company. It is no little achievement now, it was a greater one then, to down a great railroad company. The successful termination of this case, which was fought for several years, together with his many estimable personal qualities, made Mr. Wilson the idol of many of his Winona and Wabasha County neighbors, whom of late years he always designates as "his old friends of thirty years." The towns of Plainview and Elgin having later been caught into a $100,000 railroad bond deal for the benefit of the Chicago & Northwestern railway, his "old friends of thirty years," knowing of his former success against this company, at once sought his services, but after consultation, were informed by him that they had no case. They sought other counsel, namely, Robert Taylor, of Kasson, and C. M. Start, of Rochester, and finally went to court. The first unmistakable evidence we had of the judge's duplicity was when he appeared in the same case as counsel for the railroad company; the second was when, after having the case decided against him in the supreme court, he had himself elected to the state legislature by the solid vote of Chicago & Northwestern car shop employes in Winona, and then sought, by special legislation, to achieve what he had failed to do in the courts, beat his "old friends of thirty years" out of $100,000. The fact that these, his "old friends of thirty years," whom he thus sought to defraud, happened to be precisely those whom our then publication, the Plainview News, was pledged to defend, is how we happened, for now nearly fifteen years, to make a special study of the railroad lawyer and politician, Thomas Wilson. But it was not until his disbursing agent in his first congressional campaign, Lyman M. Gregg, failed to tempt us with monied considerations, and, after the Hon. Thomas himself had exhausted his fund of affability, geniality, dignity, honor, friendship, cunning, subtility, audacity and rank falsehood to secure our political support in that campaign, in which he also dismally failed, that we have learned to look upon a gentleman whom so many good people regard with respect, with such utter contempt. We could never forgive ourself did we permit him to be elected governor of this great state, under his past and present unholy alliances, without venting our conscience of what we know of the man to the utmost extent of our humble powers.

The Cause at Benson.

BENSON, Minn., Sept. 24.—[Special Correspondence to Daily News.]—The Alliance campaign opened here last night with an address from A. S. Edwards, a representative of the Knights of Labor, who handled the industrial problem with earnestness and force that left an impression upon his audience that will bear fruit worthy of the cause. His appeal to the vigorous, thinking men of the present to deal with living issues that confront the industrial masses of the day, was well received by the people, who are in sympathy with the cause of the toilers of the country. The people of this county are fully awake to the Alliance cause, and not only the farmers, but the laboring and business men are taking an active interest in the cause of the mass against the class.

FARMER.

Worried About Party Welfare.

St. Paul Daily News.

A well posted man who has just been through Otter Tail county on business—not on politics—says that Mr. Owen will get no democratic votes in this county from democratic Alliance men. Mr. Wilson will get the full democratic vote when the time comes. The democrts will keep up the Owen racket until election day, then quietly vote solid for Wilson. Republicans who are in the Alliance should not be caught in a trap like this.—Fergus Falls Journal.

The above is a sample of almost the entire stock in trade of the argument put forth by the Merriam papers against the Alliance movement.

They cannot truthfully and do not attempt to allege anything personally against Mr. Owen.

Neither can they truthfully find any serious fault with the platform of the Alliance, though a few make feeble efforts in that direction.

The consequence is that they fall back upon the democratic bugaboo. They appeal to republicans to stand by their party, even though it robs them, rather than run the risk of siding another party, which by reducing taxation would put money in their pockets.

There are a very large number of democrats who will vote for Mr. Owen, but it is true there is less reason for their doing so than for the republicans, because the democratic party is practically upon the same tariff platform as the Alliance.

The tariff is the vital business question and the one which touches the pockets of the people.

At the same time the Alliance represents other popular interests, such as opposition to grasping, corporate monopolist, upon which the democratic party is not so radical.

There is consequently room for the new organization and an opportunity for it to become a National movement. It is naturally to be expected that the new party will draw votes from the old party which is least in accord with its principles. Being a new party, it must draw its entire strength from the old organizations, and it would not be common sense to assume it will not make its strongest pull upon the party whose principles are diametrically in opposition.

When the anti-slavery party, from which the republican party sprung was formed, it drew from both organizations, and for a time almost equally. In 1848 it drew even more from the democrats than from the Whigs, but that was owing rather to internal dissensions in the democratic party than a question of principle.

The sequel of it every one knows. Finding a larger anti-slavery element in the Whig than the democratic party, the Whig party was disintegrated and the new Republican party formed.

History is now repeating itself. The republican party is liable to disintegrate, but it can still remain the dominant party by coming over and joining the Alliance movement.

This result can only be secured by sound defeat, and those who have heretofore acted with the republican party are really acting in a manner to maintain and ultimately strengthen it, by voting against it the present fall, as the only method of correcting the abuses which have crept into the organization.

The true friends of the republican party are not the ones who are so solicitous for drawing party lines, but those who have independence and sagacity enough to stand by their own interests, regardless of party names.

Minnesota's Dairy Interests

Minneapolis Journal.

One of the most impressive exhibits at the recent state fair was that devoted to dairy products. It embodied the strongest possible evidence of Minnesota's superiority and development as a dairy state; the adaptation of the climate, grasses and water to the industry, intelligence and prevision of the people. Such an exhibit, at the World's Fair in Chicago, would cover the North Star state with glory. It would be the means of adding thousands of intelligent and industrious people to our population.

Such an exhibit potently suggests the change which has come over the farming community of this state during the last decade. The growing of cereals, especially through the southern counties, is giving way to the stock and dairy industries. The latter has been found to be a most profitable branch of farming. No soil is exhausted for the product. An essential food is produced and the market for dairy product is generally good, at home and abroad. And now when the machinery for speedy butter making has reached a marvelous degree of completeness and economy, the tendency in this state of pure water and rich grasses to plant less grain and own the best milch cows and dairy machinery is strengthening.

This dairy industry of Minnesota represents value in cows, calves, and butter, cheese and milk product of about $50,000,000 and the increase is raped. There is no state in the union so free from disease of any kind as this, and the climate is admirably adapted to the breeding of the best cows. It was appropriate to give the industry such special prominence in all its phases at the state fair. It was the largest and finest dairy exhibit ever made in this state and probably in the West. The importance of the subject was recognized by the management of the exposition and dairying is the only farm industry given a place among the exhibits. It is gratifying, too, to see that the state fair management offered liberal and numerous premiums to butter makers. Too much cannot be done to strengthen this great industry and to bring expert butter and cheese makers to establish themselves in the state. What has been acomplished during the last 20 years, is evidence enough of the fact that Minnesota is a natural home for the dairying industry.

Why not try it once! Elect a governor whom the people have selected, S. M. Owen?

Never mind what politicians and stump speakers may say, you have a sacred duty you owe yourselves and your families, and that is to elect your own governor and legislature.

Don't think more of party than anything else, said Wilson the other evening. All right, Thomas, we won't. We will go right ahead and elect Owen, the independent candidate for Governor.

The fact that the farmers must do it if anything ever is done for them, ought by this time to be emphatically impressed upon the minds of all. And there is no time like the present to do it.

When other business interests are suffering for lack of legislation they do not send a farmer to correct the evil. Why should not the farmers adopt the same system and send only farmers to attend to their business for them? They should, and we believe that they will.

The politicians are scared to death for fear the people will elect Owen, all the while they appear to be serene, and they say: "Of course, the farmers could elect their candidate if they will stick together, but then, of course, they will not do that, don-cher-know. But wont they? We believe they will.

Oh, yes, you had better vote to perpetuate the enormous tax on the old cow! Why had you better do so? Oh, because some politician may ask you to do so, and not because it will be of any benefit to you. That's good logic, ain't it? Well, it is the only reason under the canopy why you should not elect Owen.

Under the present market system the farmer is bound to lose every time. The quickest and surest way to effect a cure is to elect S. M. Owen and a farmer legislature to back him. If every farmer will now take hold in earnest, this can be done. And they are doing it. Remember last fall and vote as you have talked. Send your own men to correct the pernicious system.

Elevator stock is gilt-edged and elevators that only handle the wheat are worth their weight in gold, while the farms that RAISE the wheat are a drug upon the market. This is wholly wrong, should be changed and will be changed with a farmer governor and a farmer legislature to back him. It is to the interest of this country to change the deal. To do it vote for Owen and a farmer legislature.

They say "the farmers can't stick together!" Who says it?" Why, those who do not want to have them do so. Well, this fall will tell the story and prove whether it is so or not. The farmers have nominated a grand good man for governor, and if they stick together they will elect him as sure as fate. If they don't they will help to elect somebody who will do nothing to help them. What will they do? They will elect Owen, we think.

Look out for all kinds of roorbacks and campaign lies. Stand firm for your cause and you will win. Remember that your cause is just, that in S. M. Owen you have the best candidate in the field, and then unitedly vote for him and your legislative ticket, and no power on earth can defeat you. Those who oppose you are active and vigilant and well supplied with the sinews of war and will hesitate at nothing to carry their point. Never mind that. Be true to your cause and you will deserve to win and you will win.

How do you expect that a governor who makes his money out of railroad and elevator stocks will bother himself to squeeze the watered stock out of railroads and elevators? S. M. Owen is a poor man—like the average farmer of to-day, and has no railroad or elevator stock, and if elected will not scruple to squeeze to the best of his ability. Try him once.

It is true that the farmers lack for money to pay for big speeches and to get up a big hurrah, but they always will be too poor for these things and everything else until they learn to do as other business men do—attend to their own business. It is your business to elect your governor and your own legislature now that you have nominated them. Will you be united on this question? We believe you will.

We have heard that Gov. Merriam has been accused of being the farmers' friend, because a binding twine factory is to be established at Stillwater. But how is that, anyhow? Did not the committee appointed by Merriam two years ago come back and report that it would cost a million or so, and was therefore impracticable? Did not the alliance revive the scheme last spring, and was it not on their demand that another committee investigated and reported that the cost would be merely nominal, and was not that the reason that Minnesota will have a twine factory? Give the Devil his due and don't accuse our good "business Governor" of something that he is entirely innocent of.

The managers of the Merriam campaign seem to be wholly in the dark as to what the real strength of the Alliance will be. It is an unknown quantity that bothers them more than the candidacy of railroad attorney Wilson. They have confidently expected that the farmers would all rally around the Merriam standard by this time, and the fact that the farmers do not rally to an alarming extent, bothers them. Although they have sought diligently they have utterly failed to find anything against Owen, who is daily making hosts of friends in the state. Owen is the only candidate who is trying to accomplish those things that the farmers need, and hence its strength.

The two great parties are now mendicants before the people for votes. With hat in hand they are in the field begging the suffrage of the dear people. And this is the people's opportunity—the time to correct the evils that do exist in our markets. This is a very important matter to farmers who are in great need of legislation to help them in their business. The warehouse bill will fully correct existing evils. Are these mendicants for votes willing to pledge us this? Are they willing to pledge us money loaned direct to the people, instead of through the round-about methods now in vogue? Will they pledge us government control of railroads? Will they pledge us equality in taxation? Certainly they should be willing to for us in return for our votes. What will they do?

THE JOURNAL urges the voters to select only such men for county offices as are competent, honest and trustworthy, regardless of the party that represented them. Not one of them has the power to affect the price of wheat a cent's worth, but when you come to the gubernatorial and legislative ticket, that's different. Elect S. M. Owen with a solid farmer legislature to back him, and that's different. Then you will accomplish something that will affect the price of your wheat if it can be done by legislation—

AND IT CAN BE.

Remember that Owen and a farmer legislature will be elected

ON THAT ISSUE,

pledged to enact laws in behalf of the farmers and the laboring classes, and and no other candidates before the people stand upon this platform. Farmers, be TRUE to your own interests by casting one ballot for yourselves.

Why the Farmers Kick.

Last Wednesday, Oct. 1st, wheat in this city was 82 for No. 1 Hard; in Duluth it was $1.01. Only nineteen cents difference, and yet political schemers cry out in surprise, "what ails the farmers?" Oh, yes, what ails them? A clear steal of five cents a bushel is not much for each individual farmer, but it means over $150,000 withdrawn from the channels of trade in Polk County. Not only the farmers, but the business men of the county also should kick vigorously. Do you suppose this condition of things would exist if we had government warehouses? Not much, and every buyer well knows it. "Kick?" Well, if there is a spark of the old feeling of 1776 left in the people they will kick and kick hard until the deal is changed.

What's the matter with Owen? Why nothing, only the farmers nominated him, and according to the average politician the farmers don't know enough to nominate anybody. All they know or ought to know is enough to vote for candidates nominated by ring politicians. As long as they do this unquestioningly they are "bully boys." Vote for S. M. Owen.

Judge Christianson has performed the duties of the important office of Probate Judge in a perfectly satisfactory manner and, in our judgment, is the best man for the place now before the people for their approval. If honesty and efficiency in office are any object, vote for C. O Christianson for Probate Judge. THE JOURNAL has no doubt of his election, for the people want efficient officers.

The republican state central committee pretend to be serene, confident that the republican ticket will win. Why should it? Some of its nominees were thrust upon the ticket contrary to the will of the people and their only object is to win. Should they win the farmers may go to grass and whistle for their free and open market, for all they care. This is also true of the democratic ticket. The farmers should and will stand by Owen.

Why should you vote for Wilson or Merriam when you have in S. M. Owen a far more able, a far better man, a true and steadfast friend to the laboring men and the farmers. A few politicians, the elevators and railroads are interested in the election of Wilson or of Merriam, but neither one of them, if elected, will care a straw whether the evils in the market system are cured or not. Vote for Owen.

Money is a powerful agent in the hands of unscrupulous men, but it is powerless if the people are sufficiently alive to their true interests. The colonists when they declared war against England, were a poor people, yet they won the fight after a long and bitter struggle. To-day the farmer is fighting for his rights in the market and he will win if he is true to his cause.

"America is a wealthy nation," says railroad attorney Wilson; yes, and when there are as many millionaire farmers as other business men, then will the tillers of the soil cease to kick.

Those who are opposed to the farmers' acting for themselves are flattering themselves that the alliance party will be defeated, because, they argue, the farmers haven't got sufficient funds to run a campaign. They think that money is the only thing that is needed. Every farmer should be a missionary in the good cause until after election.

Thor Haldorson, a prominent farmer of Mentor, was in the city last week to prove up on his claim. Mr. H. takes a very sensible view of the situation and thinks that the farmer can easily control it if he will assert his rights. He thinks it is by a combination of interests and plans that this can be accomplished, and thinks if the alliance had been formed long ago agricultural interests would have been far better subserved with half the trouble so far experienced. He thinks farmers should stick to Owen and the legislative ticket, and after having elected them, should keep the altar fires on the alliance burning brightly, so as to be better prepared to cope against those who fatten off the proceeds of the farmers' toil. Mr. H. says he shall vote for Owen and the legislative ticket, and for county officers the best men on any ticket. So say we all of us.

Doc. Nelson came up to take in the democrat rally last week. The doctor considers such things like the measles, mumps, and so on, necessary evils, but not dangerous when you have a good doctor handy. The boys didn't catch any of it this trip.

Dot leetle Fertile band is a dandy—a Jim Dandy. The way they made the welkin ring with their music on Wednesday night of last week was a caution to the old settlers. They would be a credit to a much larger place than Fertile, and are deserving of a liberal patronage. Their music thawed the democratic iceberg for once in his life.

J. S. Nichols, of Liberty, was up to hear what railroad atty. Wilson had to say last week. He says that Liberty will go solid for the alliance ticket. Says he knows of only nine democrats in the town and they are all solid for the alliance. And so the good work goes on. The farmers are in the saddle this year and propose to vote for themselves once.

The Merriam strikers have forced objectionable candidates upon their ticket and now let them elect them. The people are not in it.

Judge C. O. Christianson has been a faithful official and is just the man for the place. Remember the Judge when you cast your ballot.

Farmers, when you cast your ballots next month, remember last fall and cast your ballot for a free and open wheat market. Your candidates for the legislature and S. M. Owen are pledged to aid you in the good work—others are not. Be independent and vote for yourselves once in your life and see how it would seem. If you elect your own men you will accomplish your purpose, if you do not you will not. That's the difference.

The Mankato Daily Free Press goes into heroics because at an alliance meeting held at Pipestone the other day the farmers contributed one hundred dollars toward the campaign expenses for the alliance ticket, and says: "Every man who contributed one dollar paid more than the tariff on twine would amount to in three years?"

So? Well, that is truly wonderful, is it not? Under the present system of marketing wheat every farmer who raises one hundred bushels of wheat pays at least to support the system that is robbing him. If he raises one thousand bushels he pays to support the robber system. And this is a forced contribution for which he does not even get the credit of being a liberal contributor to the campaign expenses. If Owen is elected, and a farmer legislature to back him, this system will be changed and the farmer will get his rights in the market. The elevator companies and the railroad companies are large contributors to the campaign fund to elect Wilson or Merriam and they make it up out of the farmer! Farmers, which had you rather do? Contribute a dollar or two now and then to fight the robber corporations, or be assessed by them ten dollars or more on every hundred bushels of wheat you raise, to perpetuate the system that is despoiling you? Now is the time for you to decide that question as you cast your ballot on Nov. 4th. A vote for Owen and a farmer legislature is a vote for an open wheat market.

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS

In his letter to the St. Paul News, Mr. Ives says:

"If it can be shown that Mr. Merriam, as the executive, has not obeyed the laws, has not enforced them, or has enforced them partially, to the disadvantage of the farmer or the laborer, then he should not have the support of any one, and in such case, the proof being decisive, no one in the broad domain would labor harder or longer to defeat him than I would."

Does not the law make it the duty of the Governor to appoint the Board of Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners, and the duty of that commission so appointed, to appoint the employes under it? Did not Governor Merriam, after he had appointed the Board, dictate the appointment of all of the employes under the Board? Did not Chas. A. Pillsbury control these appointments in Minneapolis and Chas. H. Graves those in Duluth? Are they not the head of the elevator system? And do you call this "to the advantage of the farmer?" Again, do you call the appointments on the Board of Equalization "to the advantage of the farmer?"

Tom Wilson, in his speech the other night, said that America was a very rich and prosperous country. Only a few years since, he said, John Jacob Astor was about the only millionaire in the country, and now the woods are full of 'em, or words to that effect. He failed however to tell us how many he finds to the square acre in America! He failed to tell us that these millionaires are made rich by taking undue advantage of the farmers and grinding them down into the dust. He failed to tell us that these same millionaires do not pay their due proportion of taxes in this same wealthy America, and he omitted lots of interesting things in connection therewith that he might have said, for well enough he knows all about it.

The democratic candidate for Governor, Thomas Wilson, spoke in the Opera House to a good crowd on Wednesday evening, Oct. 1st. E. W. Wile introduced the speaker, saying that it did him lots of good to introduce "the next Governor, &c." We reckon that Wile he meant well enough, Ed. was a little too previous in that remark. The Fertile band came up with the excursion and discoursed excellent music, which saved the audience from freezing to death in the shadow of the icicle. After the effort at the Opera House the band serenaded our city for a time and departed for home with the excursion about midnight. And the farmers and laboring men will go right along and elect S. M. Owen for Governor, just the same.

OVER THREE MILLIONS.

Last winter, with the best information to be had, THE JOURNAL estimated the amount of wheat raised in Polk County, at 2,000,000 bushels. This week deputy auditor Cornelius informs us that by statistics now in his possession it is shown that the county produced over 3,000,000 bushels. On a basis of 2,000,000 bushels one cent per bushel means a loss or gain of $20,000 to Polk County, and on 3,000,000, $30,000. Now we are confident that the farmers, through watered stock, freight rates and frauds in the wheat market were defrauded out of at least 10 cents per bushel, which on 3,000,000 bushels means dollars withdrawn from the legitimate channels of trade in the county. Is not this a matter in which the business man of Polk County is mutually interested with the farmer? Is it not high time that steps were taken to prevent this immense drain upon our resources, or shall we continue to sleep upon this volcano until it swamps the whole fabric of our prosperity? Now, if some well-informed person will tell us what steps our "business" Governor and our "business" Board of Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners ever has or ever would take (were they continued in power) to stop this leak, we should be happy to hear from him. Don't be backward, but just speak right out in meeting and let us know about it. The only way we can see is by electing Owen for governor and a farmer legislature to back him, and then we believe it can be done. One thing is very certain, S. M. Owen would never make those appointments to further his own political ambitions.

THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND

A. R. Holston is just the man for county attorney. He is a bright young man and will do credit to the office. See that the name of A. R. Holston is on your ballot.

To The Farmer's Alliance of of Polk Co. Minn.

GENTLEMEN:—The farmers and workingmen of Minnesota in general and of Polk County in particular have arisen in their might to shake off the burdens that monopolists, usurers and corrupt machine politicians have placed upon them. As a first step to that end, the farmers and laborers have declared their independence of the democratic and republican parties both of which have deserted the principles of their founders and are now ruled, controlled and run by the monopolists and for the monopolists, while the interests, the wants and the needs of the people are neglected. A full Farmers Alliance State, Congressional, Legislative and County ticket has been placed in the field and a victory for the Alliance means the control of the State and county affairs by the people. Besides and furthermore this movement is but the advance guard of a great reform party which, in 1892 will sweep the nation from Maine to California, and place in the Presidential chair a man of the people. Monopoly will be dethroned and the reign of the plutocrats will end, and again we will have restored to the masses a government of the people, by the people and for the people.

Your candidates are mostly poor men like yourselves; your leaders are without money or means and are now pitted againts the hirelings of monopoly, and are fighting for your interests the most desperate political battle ever waged upon the soil of Minnesota. Defeat means ruin to your leaders, increased taxes to you and the filling of your offices with the tools of your oppressors. It means that interest, taxes, freight rates and tariff will be high and that your wheat will still pay tribute to the elevator pirates; success means the abolition of these iniquitous robberies now being so successfully practiced upon the farmers and in fact upon all the poor or middle-classes of whatsoever profession, calling or trade, for nearly all the poor people in the city who feel the sting of poverty and wear the yoke of monopoly more galling than the one which our lawmakers and office-holders have placed around the necks of the farmers. Your County Committee are willing to work, but to send our speakers and campaign literature requires money. "We must educate or must perish."

Many towns and villages are without alliance organizations; these can and must be organized before the election if we would win. To organize means expense. Will the farmers furnish the money to fight their own battle? We do not want a corruption fund but we do want money for the purpose of paying the necessary expenses for organization, speaking and campaign documents. We have no candidate with a barrel; we cannot call upon the rich for contributions—their money is being spent by the enemy to defeat us and elect the hirelings of plutocracy. You farmers, you individually, are the men to pay these campaign expenses. We want every farmer in Polk county to give somthing—be it little or much. If you cannot contribute much give all you can. Let those better fixed give their dollars and the poorer their quarters. Remember every cent given will come back a hundred fold. Call an alliance meeting at once for the purpose. Give all that you can, personally or from the alliance funds, and have your secretary forward the amount to E. E. Lommen, the chairman of the County Central Committee, Crookston, Minn. You will get a receipt for your money sent and the committee will account to your alliance for the manner in which every cent so contributed is spent. Do not delay but send in at once.

Wheat is coming up a little.

Ben Clements was up from Little Falls this week.

See Mrs. Bangs' styles and get prices before you purchase your millinery.

The Polk County teachers are holding an institute in this city. A large number are in attendance.

Carpenters are at work taking out the back stairs at the court house. We don't call that an improvement.

This is a cold fall for the ordinary campaign methods. The farmers don't propose to be fooled all of the time.

Miss Lizzie Zarracher came up from her school in Fisher to attend the institute now in session at the court house.

Will Heidrich goes this week to take a run between Duluth and Staples. Will is coming to the front in good shape.

A. R. Holston is doing more to build up the alliance cause than for his own election. The people will take care of that part.

Work on the new sewers on Main street commenced early on Monday morning. Work day and night until completed.

Engineer Jack Bunnell has rented the Dr. Barnes house and will bring his family to Crookston to live. Welcome home again, Jack.

Gorton's famous minstrels at the Opera House on Monday evening next. Popular prices. Tickets on sale at Tom Morris' jewelry store.

Mayor McKinnon has purchased a lot back of the round house and is moving the house recently occupied by Mrs. I. U. Jennings thereon.

Wright, Barrett & Stilwell's handsome traveling man, Andrew, was in on Wednesday raking in the orders among the newspaper boys. Andrew is a bird.

The Globe man mixed those children up in good shape. He undoubtedly interviewed everybody in the city and charged st all up to THE JOURNAL man.

A large and enthuastic alliance rally was held at Fisher on Saturday last. Several speakers were in attendance and the watch fires were kept burning ill eventide. Let the good work go on.

The city has been billed for Gorton's minstrel troupe, which will appear in this city on Monday evening, Oct, 13th. This is a company of white men and is said to be one of the best on the road.

If you want value for your money in the boot and shoe line call at Holmboe's. New goods arriving every week. [14-27]

And now they say that A. R. Holston is a demagogue because he is trying to help the farmers get a free and open wheat market. Better be a "demagogue" (if that is a demagogue) in a good cause than an oily, sleek saint trying to defeat an upright cause.

Crookston alliance met on Saturday last, held a very interesting session and adjourned till next Saturday, Oct. 11th, at 2 p. m. Let everybody come who can and let us keep the watch fires burning. Every alliance man should be right on deck from now until the polls close on November 4th.

William Henry Eustis spoke to a small audience on Tuesday evening. He threshed over a lot of old straw on the tariff question and requested all present to stand by the party of great ideas, but said not a word about standing by Merriam, which shows that William Henery is all right in the main. He was followed by John L. Gibbs, who, shifting the collar a little to one side so he could breathe easier, said: "I do hope you will vote for Merriam," which was a natural enough wish where a $3,000 a year job is concerned. He failed to say what good thing Merriam had ever done to this people to entitle him to this honor, which left the impression that the fat take for farmer John L. was the father to the wish. After a few more remarks in which he did not tell the people what he has ever done for them to earn their money, he subsided and the show broke up. Such meetings as that would soon bring every voter in Polk County into the alliance work.

S. M. Owen in Crookston.

At the time of going to press we are notified that Owen will arrive in Crookston at 7 a. m., on Monday, Oct. 27th, and leave on the evening train. The time of his speech will be arranged later and announced. Everybody come and see our next Governor and hear him speak.

We Need Money.

Realizing the position that our farmers have been in for several years we have sent out but few bills to this class of our patrons. The result is that many of them are on our books for two or three years and we are very much in need of all that is due us. This fall, as crops are excellent and prices somewhat better than for several years, we trust that all who are in arrears on subscription will make an extra effort to come and see us. Remember that it costs money to print a paper and that all of our bills must be paid promptly, or within 60 days. All who duly appreciate the efforts THE JOURNAL is making in behalf of an open market, will, we feel assured, not hesitate to do all they can to sustain us in the work. In order to succeed we should have the name of every farmer in the county on our list, as we need your support and influence just as much as you do ours. If our friends will stand by us and themselves the cause is sure to win. We are willing to work and do all that we can in this glorious cause. Will you help us?

A singular accident happened to Mr. Munch's grey mare one day last week. The animal was turned out to exercise herself a few minutes and while playing with her colt, ran into a wood pile and broke her neck.

Crookston alliance, No. 648, met on Saturday at the usual hour, and after discussing the situation, more particularly in relation to the alliance ticket, adjourned until next Saturday, at 2 o'clock. A full attendance is requested.

Mr. Taylor, city editor of the Little Falls Transcript, was in the city on Monday. Said he heard more alliance business here than he ever dreamed of before. He thinks it is in the atmosphere and left as quick as he could lest it should be contagious. From all he could learn, Polk County will give a tremendous Owen vote.

Saturday's Globe gives the editor of this paper a breeze as is a breeze. We should be more pleased with that sheet if it would come within gun-shot of what we really said. Next thing we know the Globe will make us say that "W. R. Merriam shot his grandmother." We fail to see what good there is accomplished by such gross mis-interpretations.

Just recieved at Minnie & Mrs J. L. Bailey's a fine line of Ladies' and children's Hats. Opening 15th to 18th. Please call and see goods. Prices to suit the times.

Mr. Albert Simpson returned last week from a trip west. In next issue he will give JOURNAL readers his impressions of the western country. He says as an agricultural country he does not consider it a glowing success—too dry. Potatoes were no crop at all and corn less, a little wheat but nothing to be compared with our No. 1 Hard. He returns perfectly satisfied that Polk County as an all 'round country is all right.

A. R. Holston, alliance candidate for county attorney, was in the city on Monday. He says the cause is progressing very encouragingly. The democratic alliance man is not going to crawfish worth a cent, but will cast his vote for Owen all the same like any good alliance man. The democrats, however, still flatter themselves that the alliance men will flock like sheep to railroad attorney Wilson. But they will not.

A. J. & A. McKinnon have purchased M. R. Brown's large brick barn and are making it over into a fine carriage shop. By the way did it ever strike you that the McKinnon boys have put everything they ever earned in Crookston into taxable property? They are among our heaviest tax-payers and as public spirited boys, are hard to beat. It is such men as these that are creditable to a city and who make good citizens.

Ladies, did you call at Mrs. E. E. Bangs' millinery emporium this week? We guess you did, for there were a thousand or so who did, and such a display! Well, now, if you think we can write that display up you are quite mistaken. It must be seen to be fully appreciated. And the prices—the wonder is how those superb goods can be sold so cheaply. Mrs. B. has an artistic trimmer as all who have seen Miss Veroneau's work can testify.

As the statement is going the rounds that Mr. E. J. Grefthen has nothing but a second grade certificate, that gentleman desires to be set right before our readers, and elsewhere we publish a copy of a first-grade certificate which he carries. Mr. G. was educated at the institute at Decorah, Iowa, spent two years at a Normal school, has taught 14 terms and has very high recommendations from several noted educators in the land, one of which we reproduce elsewhere.

RED LAKE FALLS, Oct. 2, 1890.

ED. POLK COUNTY JOURNAL:—Please allow me space to say a few words in your paper for my young friend, A. R. Holston, the farmers' alliance candidate for county attorney. Mr. Holston is one of those young men who paid for his own education by working on the farm by the month, his father, an old soldier of the 7th Ill. Vol. Inf., having died in the war when A. R. was five years old. His mother being poor, he went to live among strangers and made his own way in the world. He had two older brothers in the war one of whom died at Little Rock, Arkansas, and the other one is a cripple for life, having been wounded twice at the battle of Stone River, and from what I know of A. R. he would have been there if he had been old enough. Mr. Holston is always ready to help us old soldiers when he can, and during the past three years he has made out many affidavits for me to sign to assist old soldiers in getting their pensions, and has never charged me a cent for it. Now that Mr. Holston, who was himself brought up on the farm, has come out and is working for our cause and working for the election of that old soldier, S. M. Owen, I feel that all of us old soldiers and farmers should stand by and elect him to the office of county attorney. I know Mr. Holston, as does every one at Red Lake Falls, to be an honest man and a good lawyer.

M. JEFFERS,
Sec. Alliance No. 974.

HILLSBORO, N. D., July 30, 1890.

ED. RED RIVER DALEN:—We notice with great pleasure the nomination of Mr. E. J. Grefthen for the Superintendency of Polk County. We congratulate Mr. Grefthen, and still more the people of Polk County, if he is elected, as no doubt he will be. Mr. Grefthen taught several terms in your sister state of North Dakota, in Trail County. He is a man of most excellent habits, active, able, energetic, and hence it is that we are pleased to note his nomination, while we regret to lose him from our own ranks. Our loss will be your gain. He is always a firm and genial friend, a wide awake, successful teacher and a thorough man. He should have no opposition. Yours sincerely, Gorton's Minstrels.

Gorton's famous New Orleans Minstrels, one of the best burnt cork organizations in existence, will appear at the Crookston Opera House on Monday evening, Oct. 13th. Of this performance the Newark, Ohio, Daily Advocate says: "The high expectations entertained by the large and critical audience were more than realized. There was everything in the performance to commend and nothing to criticize. Did our space permit we would like to give a special mention of each performer—for each was worthy of it. Suffice it to say that the Gold Band gave some of the finest band music we have ever heard. The singing and the dancing were superb and the musical features unsurpassed."

East Grand Forks News: R. S. Knudson who was with the Commercial college at Grand Forks is now with the Commercial college at Crookston—which will register 100 students. Prof. Lanigan did good work at Grand Forks and he is to be commended for his enterprise. Polk county should be proud of his school.

CROOKSTON BUSINESS COLLEGE AND INSTITUTE OF SHORTHAND.

TEACHING FOREIGNERS.

A Business College has great advantages over other schools for teaching Germans Scandinavians and other foreigners.

Of course, business is done in this country very differently from the way it is done in the old country, and a young man who has been in America only a few years cannot understand what is needed in business here, unless somebody teaches him. If he goes into a store, no one there has the time to teach him. So the best place to learn how business is done is in a college.

In our school he can learn how to read and write the English language correctly, and prepare himself to conduct his own business affairs successfully.

Our teachers will do all they can to help along those who do not know our language very well, and every student receives personal, and individual instruction.

Our foreign students generally make as good progress as our American students.

There is a great demand in business for young men who can speak the German or Scandinavian languages, so our foreign students have no trouble in getting work when they finish our course of study.

Ignatius Donnelly will take the stump for the alliance ticket. We told you he would. Now let monopoly howl.

The election of Owen means an attempt to correct the evils that exist in our market. The election of Merriam means that the market system is all right as it exists.

You have been talking all summer about voting the independent ticket, and now what are you going to do? Are you going to vote for Owen and your legislative ticket or are you going to snuggle up to your old party ticket like a sick kitten to a hot brick? Politicians all say that you are going to snuggle up! We guess not. You have too much independence.

Reports from all over the county show that the alliance ticket will get an immense vote. Every farmer is interested in a free and open wheat market, and this fall, by voting for S. M. Owen and the farmer legislature, he will be enabled to vote for it. Every farmer in Polk County should vote for his own interests once, and his interests clearly lie in the election of S. M. Owen.

Merriam party leaders are flattering themselves that the voters will rally round the old machine like sheep on election day. There is no reason why they should do so and there is every reason why they should not. "You can fool all of the people part of the time and part of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time," said Gen. Clapp when Merriam was nominated.

Just now the Merriam crowd is trying to create the impression that the alliance has sold out to the democrats," and they are making the air blue with their howls. There is no truth in the statement and it is only made in hopes to scare somebody into voting for Merriam. Neither Merriam nor Wilson will do anything for farmers if elected, and the farmers well know this fact. They will vote for a man who will help them—S. M. Owen.

Farmers, you have got a good legislative ticket, every man on it a good, honest, practical business farmer, and now it is your duty to elect it. The only thing the opposition has to say against them is that they have no money to run a campaign. Oh, no! they have been trying to raise wheat for rich men to gobble all the profits on too long, but they are a level headed lot just the same.

Farmers should give as much time as possible to the alliance work up to and on election day. You now have a chance to make your power felt as never before and you will miss it if you neglect this golden opportunity. Assert your rights and then you will get them.

Hasn't a democratic alliance man as much interest in a free and open wheat market as any other man? And how will they get that if railroad attorney Wilson is elected?

And now the Merriam crowd are turning their mud batteries upon John Locken. Failing to buy, bulldoze or flatter him into accepting an office under the Merriam flag, they have now suddenly found out how "wicked and dishonest" he is, and are trying to prejudice farmers against him. Well, he is doing good work in the alliance cause, and that is what makes him so wicked. Farmers, stand by your own workers and your own cause regardless of what your enemies say.

Those Minneapolis wheat gamblers are getting terribly uneasy for fear the farmers will take the bits in their teeth for once and run away and smash their beautiful wheat system. So they are sending out their oily speakers to urge people to vote for Merriam. And why do they incur all this expense? Because the present system of handling wheat is a gold mine to them and, very naturally, they do not want to give it up. They know that if Merriam is elected the system will still continue, so it is worth while to put money into his election.

And now they say that S. M. Owen is no good for Governor, "because he is a poor man!" Not rich enough to furnish the money necessary to run the campaign. But they know that if he is elected governor he will endeavor to save to the farmer that stealage now going on in the wheat markets, and that is enough to enable the farmers to run their own campaigns. It would be a grand good thing for Minnesota to elect a poor man once, a man in sympathy with poor people. That man is S. M. Owen and he will be the next Governor of Minnesota.

The Moorhead News, while admitting the outrageous steals in the market system under the Merriam government, still has the sublime cheek to ask the suffering farmers to vote to perpetuate the steals. The farmers once stood by Mr. Merriam nobly and elected him against all the influence of the big cities to the contrary, and how did Mr. Merriam reward the farmers? Did he not, as soon as he came into power make the important appointments on and under the Board of railroad and warehouse commissioners, solely with a view to build himself up politically and with no reference to the benefit of the farmers whatever? Was not this important service placed in the hands of the railway magnates and the elevator sharks? How could any sensible man expect relief from such methods? The farmers have tried Bill Merriam in the balance and found him wanting, and now they are determined to try somebody else. They hope and trust it will be Governor Owen, and we believe it will. But it will be a change and don't you forget it.

Col. Plummer, the silver tongued orator of Dakota, was down at Mankato on Thursday evening, Oct. 2d, to speak for the Merriam party. The Col. roundly abused the alliance workers—called them a pack of demagogues and said that farmers ought to vote for Bill Merriam for that reason, but he did not say what good that would do farmers. He failed to show what Merriam has done to correct the evils that exist in the wheat market for the very good reason that he could not. He failed to show wherein Merriam represents true republican principles even, but the sum and substance of it all was that republicans should vote for Merriam because he has been sharp enough to capture the nomination. He did not say who paid for the free fares for the delegates to the Merriam convention nor who footed the hotel bills and incidentals, nor who paid for the liquor that ran like water on the evening of the nomination at the Merchant's hotel, all of which the people have a right to know about, and would no doubt have proved interesting information. The people know that if Owen is elected there will be an effort made to correct the evils of our market and this is what they are after regardless of the political ambition of any man or any set of men.

Last year Polk County raised over 3,000,000 bushels of wheat. The farmers were swindled out of from 5 to 20 cents per bushel, which means an aggregate loss of an immense sum to the county. On all wheat bought as rejected that graded No. 3 in Duluth or Minneapolis, there was a clean steal of 19 cents over all expenses, as that was the difference between No. 3 and rejected in this market. Figure up all that wheat taken from you at two or three grades less than it was worth and then you will begin to have some idea of the extent of the swindle. Do you want that state of things to continue? Well, you have got a repetition of the same deal in the markets to-day, and you will continue to have until you elect your own governor and legislature. Farmers, on November 4th next is your opportunity. Remember your wrongs and vote for Owen and your own legislative ticket.

A Cold Blooded Steal!

The Moorhead News, a paper that advocates the election of W. R. Merriam and the perpetuation of the same steal that it complains of, says:

"There is no doubt, as it is admitted on all hands, that the elevators are determined to buy as much wheat as possible at grades at least one point below its actual worth. The elevator agents undoubtedly have strict orders to give no higher grades than No. 2 Northern for any wheat that is offered, if by any means it can be had at that grade. The result is that the great bulk of wheat now going into the elevators is bought for No. 2 Northern, while it is actually good enough to grade No. 1 Northern, and much of it would grade No. 1 Hard if cleaned, or upon a liberal dockage allowance. This is a loss of 5 cents per bushel to the farmer, or $5 in every 100 bushels, and $50 in every 1,000. It is not the fault of the local buyers in the elevators, but of the owners in Minneapolis or wherever their headquarters may be. There appears to be no help for it, and the grower is again at the mercy of the capitalist. Shipment to Duluth or Minneapolis does no good, as the state inspectors appear to be under the influence and control of the same power. It is a deliberate and cold-blooded steal."

The Hawley correspondent of the News adds the following:

"Never in the history of the wheat market in this part of the country has there been such injustice in the grading of wheat. Wheat, which in other seasons would grade No. 1 Hard, is now rated at No. 2 and 3 Northern and the company is now continually harping at our agents for giving too high grades. The fault seems to be in the inspection at Duluth and Minneapolis, although it may be a trumped up case with the big Eastern wheat moguls which own and operate our elevators. Our agents, Mr. Glasgow and Bennett have been doing the best that they can, but the company is now complaining that they are giving too high a grade. I think the fault comes from our state inspectors of wheat, who are in with these wheat sharks, no doubt. Tell Gov. Merriam to fire the gang."

Yes, "tell Merriam to fire the gang" indeed. Did not the farmers in the start beg and entreat of Governor Merriam to appoint a Board in their interests? And did he not appoint a Board in the interest of railroads and elevators? A Board that did not have sand enough to insist on its rights to appoint the employes under it in the interest of the people? A good deal of good it will do to "tell Merriam" something that he knows better than the farmers. He would be liable to "fire" all that political strength, wouldn't he now?

Of Course Not.

Of course this hiring of delegates to attend the county conventions, paying them day wages, board and traveling expenses, don't mean anything! Of course sending delegates to the State conventions on free railroad passes, boarding them at high-priced hotels and paying their little incidental expenses don't mean anything! Of course such things are all done in the interest of a good government for the people, aren't they? Of course those who pay all these expenses are afraid to trust such matters as nominating candidates in the hands of common, ordinary farmers, for fear that they might not nominate those who would try to obtain a free and open wheat market, aren't they? Or is it all done to carry out some selfish schemes that are against the interests of the people as a whole? Well it is a fact that Owen delegates got none of these soft snaps but paid their own expenses like men.

The Merriam State Central Committee has received another scare and issued another address to the people, begging them to stand by candidate Merriam, but they fail to show how he will stand by the farmers. The people have once asked of Merriam a free and open wheat market and did not get it, and now with sublime cheek his backers beg them to stand by Merriam. Go to, rave and howl, but the people are in dead earnest in their efforts to obtain a competitive market, and they know that the Merriam government will not give them this. They know that the only chance they have to get it is through the election of Owen, and they are bound to try that method.

Those party fiends are sneering at the farmer who contributes his little dollar toward the campaign of freedom from monopolies and tell him that "his tariff on tin won't amount to as much in three years!" Yes, but if he don't change the present deal at once the TAX upon his poor old cow will put him in a position in which he will NEED no tin in less than three years.

The Mankato Free Press, a red hot Merriam organ, speaks of "A PERFECT LANDSLIDE in favor of Owen, the alliance candidate for Governor," in the Second District. That's the way it looks up here, and if the situation is anything near like that elsewhere what is to hinder Owen's election? The people are tired of promises unfulfilled and want a change. They want Owen for governor and he will be elected.

The Journal believes in being consistent, and urges the farmers to vote only for the best men—men who will do your business correctly. It is not necessary to bite off your own nose to spite your face, by electing men to office who are utterly incompetent to attend to the business of the office to which they aspire. In county matters you should bear this in mind and elect only such men as are able to do your business right. In this way only you accomplish the full relief you seek.

The Mankato Free Press belittles the cause of the farmers because Bill Erwin says a good word for it. And that seems to be the way they are doing in other quarters. They single out Bill Erwin, Gen. Baker or Donnelly, call them rogues or rascals or demagogues, and then they argue because such men are trying to help the farmers obtain their rights in the markets that the farmers should not vote for a free and open wheat market. It makes no difference to the farmers what kind of people support their cause, what they are after is justice in the markets and they will not be misled by abuse of those who are trying to help them get it, whether he be black or white, rogues or honest men. Now the Free Press and such papers don't care a continental whether Bill Erwin is a rogue or an honest man. All it wants is to try and defeat the farmers cause by throwing mud upon its supporters. Look out for these things, farmers, and vote for your own benefit once in your lives.

The Beauties of the System.

In conversation with a Crookston business man one evening this week, he said: "I know the system of marketing wheat is an outrage on a free people, but I am not quite clear as to the best way to manage it. One day last fall I happened, on one of my business trips, to call on a personal friend of mine who was an elevator man, and shortly a poor Norwegian man drove up with a load of wheat. My friend examined the wheat and offered No. 3 Northern, three pounds off for dirt. The man said 'I will go to the other house and if I cannot do better I will let you have it.' I followed the man to the other elevator where he was offered No. 3 Northern, four pounds off. The man took his wheat back to the first elevator and sold it. After it had been dumped in the hopper, settled for and the man had gone, I said to my friend: 'How much did you make on that load?' 'What do you mean?' said he. 'I mean what I said, what did you make on that load more than a legitimate profit?' 'Oh, indeed,' said he, 'I didn't make anything on that wheat.' 'I'll bet you a four dollar hat,' said I, 'that you made over six dollars; that wheat will test 1 Hard all right enough!' 'I'll take you,' said he, so we took a half bushel, cleaned it perfectly and took out one-half pound of dirt, then upon weighing it it weighed 59½ pounds to the bushel. 'Gosh,' said the elevator man, 'the hat is yours, I am over $8 ahead of the farmer on that deal!' [Only a LITTLE discrepancy, but that much bread stolen out of the mouths of the poor farmer and his family.—Ed.] Again, I know of one man who last fall stored his wheat in a certain elevator, receiving No. 3 tickets therefor. This spring he demanded his wheat, but this elevator man was quite fresh, and said: 'Indeed, I cannot let you have it, as I shipped it out last fall, and shipped it out last fall, so of course I can't get it for you.' It is needless to say that that wheat was settled for on a basis of No. 1 Northern and no questions asked." And all this and hundreds of other cases occur under Merriam's inspectors, yet the elevator men have the check to ask these poor, wronged, deluded farmers to vote for Merriam. To vote to continue this same system! And they ask you to vote for Wilson who will do nothing to change the deal! The farmers ARE NOT all fools and THEY KNOW that with Owen for Governor this magnificent system will be changed, or at least a mighty effort will be made. Farmers, when you vote

I PUT IT IN A NO. 1 NORTHERN BIN

The Value of Experience.

Duluth Tribune.

The proper policy for the Fifth Minnesota congressional district is to re-elect Mr. Comstock. He has done splendid service to the district for a new man and could do much more in another term. Generally speaking, it takes a congressman one term to learn the rudiments of his business. It is a mere apprenticeship. The man who can accomplish anything during his first term is entitled to credit for his energy and ability. It takes a man two years to get acquainted in Washington, and even that time is not sufficient unless the member is an active and insinuating fellow. Old Mr. Plodder, who has been in congress ten years, can accomplish more than Daniel Webster in his first term. If constituencies would be less fickle and keep the same man as their representative for consecutive terms, the public service would fare better.

This line of argument is clear and unanswerable and the people of the Fifth district can make an application of it to their own case. Send Mr. Comstock back to congress, and, with his experience added to his other qualities, he will make an invaluable public servant.

Let us suppose, for the sake of argument, that Mr. Whiteman is elected this fall. Conceding that he is a bright energetic young man, what could he, in his first term, an enemy of the national administration and a member, in all probability of the minority of the house, accomplish for the district in general and Duluth in particular? And, supposing that Mr. Whiteman should be elected this fall, is it not clear to any well-informed man that such election would be a mere accident? It should be remembered that this is a republican district. No matter how the state may be redistricted under the new apportionment Duluth will be the head of a district which is republican. This region is republican and radically republican. It might be said to be republican by climate, for democracy can not thrive in the pure, bracing air of Lake Superior. It flourishes in the miasmatic air of the South. Mr. Whiteman, then, could not hope for a second term even if he should get a first one. The lightning does not strike twice in the same place, and it will be many a year before any Duluth democrat will succeed himself in congress. Let us, then, keep Comstock, and not throw away the years of experience which he has gained and, when the state is redistricted, let us send a good Duluth republican to congress.

Owen Will be Elected.

Jackson Republic: If the same feeling exists all over the state that does in Jackson county S. M. Owen will be elected by 20,000 majority. It is almost impossible to find men in any township in this county who will support Merriam, while they are all enthusiastic for S. M. Owen.

Attorney W. W. Erwin returned from his stumping tour in the southwestern portion of the state yesterday, and lost no time in demonstrating to all listeners that the Alliance ticket is a sure winner at the polls in November. His enthusiasm was unbounded and his zeal apparently quite as limitless. On being asked to state the reasons for the hopeful view which he took of the situation, he said:

"The fires are burning brightly in the Southwest. The most intense enthusiasm prevails, and party lines are completely obliterated. To be more specific, I will take up a few of the counties I have been through and give you our estimate of them. Lincoln county two years ago gave Merriam a plurality of 161 over E. M. Wilson. This year it is estimated that that county will give Owen 700 plurality. Lyons county give the present governor 613 more votes than it gave Wilson, and it is now estimated that this county will give Mr. Owen 1,000 plurality. There are six townships in the county where there is not a single party man left. Merriam beat Wilson 326 votes in Pipestone county. This fall Owen will have 600 majority in that county over all opponents. In Nobles Wilson was 149 votes behind Merrian. This year Owen will undoubtedly have a majority over all other candidates. The vote of Martin county in 1888 was 1,812, and Merriam's plurality over Wilson was 517. With the exception of a few heelers around Fairmount, the county is in revolt and it is expected to wipe out the repuclican majority and give a plurality for Owen. In Faribault county Merriam had a plurality of 1,042. This year the entire sounty, with the exception of a few men in Winnebago City and a choice clique at Blue Earth City, is in revolt and Owen will lead the polls. Watonwan, which gave Merriam 577 plurality two years ago, will go for Owen. In Brown county Wilson had 362 plurality two years ago. This year Owen will carry it. To sum up, these counties will wipe out a republican majority of 3,250, a democratic majority of 326, and advance Owen to a plurality of about 3.000. Judging from the tone of the feeling in Soutwestern Minnesota I put Owen's plurality about 30,000 in the state,"

The Blundering Organs.

Minneapolis Times.

The purblind partisan republican organs are committing the blunder of attempting to belittle and ridicule the Alliance movement and the Alliance candidates. Their shafts of sarcasm are particularly aimed at Mr. Owen the Alliance candidate for governor. Mr. Merriam may well pray to be saved from his fool friends. No greater mistake could be made by his organs at this time and in the present condition of the public mind. Mr. Owen is mainly the representative of a discontented republican element, a great body of voters who have deserted the republican ranks for what they believe to be good and sufficient cause. Extravagant eulogies of the republican candidate and his administration are worse than idle. It is the total disbelief in the integrity of that administration, and a firm conviction of the absolute hopelessness of any relief from existing evils through the republican organization as at present controlled, that have furnished the provocation and the justification for the independent farmer's movement. The spirit and purpose of that movement are too genuine and profound and resolute to be disturbed by sneers and gibes and abuse. It is working toward definite ends through the only methods and instrumentalities by which those ends are to be attained.

The industrial classes have long entrusted their interests to the keeping of the old parties. It is useless for the organs to insist that the republican party has been faithful to the trust, and that the present administration has been favorable to the agricultural and labor interest. If the farmers and workingmen did not thoroughly discredit those pretensions there would be no Alliance party today. To attempt to persuade those men that they have no cause for complaints—and still less for revolt; and to ridicule their methods and purposes as impracticable and visionary or idiotic and absurd is to insult their intelligence, and intensify their hostility to the old party. There is good reason to believe that Gov. Merriam has the sagacity to recognize the blunder of his superviceable organs in their contemptuous and insulting attacks upon the Alliance and it candidates.

A Close Race

Minneapolis Herald: The gubernatorial race will be a close one. Mr. Owen is developing unexpected strength among independent voters. To what extent the defection of these voters from the two old parties will affect either, is problematical, but the indications are that Mr. Merrim will be the loser.

Grand Forks Herald: The newspaper that does its duty in protecting public interest, says the Oregon Scout, is sure to make enemies. But what of that? Enemies rather help a newspaper than otherwise, especially when their hostility is generally known to arise from an independent and public spirited course on the part of the journal that incurs their displeasure. The paper that stands by the public is on solid ground, and the people will heartily support it in the advocacy of their rights. In every small town or city there are people who think themselves entitled to control everything, and that opposition to any of their proceedings is an offense equal to personal grievance or affront. They want to boss the community, newspapers included. They lack apprehension or understanding of the true function of a newspaper in relation to public interest, and if they could have their way the local press would be simply the organ of their own private interests and aims.

Very Funny.

Fairmont News: Is it funny though? Only a short time ago the Merriam ring organs were howling themselves hoarse that the Alliance and Labor party had no strength and now they are shouting themselves black in the face that W. W. Erwin is after C. K. Davis' seat in the United States Senate, and warning voters not to believe him on that account. Just how anybody can be in danger if the movement has no strength passes our comprehension, and for Merriam to use Davis' name to conjure with is little short of the ridiculous, especially as everybody knows Merriam is after that seat, but all good government demands that C. K. Davis succeed himself for lo! these many years.

Ignatius Donnelly will take the stump for the alliance ticket. We told you he would. Now let monopoly howl.

The election of Owen means an attempt to correct the evils that exist in our market. The election of Merriam means that the market system is all right as it exists.

You have been talking all summer about voting the independent ticket, and now what are you going to do? Are you going to vote for Owen and your legislative ticket or are you going to snuggle up to your old party ticket like a sick kitten to a hot brick? Politicians all say that you are going to snuggle up! We guess not. You have too much independence.

Reports from all over the county show that the alliance ticket will get an immense vote. Every farmer is interested in a free and open wheat market, and this fall, by voting for S. M. Owen and the farmer legislature, he will be enabled to vote for it. Every farmer in Polk County should vote for his own interests once, and his interests clearly lie in the election of S. M. Owen.

Merriam party leaders are flattering themselves that the voters will rally round the old machine like sheep on election day. There is no reason why they should do so and there is every reason why they should not. "You can fool all of the people part of the time and part of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time," said Gen. Clapp when Merriam was nominated.

Just now the Merriam crowd is trying to create the impression that the alliance has sold out to the democrats, and they are making the air blue with their howls. There is no truth in the statement and it is only made in hopes to scare somebody into voting for Merriam. Neither Merriam nor Wilson will do anything for farmers if elected, and the farmers well know this fact. They will vote for a man who will help them—S. M. Owen.

Farmers, you have got a good legislative ticket, every man on it a good, honest, practical business farmer, and now it is your duty to elect it. The only thing the opposition has to say against them is that they have no money to run a campaign. Oh, no! they have been trying to raise wheat for rich men to gobble all the profits on too long, but they are a level headed lot just the same.

Farmers should give as much time as possible to the alliance work up to and on election day. You now have a chance to make your power felt as never before and you will miss it if you neglect this golden opportunity. Assert your rights and then you will get them.

Hasn't a democratic alliance man as much interest in a free and open wheat market as any other man? And how will they get that if railroad attorney Wilson is elected?

And now the Merriam crowd are turning their mud batteries upon John Locken. Failing to buy, bulldoze or flatter him into accepting an office under the Merriam flag, they have now suddenly found out how "wicked and dishonest" he is, and are trying to prejudice farmers against him. Well, he is doing good work in the alliance cause, and that is what makes him so wicked. Farmers, stand by your own workers and your own cause regardless of what your enemies say.

Those Minneapolis wheat gamblers are getting terribly uneasy for fear the farmers will take the bits in their teeth for once and run away and smash their beautiful wheat system. So they are sending out their oily speakers to urge people to vote for Merriam. And why do they incur all this expense? Because the present system of handling wheat is a gold mine to them and, very naturally, they do not want to give it up. They know that if Merriam is elected the system will still continue, so it is worth while to put money into his election.

And now they say that S. M. Owen is no good for Governor, "because he is a poor man!" Not rich enough to furnish the money necessary to run the campaign. But they know that if he is elected governor he will endeavor to save to the farmer that stealage now going on in the wheat markets, and that is enough to enable the farmers to run their own campaigns. It would be a grand good thing for Minnesota to elect a poor man once, a man in sympathy with poor people. That man is S. M. Owen and he will be the next Governor of Minnesota.

The Moorhead News, while admitting the outrageous steals in the market system under the Merriam government, still has the sublime check to ask the suffering farmers to vote to perpetuate the steals. The farmers once stood by Mr. Merriam nobly and elected him against all the influence of the big cities to the contrary, and how did Mr. Merriam reward the farmers? Did he not, as soon as he came into power make the important appointments on and under the Board of railroad and warehouse commissioners, solely with a view to build himself up politically, and with no reference to the benefit of the farmers whatever? Was not this important service placed in the hands of the railway magnates and the elevator sharks? How could any sensible man expect relief from such methods? The farmers have tried Bill Merriam in the balance and found him wanting, and now they are determined to try somebody else. They hope and trust it will be Governor Owen, and we believe it will. But it will be a change and don't you forget it.

Col. Plummer, the silver tongued orator of Dakota, was down at Mankato on Thursday evening, Oct. 2d, to speak for the Merriam party. The Col. roundly abused the alliance workers—called them a pack of demagogues and said that farmers ought to vote for Bill Merriam for that reason, but he did not say what GOOD that would do farmers. He failed to show what Merriam has done to correct the evils that exist in the wheat market for the very good reason that he could not. He failed to show wherein Merriam represents true republican principles even, but the sum and substance of it all was that republicans should vote for Merriam because he has been sharp enough to capture the nomination. He did not say who paid for the free fares for the delegates to the Merriam convention nor who footed the hotel bills and incidentals, nor who paid for the liquor that ran like water on the evening of the nomination at the Merchant's hotel, all of which the people have a right to know about, and would no doubt have proved interesting information. The people know that if Owen is elected there will be an effort made to correct the evils of our market and this is what they are after, regardless of the political ambition of any man or any set of men.

Last year Polk County raised over 8,000,000 bushels of wheat. The farmers were swindled out of from 5 to 20 cents per bushel, which means an aggregate loss of an immense sum to the county. On all wheat bought as rejected, that graded No. 3 in Duluth or Minneapolis, there was a clean steal of 19 cents over all expence, as that was the difference between No. 3 and rejected in this market. Figure up all that wheat taken from you at two or three grades less than it was worth and then you will begin to have some idea of the extent of the swindle. Do you want that state of things to continue? Well, you have got a repetition of the same deal in the markets to-day, and you will continue to have until you elect your own governor and legislature. Farmers, on November 4th next is your opportunity. Remember your wrongs and vote for Owen and your own legislative ticket.

A Cold Blooded Steal !

The Moorhead News, a paper that advocates the election of W. R. Merriam and the perpetuation of the same steal that it complains of, says:

"There is no doubt, as it is admitted on all hands, that the elevators are determined to buy as much wheat as possible at grades at least one point below its actual worth. The elevator agents undoubtedly have strict orders to give no higher grades than No. 2 Northern for any wheat that is offered, if by any means it can be had at that grade. The result is that the great bulk of wheat now going into the elevators is bought for No. 2 Northern, while it is actually good enough to grade No. 1 Northern, and much of it would grade No. 1 Hard if cleaned, or upon a liberal dockage allowance. This is a loss of 5 cents per bushel to the farmer, or $5 in every 100 bushels, and $50 in every 1,000. It is not the fault of the local buyers in the elevators, but of the owners in Minneapolis or wherever their headquarters may be. There appears to be no help for it, and the grower is again at the mercy of the capitalist. Shipment to Duluth or Minneapolis does no good, as the state inspectors appear to be under the influence and control of the same power. It is a deliberate and cold-blooded steal."

The Hawley correspondent of the News adds the following:

"Never in the history of the wheat market in this part of the country has there been such injustice in the grading of wheat. Wheat, which in other seasons would grade No. 1 Hard, is now rated at No. 2 and 3 Northern and the company is now continually harping at our agents for giving too high grades. The fault seems to be in the inspection at Duluth and Minneapolis, although it may be a trumped up case with the big Eastern wheat moguls which own and operate our elevators. Our agents, Mr. Glasgow and Bennett have been doing the best that they can, but the company is now complaining that they are giving too high a grade. I think the fault comes from our state inspectors of wheat, who are in with these wheat sharks, no doubt. Tell Gov. Merriam to fire the gang."

Yes, "tell Merriam to fire the gang" indeed. Did not the farmers in the start beg and entreat of Governor Merriam to appoint a Board in their interests? And did he not appoint a Board in the interest of railroads and elevators? A Board that did not have sand enough to insist on its rights to appoint the employes under it in the interest of the people? A good deal of good it will do to "tell Merriam" something that he knows better than the farmers. He would be liable to "fire" all that political strength, wouldn't he now?

Of Course Not.

Of course this hiring of delegates to attend the county conventions, paying them day wages, board and traveling expenses, don't mean anything! Of course sending delegates to the State conventions on free railroad passes, boarding them at high-priced hotels, and paying their little incidental expenses don't mean anything! Of course such things are all done in the interest of a good government for the people, aren't they? Of course those who pay all these expenses are afraid to trust such matters as nominating candidates in the hands of common, ordinary farmers, for fear, that they might not nominate those who would try to obtain a free and open wheat market, aren't they? Or is it all done to carry out some selfish schemes that are against the interests of the people as a whole? Well it is a fact that Owen delegates got none of these soft snaps but paid their own expenses like men.

The Merriam State Central Committee has received another scare and issued another address to the people, begging them to stand by candidate Merriam, but they fail to show how he will stand by the farmers. The people have once asked of Merriam a free and open wheat market and did not get it, and now, with sublime cheek his backers beg them to stand by Merriam. Go to, rave and howl, but the people are in dead earnest in their efforts to obtain a competitive market, and they know that the Merriam government will not give them this. They know that the only chance they have to get it is through the election of Owen, and they are bound to try that method.

Those party fiends are sneering at the farmer who contributes his little dollar toward the campaign of freedom from monopolies and tell him that "his tariff on tin won't amount to as much in three years!" Yes, but if he don't change the present deal at once the TAX upon his poor old cow will put him in a position in which he will NEED no tin in less than three years.

The Mankato Free Press, a red hot Merriam organ, speaks of

in favor of Owen, the alliance candidate for Governor, in the Second District. That's the way it looks up here and, if the situation is anything near like that elsewhere, what is to hinder Owen's election? The people are tired of promises unfulfilled and want a change. They want Owen for governor and he will be elected.

THE JOURNAL believes in being consistent, and urges the farmers to vote only for the best men—men who will do your business correctly. It is not necessary to bite off your own nose to spite your face, by electing men to office who are utterly incompetent to attend to the business of the office to which they aspire. In county matters you should bear this in mind and elect only such men as are able to do your business right. In this way only you accomplish the full relief you seek.

The Mankato Free Press belittles the cause of the farmers because Bill Erwin says a good word for it. And that seems to be the way they are doing in other quarters. They single out Bill Erwin, Gen. Baker or Donnelly, call them rogues or rascals or demagogues, and then they argue because such men are trying to help the farmers obtain their rights in the markets that the farmers should not vote for a free and open wheat market. It makes no difference to the farmers what kind of people support their cause, what they are after is justice in the markets and they will not be misled by abuse of those who are trying to help them get it, whether he be black or white, rogues or honest men. Now the Free Press and such papers don't care a continental whether Bill Erwin is a rogue or an honest man. All it wants is to try and defeat the farmers cause by throwing mud upon its supporters. Look out for these things, farmers, and vote for your own benefit once in your lives.

The Beauties of the System.

In conversation with a Crookston business man one evening this week, he said: "I know the system of marketing wheat is an outrage on a free people, but I am not quite clear as to the best way to manage it. One day last fall I happened, on one of my business trips, to call on a personal friend of mine who was an elevator man, and shortly a poor Norwegian man drove up with a load of wheat. My friend examined the wheat and offered No. 3 Northern, three pounds off for dirt. The man said 'I will go to the other house and if I cannot do better I will let you have it.' I followed the man to the other elevator where he was offered No. 3 Northern, four pounds off. The man took his wheat back to the first elevator and sold it. After it had been dumped in the hopper, settled for and the man had gone, I said to my friend: 'How much did you make on that load?' 'What do you mean?' said he. 'I mean what I said, what did you make on that load more than a legitimate profit?' 'Oh, indeed,' said he, 'I didn't make anything on that wheat.' 'I'll bet you a four dollar hat,' said I, 'that you made over six dollars; that wheat will test 1 Hard all right enough!' 'I'll take you,' said he, so we took a half bushel, cleaned it perfectly and took out one-half pound of dirt, then upon weighing it it weighed 59½ pounds to the bushel. 'Gosh,' said the elevator man, 'the hat is yours, I am over $8 ahead of the farmer on that deal!' [Only a LITTLE discrepancy, but that much bread stolen out of the mouths of the poor farmer and his family.—Ed.] Again, I know of one man who last fall stored his wheat in a certain elevator, receiving No. 3 tickets therefor. This spring he demanded his wheat, but this elevator man was quite fresh, and said: 'Indeed, I cannot let you have it, as I shipped it out last fall, and shipped it out last fall, so of course I can't get it for you.' It is needless to say that that wheat was settled for on a basis of No. 1 Northern and no questions asked." And all this and hundreds of other cases occur under Merriam's inspectors, yet the elevator men have the check to ask these poor, wronged, deluded farmers to vote for Merriam. To vote to continue this same system! And they ask you to vote for Wilson who will do nothing to change the deal! The farmers ARE NOT all fools and THEY KNOW that with Owen for Governor this magnificent system will be changed, or at least a mighty effort will be made. Farmers, when you vote

I PUT IT IN A NO. 1 NORTHERN BIN

The Value of Experience.

Duluth Tribune.

The proper policy for the Fifth Minnesota congressional district is to re-elect Mr. Comstock. He has done splended service to the district for a new man and could do much more in another term. Generally speaking, it takes a congressman one term to learn the rudiments of his business. It's a mere apprenticeship. The man who can accomplish anything during his first term is entitled to credit for his energy and ability. It takes a man two years to get acquainted in Washington, and even that time is not sufficient unless the member is an active and insinuating fellow. Old Mr. Plodder, who has been in congress ten years, can accomplish more than Daniel Webster in his first term. If constituencies would be less fickle and keep the same man as their representative for consecutive terms, the public service would faire better.

This line of argument is clear and unanswerable and the people of the Fifth district can make an application of it to their own case. Send Mr. Comstock back to congress, and, with his experience added to his other qualities, he will make an invaluable public servant.

Let us suppose, for the sake of argument, that Mr. Whiteman is elected this fall. Conceding that he is a bright energetic young man, what could he, in his first term, an enemy of the national administration and a member, in all probability of the minority of the house, accomplish for the district in general and Duluth in particular? And, supposing that Mr. Whiteman should be elected this fall, is it not clear to any well-informed man that such election would be a mere accident? It should be remembered that this is a republican district. No matter how the state may be redistricted under the new apportionment Duluth will be the head of a district which is republican. This region is republican and radically republican. It might be said to be republican by climate, for democracy can not thrive in the pure, bracing air of Lake Superior. It flourishes in the miasmatic air of the South. Mr. Whiteman, then, could not hope for a second term even if he should get a first one. The lightning does not strike twice in the same place, and it will be many a year before any Duluth democrat will succeed himself in congress. Let us, then, keep Comstock, and not throw away the years of experience which he has gained, and, when the state is redistricted let us send a good Duluth republican to congress.

Owen Will be Elected.

Jackson Republic: If the same feeling exists all over the state that does in Jackson county, S. M. Owen will be elected by 20,000 majority. It is almost impossible to find a man in any township in this county who will support Merriam, while they are all enthusiastic for S. M. Owen.

Attorney W. W. Erwin returned from his stumping tour in the southwestern portion of the state yesterday, and lost no time in demonstrating to all listeners that the Alliance ticket is a sure winner at the polls in November. Watonwan, which gave Merriam 577 plurality two years ago, will go for Owen. In Brown county Wilson had 362 plurality two years ago. This year Owen will carry it. To sum up, these counties will wipe out a republican majority of 8,250, a democratic majority of 826, and advance Owen to a plurality of about 3,000. Judging from the tone of the feeling in Soutwestern Minnesota I put Owen's plurality about 30,000 in the state."

The Blundering Organs.

Enemies rather help a newspaper than otherwise, especially when their hostility is generally known to arise from an independent and public spirited course on the part of the journal that incurs their displeasure. The paper that stands by the public is on solid ground, and the people will heartily support it in the advocacy of their rights. In every small town or city there are people who think themselves entitled to control everything, and that opposition to any of their proceedings is an offense equal to personal grievance or affront. They want to boss the community, newspapers included. They lack apprehension or understanding of the true function of a newspaper in relation to public interest, and if they could have their way the local press would be simply the organ of their own private interests and aims.

Very Funny.

Fairmont News: Is it funny though? Only a short time ago the Merriam ring organs were howling themselves hoarse that the Alliance and Labor party had no strength and now they are shouting themselves black in the face that W. W. Erwin is after C. K. Davis' seat in the United States Senate, and warning voters not to believe him on that account. Just how anybody can be in danger if the movement has no strength passes our comprehension, and for Merriam to use Davis' name to conjure with is little short of the ridiculous, especially as everybody knows Merriam is after that seat, but all good government demands that C. K. Davis succeed himself for lo! these many years.

A Delusion and a Snare.

St. Paul Daily News.

As soon as Congress adjourns Senator Davis will make several speeches in this State in suport of the State ticket. This should dispel the idea that a vote for Merriam means the defeat of Senator Davis for re-election.—Slayton Gazette.

The above editorial item, clipped from the paper to which it is credited, is going the rounds of the Merriam papers of the State almost verbatim. Being inserted simultaneously in various papers as an editoral paragraph, it shows that it emanates Mr. Lowenstein's bureau, which is in charge of Joel, Tams & Co.

As a matter of course, Senator Davis will take the stump this fall. He could not do otherwise and maintain his party standing. However unpalatable it may be to him to see Governor Merriam re-elected, he must, as politics go, swallow the dose and pretend that he desires to see such a result.

Knowing this fact, the Merriam organs seize upon it to make it appear that there is no antagonism between the Governor and Senator.

There is no one so dull, if he stops to think a moment, will not understand that Senator Davis has no alternative but the one suggested in this paragraph.

The News, not being an organ, does not profess to be a champion of or take special interest in Senator Davis' case. It recognizes the fact, however, that a good many people in Minnesota feel especially friendly to the Senator, and it records the current political situation for their benefit.

One thing is very certain.

If Governor Merriam is defeated this fall, he will not be in Senator Davis way in 1892.

If he is elected this fall he may be in his way.

We put the proposition in this mild form to meet the arguments of the Merriam men, who wish to make it appear that his re-election does not endanger Senator Davis' political future.

From our own standpoint we regard him sure to be in Davis' road if reelected this fall, but taking the mild form of the proposition, every friend of Senator Davis can see that it is the part of safety and political wisdom to make a sure thing while they have the opportunity, and put the man out of the race who will be Senator Davis' most formidable competitor if successful this fall.

He will be such competitor not because he has the ability or that he ought to be Senator, but because he has the money to enter the Senatorial auction room and buy the place.

While Senator Davis, owing to force of circumstances, must take the stump for Merriam, his friends can knife the Governor at the polls.

If they are smart they will do so.

Never lose a point in a political game when it can be avoided.

This is a political game.

An exchange says that any measure calculated to benefit any one class is class legislation, and that as the subtreasury plan is to designed to help the farmers, therefore it is class legislation. Nothing could more completely misrepresent the purposes of the sub-treasury plan. It is not designed to help the farmer by giving him any class privilege, but to help him by stopping a class discrimination against him. There is now a discrimination against him by low prices in the fall when he is a seller, and high prices in the spring when he is a buyer in making his investment in crop. This results from the present fluctuation in the volume of money as compared to the demand in different seasons. Warehousing is not essential to the sub-treasury plan; it is only one method.

The current price of wheat and cotton are at all times based upon the price of products in Liverpool and London. All modern economists agree that the amount exported regulates the price of the whole product. They tersely put it that what runs over the bucket regulates the price of all that is within it.

The List of Bills He Has Put Through the Congressional Machine.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 30.—[Pioneer Press Washington Special.]—Representative Comstock has had a very successful session for a new member of congress. The following are the bills he passed during the session: Bill increasing the cost of the Duluth public building; granting right of way to Little Falls, Mille Lacs and Lake Superior railroad; granting to Crookston, Fort Stevenson and Manitoba railroad right to bridge Red River; bill for survey of Red River, Red Lake River and Big Stone Lake with the view of improving navigation; bill granting right of way to Red Lake and Western railway; bill granting right of way to Duluth & Winnipeg railway; bill for survey of Chippewa reservation, Red Lake, White Earth, etc.; bill for relief of Chippewa Indians; four private pension bills passed; four private relief bills recommended and now on the calandar for passage; bill to provide for uniform grain grades, substituting one recommended by committee; bill granting right of way to Red Lake and Western Railway and Navigation Company across Red Lake reservation; in above bills and river and harbor bills carrying the following appropriations for Fifth district: Duluth post office and custom house, $120,000; Duluth harbor, $100,000; Two Harbors, $30,000; Marine harbor, $25,000; reservoir system of the upper Mississippi, $80,000; Red River of the North, $25,000; survey of Indian reservation and for allotments to Indians, etc., $200,000; settlement of Chippewa indian claims for damages agreed on, $150,000. Total, $730,000.

A Bad Give Away.

A Startling Declaration.—A prominent Republican politician of Minneapolis recently made the following declaration to an Alliance man: "You are now going into the country with your arguments; you are going to appeal to the REASONS of the people. About ten days before alection we will go into the country in force and appeal to the PREJUDICE of the people, and, by—, we will beat you!" This expresses the precise estimation the average voter is held in by the average machine politician. Arguments he cares nothing for; reason he despises; partisan prejudice is firmly implanted in the average voter's breast, and upon that is placed all dependence for future party supremacy. Is the foregoing declaration an insult to the intelligence of the American voter, or is it justifiable by the facts? There is now an excellent opportunity for the voter to give his answer to that question. Notice is fairly given of the means to be employed to keep the voters of at least one of the old parties loyal to the party creed; how will the voters respond when the pressure comes? Upon the answer to this question depends the integrity and perpetuity of true republicanism in this country. When the citizens of a republic are swayed more by party prejudice then by reason, then they are no longer citizens of a republic.

Who will dare deny that the financial system of this government is faulty, when the crop cannot be moved without a panic, unless the National Treasurer lends sixty millions to New York banks.

The Alliance Party.

Many look upon this party as a class party. It is often associated with the Farmer's Alliance, whose membership is made up exclusively of farmers. This is a mistake. The word Alliance as the name of the new political party is without qualification. It characterises the party as the alliance of all the good and reform elements of society. Hence no one need feel out of place in this party bacause he does not happen to be a farmer. The principles of the party, stand above the occupation of its members. Hence all men who love justice and hate iniquity, in high places as well as in low, properly belong to this party.

To the Independents of Minnesota.

We have already entered upon another political campaign. Of late years the contest has been between parties with corporate interests about equally divided between the two. The masses have been made to believe that their welfare and the salvation of the country depended upon the supremacy of one party or the other. Practically it has made little or no difference to the people. Corporate interests have been supreme in either case. It has been a case of "heads I win; tails you lose." Now the situation is changed. We find the masses arrayed against their political tyrants. It is a movement which has sprung from the people. It is the uprising of a long suffering people. It is the action of the people, for the people and must be by the people. They must press on to victory or continue to be the tools, and eventually the slaves, of plutocratic tyranny. "Choose ye this day" not "whom ye will serve," but whether you will be bound or free.

It is a sad commentary on the future of agriculture, that an advance in the price of farm products is given by many of the eastern journals as the cause of the present financial crisis. If this be true, the logical conclusion would follow that hard times in the country made better times in Wall street; that, in order to prevent future panics the farmer must continue to sell his products at a loss. Unless all signs fail the farmers of this country are going to change these conditions and hereafter stand square upon the demand of "equal rights to all; and special privileges to none.

Three thousand million dollars have been forced from labor to pay interest upon the public debt since 1861. This sum has been taken by law from the wealth producers to fatten and support and make influential to the drones of society. To get this enormous sum of money from the wealth producers they have but to control first one and then the other of the two old parties. The trick has worked admirably, and the leaderships of those same old parties are to-day making a joint effort to continue the robbery by dividing the people upon false and sectional issues, notably the tariff. Will the people again be deceived? To-day these political schemers are professing great sympathy and interest in labor organizations; writing platforms very nearly like labor demands, but are careful to offer the same old political office seekers for legislative offices. Be not deceived, independents, but stand by your demands and select men to carry forward your work whose interest and principles are with the wealth producers. "Suffer not yourselves to be betrayed with a kiss."

Organize Alliance Clubs.

Organize an alliance club in every village in the county, and in every township except those where every man, or almost every man, belongs to the farmers' alliance, as you will get men in who would not otherwise be with you. For a constitution for an alliance club, and how to organize, address D. E. Hatlestad, Atty. at Law, Crookston, Minn. Clubs of this kind have already been organized in Crookston and Red Lake Falls. Organize well; get every man in the town to join you. We want to see an alliance club in every town in the county before October 10th. Don't wait for some one else to take hold of this matter, but do it yourselves. Go at it now, every man who wants Owen elected.

Same Old Game.

One of Mr. Wavra's boys, living in the town of Tabor, took two loads of wheat to market and the buyer would only give him No. 2 Northern for his wheat. On his way home he called at his father's house and told him what he got. "Why," said the old man, "that is not right, they give me No. 1 Hard for mine, no better wheat than yours." It was then arranged that the old man should take the rest to market for the young man, which he did, and got No. 1 Hard for the same wheat the same buyer only give No. 2 Northern for! When will this steal stop? When you farmers go to work and elect Owen and a farmer legislature to back him. Then you will stop it, and not till then.

Attention, Alliance Officers.

Some of the secretaries fail to do their duty by neglecting to report the names of members, the number, etc., to the County Secretary, Nels Muus, of Fertile, Minn. Those who have not done so, do so at once. Don't delay this matter any longer; the officers should do their duty and do it at once. Let every alliance hold weekly meetings from now until the election, and let every voter attend these meetings, as the time is short before election. Hold your meetings often from now on. It would be best where there are many farmers or workingmen in a town who are not members of the alliance to organize an alliance club, as many will join an alliance club who would not, or who cannot join the farmers' alliance.

NELS MUUS.
Sec. County Alliance.

Every alliance man should be a committee of one from now until the polls close on Nov. 4th. See that every man is out at the polls, and see that no frauds are committed, such as stealing alliance tickets, bulldozing, and the like. Remember the opposition to the farmers' cause is desperate and will hesitate at no frauds to defeat the will of the people.

The only way to make republican principles win is to vote for S. M. Owen.

"Straws show which way the wind blows." A vote for Governor was taken on a train coming from Waseca to St. Paul, resulting as follows:

Owen	54
Wilson	31
Merriam	11
Total	96

A Minnesota merchant put up the names of the three candidates on a card in his store a few days ago, inviting the farmers who called to cast their votes by marking their choice opposite each name. At night the record stood Owen 20, Wilson 2, Merrim 1. The merchant, being a Republican took down his card at the end of the first day.

ANGUS, Sept. 25, 1890.

E. E. Lomen, Crookston, Minn.:

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 23d received Saturday, notifying me that I had been placed on the Farmers' Alliance ticket as the Representative for Polk County.

Thanks to the Alliance County Central Committee for the honor thus shown me. On my part this honor came unsought, unasked, as you know, and with pleasure I, so accept the nomination, and should I prove to be elected it shall be my simple prayer to so act that the committee and county may hereafter say and feel that your choice was a fair one. Yes, I feel the sting of oppression as most of our farmers do, and it shall be my great aim to relieve myself and Bro. farmers from the yoke of monopolists and corrupt politicians, and the step has been taken and another step we hope to take at the next election, and place men at the head of government affairs. I may not be with you but my vote will. I believe that defeat means more taxation, more and higher freights, more and higher elevator charges, higher rates of interest and more of everything but money and comfort to the farmer and laboring people. Then with victory written on our banner, may we not with one bold, honest front face the ballot box and vote for liberty. My duties on my farm will not admit of my going out electioneering, yet I shall be with you at some of the public meetings.

Again thanking you,
I am, respectfully,
WM. CARLETON.

MILLER, FOOTE & SWEATT,
ATTY'S-AT-LAW.
McKinnon Block, Crookston, Minn.

If Polk County raises 2,000,000 bushels of wheat this year, one cent per bushel means $20,000 in or out of Polk County. Last year the loss to the farmer was from 10 to 20 cents per bushel under the system of marketing wheat, and Mr. Merriam assures the farmers that the Republican party has already done all they have asked of it—i. e. has established a free and open market for our wheat. If it costs each farmer from 10 to 20 cents per bushel, besides his taxes, to support the system to keep this robber system in vogue, what's the use of keeping it? Mr. Owen is anxious to see this deal changed and give the farmer a chance for once, and it is clearly for the interest of this country to give him a chance to see what he can do. Vote for your own interests by voting for S. M. Owen.

Hill's Position Toward Merriam.

Duluth Herald: Perennial Candidate Gilman is now out and chirping, we notice, about "the Jim Hill ring which is supporting Merriam for Governor." How Chirper Gilman has climed over the ropes of a ring into which he has slung his white hat so often, we can't imagine, but the effort must have turned his head or he wouldn't be babbling about "Jim Hill" backing Merriam. Every child in politics knows the relation in which Mr. Hill stands toward the Democratic nominee, Judge Wilson, and that the biggest knife which Gov. Merriam has to fear in this campaign is that which Hill holds.

That looks likely when Hill's employes are racing around this county, fixing up the Merriam fences. Did not the Merriam delegates to St. Paul get free passes on the Great Northern road? At this distance it looks as though Owen is the only candidate objectionable to railroads. How many passes did his delegates get over any road to go and nominate him?

Mr. Owen's Speech at Rochester.

Hon. Sidney Owen, Alliance candidate for Governor, delivered an eloquent address at Rochester the closing day of the Southern Minnesota Fair.

In the evening a mass meeting was held on the public square. Geo. Muller, of New York, made the opening address, and arraigned both of the old parties for their disregard of industrial interests.

When Mr. Owen appeared he was greeted with enthusiasm. He said, among other things:

From 1850 to 1860 the increase in farm values was 101 per cent, live stock values 95 per cent; from 1860 to 1870 farm values 40 per cent; live stock 30 per cent; from 1870 to 1880, farm values 9 per cent increase, on live stock values, a decrease of $25,000,000. In 1860 the agricultural wealth was one-half the entire national wealth; In 1870 it was one-third; in 1880 it was one-fourth, and in 1890 it is about one-fifth. Thus in 1860 the agriculturists owned one-half the national wealth, but in 1890 the agriculturists own only one-fifth of the total wealth. Showing that relatively the farmers' condition is growing worse.

On taxation he said that every year the percentage of property exempt from taxation increased. From 1820 to 1860 the amount exempt was about 20 per cent; in 1870 the amount exempt was 50 per cent; In 1880, 60 per cent—that is, 40 per cent of the property paid all of the taxes. The portion exempted consists largely of stocks, bonds, jewelry, &c., the property of the rich, while the home of the poor mechanic and the farm bear their full burden of taxation. In a powerful arraignment he presented the facts of overcapitalization, and the burden thus placed upon the productive interests of the country.

Mr. Owen is logical, convincing and eloquent, yet careful and conservative in his statements. His personality will be a winning factor in the contest this fall.

The Cause at Benson.

BENSON, Minn., Sept. 24.—[Special Correspondence to Daily News.]—The Alliance campaign opened here last night with an address from A. S. Edwards, a representative of the Knights of Labor, who handled the industrial problem with earnestness and force that left an impression upon his audience that will bear fruit worthy of the cause. His appeal to the vigorous, thinking men of the present to deal with living issues that confront the industrial masses of the day was well received by the people, who are in sympathy with the cause of the toilers of the country. The people of this county are fully awake to the Alliance cause, and not only the farmers, but the laboring and business men are taking an active interest in the cause of the mass against the class.

FARMER.

That's What's the Matter With the Farmers.

Marshall Messenger.

Wheat 85c., a good crop. The farmers are happy, and with good crops and big prices, they have little or no time to engage in politics "to better their condition," save those who would better it by getting into office. The average farmer is satisfied with the present political status, and he will not vote to put the democrats in charge, over the shoulders of the alliance.

Well, that looks lovely, but the facts don't justify the roseate view. When No. 1 Hard wheat brings 85 cents in the local markets, it should bring the farmer one dollar if he had his rights. But the system is so thoroughly under the control of the buyer that he can lay down the rule: "Give no No. 1 Hard grades," and no No. 1 Hard is given; and the farmer has to sell his No. 1 Hard wheat for No. 2 Northern, or even rejected in some cases. The average farmer is not satisfied with a "political status" that tolerates such robberies as have been committed under the present system, and they are bound to have a change in the deal. It was the duty of the republican party to correct this evil, but the managers were making too much money out of elevator and railroad stock, and they thought the farmers were all a set of fools who would keep right on voting under the party lash to perpetuate the system. But the farmers demand a change in the system and are going to vote for it, and "that's what's the matter with the farmers."

Do not be fooled. A vote for the Merriam party is a half-vote for railroad attorney Wilson. If you believe in a free government "of the people, by the people and for the people," be sure to vote for a man who is in sympathy with the people—S. M. Owen.

Mr. Owen at Sauk Centre.

To the Editor of the Daily News:

SAUK CENTRE, Sept. 24. Mr. S. M. Owen addressed a large and enthusiastic Alliance meeting here to-night. The speech was a fine effort, and for an hour and a half held the vast audience in close and interested attention. The Alliance party is strong here, and growing stronger every day. The meeting to-night will greatly accelerate the movement. Mr. Owen goes next to Fergus Falls, where he addresses a mass meeting.

J. LYMAN.

The Jackson Republic, many for years one of the leadig Repulican papers in Southwestern Minnesota has hoisted the Alliance state ticket, and in its last issue says:

If the same feeling exists all over the state that does in Jackson county S. M. Owen will be elected by 20,000 majority. It is almost impossible to find men in any township in this county who will suport Merriam, while they are all enthusiastic for S. M. Owen. And still you see such papers as the Pioneer Press full of such statements as "Merriam steadily gaining," "farmers abreast for Merriam." If the Pianeer Press would interview a few people from the rural district other than political strikers, they might get a few facts that is, if they are after facts.

What earthly good has Merriam's government done the farmers? Our wheat market placed in absolute control of the elevator system and taxes on the old cow for double her value in the market. That's a healthy "farmers' friend," aint it. But then you ought to elect Merriam because if you don't he can't knock out Cush Davis for the Senate, don-cher-know.

A. R. Holston, the alliance candidate for county attorney, is a hustler from way back—just the kind of a man the county needs to attend to the duties of that important office. He is the son of a veteran and lost a brother in the service, and he would have been in it himself had he been old enough. The legal affairs of the county will be safe in his hands. Vote for Holston for county attorney.

Wisconsin is immensely pleased with her farmer Governor. Let Minnesota follow suit by electing S. M. Owen.

At last the farmers have what they have ardently desired—a chance to show their independence. They have a candidate of their own—S. M. Owen.

There it goes again. Even the government seems to be down on the poor farmer. Our latest dispatches state that Postmaster Wheat, of the House, Washington, D. C., is graded "rejected."

If the Merriam party don't quit fooling, they will elect a democratic governor. A vote for Merriam is a half vote for Wilson. Better give a square vote for Owen and make a sure thing of it.

If the present sentiment holds, Owen will carry Polk County by a big majority next month. Wilson and Merriam don't seem to be "in it" very extensively. The common people are awake at last. Let the good work go on.

Gov. Merriam, in his speech accepting the nomination, said that the republican party

HAS ALREADY DONE

all that the farmers ask. Well, if the present condition of our wheat market is the best the republican party can do for our farmers, they will have to look elsewhere for a remedy or perish. If the presebt system of equalization is the best the shop affords the farmers had better come to the front and run the business for themselves awhile.

A free and open wheat market—the object for which the farmers are waging this campaign, is for the interest of every laborer or business man in this county—except the elevator system. With the farmers prosperous, business flourishes and every laborer has plenty of work to do and good wages. Why can you not for once vote for yourself by casting a vote for S. M. Owen, who will be elected on this issue? No other candidate is pledged to this purpose nor cares to see it accomplished. With S. M. Owen as governor we shall have justice in our wheat markets if it can be had.

The efforts of the Merriam party to disintegrate the alliance ticket are worthy of the severest condemnation and defeat of all who have used these underhanded schemes. We are glad to note that one man on the alliance ticket, John H. Locken, has had manliness enough to resist all of the specious blandishments of the adversary of the farmers cause, and to stand firm at his post. For days he was followed with all kinds of temptations, but in vain. He stood for the right and now he should be rewarded by a triumphant election to the office for which he is a candidate, register of deeds. That he is well qualified no one who knows him for a moment doubts, and that the Merriam party considers him one of the strongest supporters of the farmers' cause is shown in their frantic efforts to proselyte him. He should be elected, and THE JOURNAL hopes to see him and will do all it can to that end.

He Has No Walk-Away.

White Bear Lake Breeze.

Judging from reports from the country districts Gov. Merriam is to have no walk-away over Owen and Wilson. Many even confidently predict Merriam's defeat, but when the votes are counted it will be plain to be seen that the barrel was not tapped in vain.

Disaffection Everywhere.

Duluth Times.

The disaffection of Republicans toward Merriam is more general than has heretofore been supposed. It is found in Duluth, in Minneapolis, in the southern part of the State, in the Red River Valley, everywhere in fact.

Why Republicans Kick.

MACHINE METHODS.

The following affidavit of reputable citizens of Red Lake Falls showing how the gag law was applied and republicans deprived of their franchise, shows one reason why honest republicans are not supporting the machine ticket this year:

STATE OF MINNESOTA, }
County of Polk, } SS.

The undersigned, Republican voters, personally appeared before the undersigned, a notary public in and for said county and state, and they each being duly sworn deposes and says for himself, that he is a Republican and has heretofore supported the Republican ticket and advocated the principles of the republican party; that he is a legal voter of the village of Red Lake Falls; that on the 10th day of September, 1890, at 8 o'clock p. m., at the building now known and used as the council room, a public building in the village of Red Lake Falls, said county, a republican caucus was held for the purpose of electing three delegates to the republican county convention, to be held in Crookston, on Friday, September the 12th, 1890. That said caucus was duly called by the republican village committee, viz: J. J. Redmond, J. A. Duffy and J. A. Thompson, pursuant to a notice of one week, given by said committee by posting notices in three of the most public places in said village; that this said caucus was the only caucus had and held in said village for said purpose; that there was present at said caucus the following republican voters of said village, they being the only persons who participated or took part or voted in said caucus, viz:

J. J. Redmond, John A. Duffy, H. B. Davis, Wm. Findleson, P. B. Couture, Dr. I. Turcot, W. A. Reichel, Moses Verboncuer, E. Semper, B. Sivigney, F. Cote, Sr., B. Fisher, E. Steinhart, J. Laurence, Dr. John Watson, J. W. Lowe, H. A. McClatchie, A. D. Wishard, John A. Thompson, W. J. Flock, Chas. Bourden, Erick Kling, Theodore Garceau, Nathan Frankle, Jacob Palies, in all twenty-five republican voters.

The following proceedings were had at said caucus, viz: Dr. J. Watson and H. B. Davis were nominated for chairman of said caucus; Dr. J. Watson withdrew in favor of H. B. Davis, and H. B. Davis was elected chairman by acclamation. J. A. Duffy was elected secretary by acclamation. It was moved and seconded and carried to poll the vote, and no one to vote except republicans. Dr. J. Watson moved that H. A. McClatchie and J. J. Redmond be two of the delegates to said convention. Lost. Dr. I. Turcot moved that we proceed to vote by ballot for three delegates; seconded by Wm. Findleson; motion carried. Dr. J. Watson placed in nomination H. A. McClatchie, J. J. Redmond and P. D. Couture, and Dr. I. Turcot placed in nomination J. J. Redmond, W. Findleson and P. D. Couture. The chairman appointed Dr. J. Watson and Wm. Findleson as tellers, to receive and count the vote; the secretary took the names of those voting, being same as above stated, and the vote being closed the tellers announced the result of the ballot, which was as follows: Total number of votes cast was 25. P. D. Couture 25 votes; J. J. Redmond 25 votes; Wm. Findleson 15 votes; H. A. McClatchie 10 votes. Therefore the chairman declared that P. D. Couture, J. J. Redmond and Wm. Findleson were the duly elected delegates to said convention; and thereafter the said chairman and secretary made out in due form the credentials of said delegates and delivered the same to said J. J. Redmond, Wm. Findleson and P. D. Couture; moved and carried that the caucus adjourn. That the legality nor regularity of said caucus and the proceedings had were not questioned by any one present, or by any other person; that thereafter said delegates presented their said credentials to the committee on credentials of the Republican convention at Crookston, September the 12th, 1890, and the said committee with a full knowledge of all the facts in the matter, rejected said legally elected delegates and reported in their stead the names of A. D. Wishard, John A. Thompson and H. A. McClatchie, three men who were not elected by any caucus of the republican voters of said village; that if they were appointed by any one it was by a secret conference of themselves and a few of those who participated in the above caucus, and were dissatisfied because they were too small a minority of the republican voters of said village to elect such delegates as were satisfactory to themselves and the republican bosses and ringsters of Polk County. Their said secret conference being held without any notice whatever to the large majority of the republican voters of said village; but, upon the contrary, was called without authority and kept a profound secret from a majority of the republicans of said village, until they (said Wishard, McClatchie and Thompson) presented their fraudulent recommendation to said committee on credentials; that the said duly elected delegates, Redmond, Findleson and Couture appealed from the fraudulent action of the said committee on credentials to the convention; that the said republican convention with a full knowledge of all the facts in the premises, corruptly voted to confirm the fraudulent report of said committee on credentials and fraudulently and corruptly decided to admit said fraudulently appointed delegates, Wishard, McClatchie and Thompson, and refuse a seat in the convention to the said Redmond, Findleson and Couture, the duly elected delegates to said convention from the said village of Red Lake Falls; that affiants make this affidavit for the purpose of letting the republican voters of Polk County know of the corrupt action taken by the late republican convention for the purpose of disfranchising the majority of the legal republican voters of the village of Red Lake Falls, because the delegates elected by said majority were not in sympathy with the rotten ring of corrupt politicians who run the said republican convention, and for the purpose of protesting as republicans against said corrupt action of said convention, and further affiants saith not.

Jas. J. Redmond.
P. D. Couture.
Wm. Findleson.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 15th day of September, A. D. 1890.

{ NOTARY } P. G. Falardeau,
{ SEAL. } Notary Public.

We, the undersigned, republican voters of the village of Red Lake Falls, Minn., do hereby certify that on or about the 3d day of September, 1890, notices for a caucus of the republican voters of said village were posted in several conspicuous places in said village; said caucus was held pursuant to said notices on the 10th day of September, 1890, at the common council room in said village, and that we attended said caucus. We further certify that we know the contents of the above affidavit that the statements therein made as to proceedings had at said caucus are true and correct in every respect.

The report as compiled by the County Auditor from the Assessors returns of the agricultural statistics of our county for the year 1889, shows the following number of acres of land cultivated and the number of bushels of grain raised thereon:

	Acres.	Bush.
Wheat	194,080	3,010,581
Oats	37,077	650,282
Corn	436	8,995
Barley	25,582	169,842
Rye	172	1,736
Buckwheat	8	60
Potatoes	1,020	200,857
Beans	21	241
Flax seed	200	948
Other products	227
Cultivated hay	2,912	3,009 tons.

Number of apple trees growing, 416; No. of apple trees bearing fruit, 148; bushels of apples raised, 6; pounds of tobacco raised, 206; No. of sheep sheared in fall, 3,403; pounds of wool sheared, 15,023; pounds of butter produced, 670,231; pounds of cheese produced 3,639.

The acreage under cultivation during the present season (1890) is composed of the following items: Acres of wheat 218,901; acres of oats 39,200; acres of corn 408; acres of barley 15,677; acres of rye 212; acres of buckwheat 42; acres of potatoes 2,148; acres of beans 12; acres of sugar cane 9; acres of cultivated hay 5,900; acres of flax seed 56; acres of other products 740. Being a total of 283,816 acres under cultivation, an increase of 21,186 acres over that of the year 1889. The number of sheep sheared in the spring (1890) was 5,869, and they produced 24,807 pounds of wool.

Giving Owen a Lift.

Fergus Falls Journal.

The Owen men are not a little delighted to know that Rev. Kristoffer Janson, the well known Unitarian minister, will not only support the new party, but will take the stump for it here in this county. Rev. Janson will speak at the Court House in this city Oct. 30, in the afternoon in English and in the evening in Norwegian. M. Janson and his followers will give the new party quite a lift, as he is acknowledged a very able man.

A Device of the Enemy.

St. Paul Daily News.

Mr. Merriam's morning newspaper in St. Paul has developed its tactics.

A few days ago it published a letter from Fergus Falls setting forth the wonderful strength the Alliance was developing in that section.

This was a truthful statement, and because it was truthful it created some surprise that it should have appeared in such a paper.

The reason is now explained. In yesterday's issue a letter from Albert Lea appears giving a very gloomy picture of the Alliance situation. The correspondent states that there has been a good deal of Alliance sentiment in that locality, but the voters have now decided to return to their first love and vote the Republican ticket.

The trick which the two letters displays is a cunning but old one.

Otter Tail county is known throughout the State as one of the leading strongholds of the Alliance. The consequence is it would be useless to publish a letter from Fergus Falls claiming anything else. Telling the truth was more advisable than telling a lie, because no one would believe the lie.

Besides, it had the air of judicial fairness to sum up the situation against the candidate who is in full control of that paper.

The next step is to visit other sections of the State, where the sentiment is not as well known, and depict the failure of the Alliance movement. It looks as though this was really an attempt to be fair, whereas it is only a device to give weight to falsehood by first telling the truth and relying on the reputation thus obtained for doing some wholesale lying.

Reports which reach us, not only from Freeborn, but from counties all through the southern part of the State, are exactly the reverse of the statements in the Pioneer Press. Instead of going backward in that locality the Alliance is going forward even more than in the northern counties.

In the northern part of the State the movement has been more active and aggressive than in the southern part, and hence, as the southern counties are becoming aroused, there, there is more room for increased activity than in the north.

The revolt is in progress throughout the State, and the trick of the enemy to report one locality as going backward, in order to discourage the work in another section, will not win, because it will deceive very few, if any.

If the residents of any locality find the Alliance sentiment in their own region waning, they may then place some reliance in similar report from other sections.

Until they find this true of their local surroundings they are certainly safe in giving no credence to such statements as these from Freeborn county.

It is entirely safe to apply this test, as no locality in the State can be found where there has ever been an Alliance movement, without finding it on the increase at the present time.

The Boodle Plot.

St. Paul Daily News.

The most startling development of the campaign was the exposure in last evening's Daily News of the scheme devised by the Merriamites to demoralize the Alliance by the use of "boodle."

Gov. Merriam deliberately entered the political field on the theory that every man has his price, and it must be conceded that his experience has developed a good deal of ground for him to claim that he was about correct.

There come times, however, when money will not bridge over the chasm, and one of those periods we believe to be the Minnesota campaign, of 1890. The device was cunning, and we are creditably informed that men are already out in the State laying the ground work for its execution.

The plan, as explained yesterday, was to secure a local Alliance leader in numerous section of the State who would repudiate the Alliance ticket at the eleventh hour.

The Merriamites would be supplied with his repudiation in advance, just as the treacherous Burlingame, the Alliance candidate for Attorney General, furnished them with a copy of his letter of declination prior to sending it to the Alliance committee. In fact Burlingame consorted with the Alliance movement for a couple of months with a view of gaining such information as might be placed in his way, and turning it over to the Merriam crowd.

They knew of his coming declination long before the Alliance committee. Whether he was paid cash for his dirty work we do not know, but that he was paid either in cash or promise of political promotion, or both, seems altogether probable.

He had assured the Alliance of his utmost cordiality, and sympathy with their movement. He had given personal reasons as the only ones which would prevent his accepting, the chief one of which was, that he could not afford the expense of a campaign. The Alliance committee waived any claim on him for an assessment or any demands upon his time, except such as might be entirely agreeable to him. And still, after coquetting with the committee for weeks he suddenly flashes out with a political document, repudiating the Alliance, which the Merriamites have spread far and wide throughout the State.

We note this somewhat in detail, because it is entirely in keeping with the plan exposed yesterday. The success of the game played with Mr. Burlingame undoubtedly lead to the conception of a more extended plot. The "boodle" dispensers would of course, report their purchases and the Merriamites would be informed just when the local leader in each locality was to make repudiation public, and they would thus be ready to circulate the news like a flash through the State, making the last ten days appear like a general breakup of the Alliance.

While it is an insult to devise such a plot it would be surprising if in any political association there were not purchasable men.

We apprehend they would have found it difficult, even without this exposure, in securing their traitors.

But with this exposure the plan is balked.

No Alliance man can now afford to change front under any circumstances. He must stick to his colors if he would escape the taint of political corruption.

If he entered the cause from principle the same principle still holds good to retain him in the ranks.

Consequently, even if he might be tempted, he would realize that he cannot now afford to entertain for a moment any proposition to betray his cause.

The Burlingame experience and stigma which he has placed upon his hitherto good name, have furnished both an example and a warning.

To The Farmer's Alliance of of Polk Co. Minn.

Gentlemen:—The farmers and workingmen of Minnesota in general and of Polk County in particular have arisen in their might to shake off the burdens that monopolists, usurers and corrupt machine politicians have placed upon them. As a first step to that end, the farmers and laborers have declared their independence of the democratic and republican parties both of which have deserted the principles of their founders and are now ruled, controlled and run by the monopolists and for the monopolists, while the interests, the wants and the needs of the people are neglected. A full Farmers Alliance State, Congressional, Legislative and County ticket has been placed in the field and a victory for the Alliance means the control of the State and county affairs by the people. Besides and furthermore this movement is but the advance guard of a great reform party which, in 1892 will sweep the nation from Maine to California, and place in the Presidential chair a man of the people. Monopoly will be dethroned and the reign of the plutocrats will end, and again we will have restored to the masses a government of the people, by the people and for the people.

Your candidates are mostly poor men like yourselves; your leaders are without money or means and are now pitted againts the hirelings of monopoly, and are fighting for your interests the most desperate political battle ever waged upon the soil of Minnesota. Defeat means ruin to your leaders; increased taxes to you and the filling of your offices with the tools of your oppressors. It means that interest, taxes, freight rates and tariff will be high and that your wheat will still pay tribute to the elevator pirates; success means the abolition of these iniquitous robberies now being so successfully practiced upon the farmers and in fact upon all the poor or middle-classes of whatsoever profession, calling or trade, for nearly all the poor people in the city who feel the sting of poverty and wear the yoke of monopoly more galling than the one which our lawmakers and office-holders have placed around the necks of the farmers. Your County Committee are willing to work, but to send our speakers and campaign literature requires money. "We must educate or must perish."

Many towns and villages are without alliance organizations; these can and must be organized before the election if we would win. To organize means expense. Will the farmers furnish the money to fight their own battle? We do not want a corruption fund but we do want money for the purpose of paying the necessary expenses for organization, speaking and campaign documents. We have no candidate with a barrel; we cannot call upon the rich for contributions—their money is being spent by the enemy to defeat us and elect the hirelings of plutocracy. You farmers, you individually, are the men to pay these campaign expenses. We want every farmer in Polk county to give somthing—be it little or much. If you cannot contribute much give all you can. Let those better fixed give their dollars and the poorer their quarters. Remember every cent given will come back a hundred fold. Call an alliance meeting at once for the purpose. Give all that you can, personally or from the alliance funds, and have your secretary forward the amount to E. E. Lommen, the chairman of the County Central Committee, Crookston, Minn. You will get a receipt for your money sent and the committee will account to your alliance for the manner in which every cent so contributed is spent. Do not delay but send in at once.

Consisting of 600 acres, lying on Maple Lake, in the town of Godfrey, includes the old townsite of Maple Bay 80 acres fenced for pasture; 160 acres under the plow, balance hay land and timber; house, barn, granary and good well; one of the best located farms for stock in the famous Maple Lake region. Also 50 acres heavily wooded timber land within 4 miles. Will sell with all my stock and farm machinery if so desired. For full particulars call on W. N. Godfrey, Maple Bay, or Journal office, Crookston. [7-tf]

And now the Merriam crowd are turning their mud batteries upon John Locken. Failing to buy, bulldoze or flatter him into accepting an office under the Merriam flag, they have now suddenly found out how "wicked and dishonest" he is, and are trying to prejudice farmers against him. Well, he is doing good work in the alliance cause, and that is what makes him so wicked. Farmers, stand by your own workers and your own cause regardless of what your enemies say.

The tariff does not affect prices at Fontaine & Anglim's store. Now is the time to buy.

Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer, mother and father of cashier C. E. Sawyer, of the First National Bank, left for their home last week.

Peter Hougan, a leading farmer of Decorah, Iowa, and Andrew Nelson, of Grand Forks, was out to visit Peter Cornelius one day last week.

Mr. John Jensen and Miss Anna Christina Miller, of the town of Sanders, were married by Justice Spendley on Wednesday morning, Oct. 15th.

The Governor and Senator C. K. Davis had a rather chilly reception on Monday. November 4th will be a mighty cold day for his excellency.

If it is bargains you want, call and see what Fontaine & Anglim can do for you. Bought before the new tariff law and will give customers the benefit.

D. Jacobus, Max Ericsson and A. C. Schmidt returned from the wilds of Dakota on Saturday evening with 40 or 50 geese as the result of a big hunt of a day or so.

Everything in the line of millinery can be found at Mrs. E. E. Bangs' fashionable emporium on Second street. The ladies are cordially invited to call.

Crookston Alliance met on Saturday and raised $15.50 to help defray the expenses of the coming rally on Friday night and that on Monday, Oct. 17th.

THE JOURNAL is informed that Chris. Steenerson lost his house by fire last Thursday night. As Chris. is a practical business farmer the house was fully insured.

Ladies, call at Mrs. E. E. Bangs' millinery store on Second street, and see that elegant new fall stock.

Gov. Merriam in his speech on Monday evening assured the farmers that "everything they have asked for has been done for them." Elsewhere in this issue appears a letter from C. T. Lanman, of McIntosh to the St. Paul Daily News, showing HOW the requests of farmers have been granted.

Just recieved at Minnie & Mrs J. L. Bailey's a fine line of Ladies' and children's Hats. Opening 15th to 18th. Please call and see goods. Prices to suit the times.

P. C. Schmidt returned from Duluth last week. He has formed a copartnership with Reynold's & White and will go to Duluth to live in about two weeks. He says that Comstock will get a big democratic vote in Duluth and that Owen will get a big vote there. He does not think that Merriam is as popular there as the newspapers would have it appear.

One night last week Maj. C. E. Stansberry heard a man down by McKinnon Bros. coal sheds making a fearful racket, and arising from his peaceful bed began active preparations to go forth to the rescue. Ere he reached the spot, however, the police had arrived and conveyed the man to a hotel. He had fallen from the shed to the ground jarring himself up considerably.

If that much talked of starch factory had been pushed to a successful issue last winter, see what a big thing it would have been for Polk County. Although no starch would have been made this fall it would have stimulated the raising of an immense crop of potatoes that would have been worth thousands of dollars to the farmers and business men of the county. That would have been an investment that would have returned a thousand fold profit to investors.

Peter Cornelius is hostile, and we don't blame him. While he was threshing on a section of land remote from his residence no one was left at home but the small children, and one night, as they were out in the field after the cows they found a sheep lying upon the ground with its legs tied. The poor animal was nearly dead when found. When Peter came home and learned this he counted his flock and found that some 18 or 20 sheep were missing. Appearances indicated that some sheep thief had taken them in the night and either dropped one from his wagon or overlooked it in the dark. Pete says he would give the value of the sheep just for one square look in the eye of the sneaking thief that would steal a sheep in this country. He thinks he would mark him so that others would know him on sight.

The Lake View hotel has been rented to a man from Ada who has taken possession.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kistenmacher returned on Tuesday morning from a very pleasant visit to the old home friends in Clay County.

THE JOURNAL is requested to announce a meeting of the Polk County Farmers' Protective Association on Nov. 6th, at 2 o'clock p. m., at the city hall.

By running a free train from Fosston and one from Fertile, quite a crowd was scared up to meet Gov. Merriam on Monday night. Oh, no, railroads are not interested in electing Merriam!

No free trains will be run to bring farmers to meet the next Governor, S. M. Owen, when he comes to Crookston on the 27th of October, but every farmer should turn out to greet him all the same.

Turn out next Friday evening and hear what W. W. Erwin has to say on the living issue of the day, at the Opera House in this city. On Saturday at 2 o'clock he will speak in East Grand Forks and in the evening at Red Lake Falls. Everybody should hear this eloquent orator.

Nels Muus, alliance candidate for clerk of the court, was in the city on Monday. Mr. Muus is one of those quiet men who do not tell more than they know, but who, nevertheless, are all right when you dig them out. Mr. Muus has a college education and should he be elected will attend to the duties of the office in good shape. He says there are three republicans in the village of Fertile, but he is not sure that all will vote the straight republican ticket.

On Friday evening, at 8:30 o'clock, John Walseth died suddenly at the Sherman House of appoplexy. He had been boarding there for some two weeks, but becoming obnoxious by reason of strong drink, Mr. Halverson told him on Thursday he would have to get another boarding place. That night he came to the clerk and begged a place to sleep, and the clerk not liking to turn him out into the street at that late hour, found him a place to sleep. Just before supper time on Friday evening he came in and told Mr. Halverson he had no money but would like some supper. Mr. Halverson told him "all right, you can have some supper when it is ready." Walseth went in and sat down at the table and Mr. H. told one of the waiter girls to get the old man something to eat. The next he saw of him, a few moments later, two men were carrying him out of the dining room apparently in a fit. He was placed upon a cot in a room adjoining the office and a doctor hastily summoned, but to no purpose, as the man lived but about two hours. The coroner impanelled a jury on Saturday and held an inquest, the jury deciding that the man came to his death by an appoplectic stroke. Old settlers will be reminded of a similar case that happened in '79, when Bob Houston kept the Sherman House; that of an old tinner who had been on a protracted spree and who also fell backwards from the table in a fit, was carried out and died a few minutes later. He had built a little shop on the site now occupied by Anderson & Co's store, in the McKinnon block, to which he was carried, expiring in a short time.

State Teachers' Institute.

The State teachers' institute for the county of Polk, was held at the Court House, Oct. 6th to 10th, inclusive. The institute was in charge of Supt. Casey, who was assisted by Prof. Rocheleau, of Moorhead, and Prof. W. W. Pendegrast, of the agricultural department of our State University. All of the best teachers of the county were present and diligently performed all duties assigned to them. Prof. Rocheleau endeavored to impress on the minds of the teachers the importance of training their pupils to right habits of actions. Prof. Pendegrast believes that we should cram less and have the pupils reason more—that is, a few important facts well taught, and the reasons deduced from them, was of far more importance than a knowledge of thousands of facts without reasons. Supt. Casey, who is one of the best teachers of penmanship in the state, presented his method of teaching it. Miss Wilson, teacher of music in the Crookston schools, gave daily lessons in vocal music, and, by the way, does not that subject need more attention by the teachers of Polk County? The lecture by Dr. L. B. Sperry, of Northfield, on "Brain and Nerve," was very interesting and instructive. The Longfellow entertainment on Thursday evening consisted in a short biography of the author and the reading and singing of selections from his works. All who took part in the exercises received many a word of praise from those who were present. Our State Superintendent, Kiehle, was present on Wednesday and talked to us. Among other things he said that the most important part of the teachers work was the building of character, for character was the only distinction in a republic. Another part of the teacher's work was to assimilate all of the different races and classes, so that they will love our flag and our country better than all others. Pupils should be trained to observe moral distinctions and to illustrate such teaching he told the story of Nathan and David. He said that opposition to the English language is opposition to our government, therefore if you wish to be loyal to our country you must have a knowledge of and be loyal to her language. It was a high compliment to Supt. Casey when he told the teachers that the schools under his administration had improved and if we wished to advance the cause of education in this county we should stand by him.

A Pen Picture of the Western Country.

Albert Simpson Gives The Journal Readers His Views Thereon.

Deadwood, the judicial seat of Lawrence County, and the metropolis of the Black Hills country, is located in the canyon of Whitewood Creek, and is almost entirely shut in by the hills of Wyoming Territory, 90 miles from the line, 50 miles north of Custer City, 225 miles southwest of Bismarck, and 175 miles from Chardon, Neb. The F. E. & M. V. R. R. is already completed to within eight miles of Deadwood. The Deadwood Central railroad has recently been built to Lead City, and makes 11 trips daily. The city is lighted by gas and electricity; has telephone connection with every town in the Hills and the mining camps in Lawrence County. Has a splendid system of water works a well equipped and efficient fire department, a high and ward schools; also a Catholic school in charge of the sisters of the Holy Cross; has Methodist, Episcopal, Congregational and Catholic churches; has a city hall and an opera house, a flouring mill with a daily capacity of 200 barrels, two planing mills, quartz mills, two machine shops, one boiler works, three national banks with aggregate deposits of $800,000, and capital and surplus of $453,444.69, and two daily and two weekly newspapers—the Black Hills Pioneer and the Black Hills Times being issued daily and weekly. The hotel accommodations are exceptionally good. The Keystone and the Wentworth offering all the elegance and comfort of eastern houses. Since its first settlement in 1876, Deadwood has maintained its position as the business, distributing and financial center of that marvelously rich mining district. The products of the surrounding mines since their discovery 12 years ago, aggregate over $300,000,000, and this vast sum has been transmitted to the east through the banks and the express companies in Deadwood. Fifteen hack and stage lines conveying passengers and express have their main office in the city, and it is the headquarters of all the transportation companies. Although the mines in this district have been worked to a profit in the past, the development of the silver mines in this vicinity has hardly begun, and the possibilities of the future in their development is great.

Rapid City, the judicial seat of Pennington County, Black Hills, on the F. E. and M. V. R. R., is beautifully located on Rapid Creek, the largest stream in the Black Hills, which furnishes excellent water power. It is called the "Gate City of the Hills," being located on the main entrance to the Hills and the mining districts, and is surrounded by a fine farming and grazing country. The city is thriving and the people are industrious and enterprising. The Dakota School of Mines and Metalurgical College is located here. It is a mining town and has the usual volume of business in the various branches. It has 8 general and special stores, 2 flouring mills, a planing mill, 2 National banks, the Black Hills and First National, 4 good hotels, of which the Harney and International are first-class, 3 weekly and 2 daily newspapers, the Black Hills Journal and Black Hills Republican being issued both daily and weekly, and the Black Hills Miner, weekly; it also has good schools and churches. The exports consist of live stock, mica, tin and gold. The city is lighted by electricity and has telephone connection with all parts of the Black Hills. The city has a population of about 3,500.

BARLEY.

One of the most successful farmers of this state, after many years observation and experience, has discovered that most of the damage to barley from being colored, is caused by binding while damp from dew or rain. Cutting when perfectly dry has been of great benefit to him. EDNA Minn. Oct. 13, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL:—I was sorry to see in your last issue, statements that would mis-lead people regarding the qualification of E. J. Grefthen for Supt. of Schools. If you, or any other party who was seeking the truth, wished to learn the grade of certificate, held by him in this state, all you would have to do is to consult the records in the Supt, of Schools office. I reiterate he holds only a second grade certificate, in this state, and does any sane person believe that, were he a gentleman of broad culture and great learning that he would have remained, in country districts for fourteen terms, at a small salary while during that time, Crookston, Fisher, Red Lake Falls, East Grand Forks, and Fosston have been begging for able teachers, and offering big salaries? Able lawyers, physicians, preachers and teachers, are always seeking higher positions. Ambition and ability always go hand in hand.

The people of this county, are not obliged to go outside of it to find one qualified for the position of Supt. of Schools and even if they were they know enough of the history of education not to look for eminent education, in such small villages as Hillsboro, Dakota or Northwood, Iowa.

Now if our people wish to place the department of education in the hands of the ablest man they should learn the history, of the third candidate in the field and vote for the one best qualified for it. This man is Thos Casey, the present incumbent.

CROOKSTON BUSINESS COLLEGE AND INSTITUTE OF SHORTHAND.

TEACHING FOREIGNERS.

A Business College has great advantages over other schools for teaching Germans Scandinavians and other foreigners.

Of course, business is done in this country very differently from the way it is done in the old country, and a young man who has been in America only a few years cannot understand what is needed in business here, unless somebody teaches him. If he goes into a store, no one there has the time to teach him. So the best place to learn how business is done is in a college.

In our school he can learn how to read and write the English language correctly, and prepare himself to conduct his own business affairs successfully.

Our teachers will do all they can to help along those who do not know our language very well, and every student receives personal, and individual instruction.

Our foreign students generally make as good progress as our American students.

There is a great demand in business for young men who can speak the German or Scandinavian languages, so our foreign students have no trouble in getting work when they finish our course of study.

"The enemy," according to the Pioneer Press, has its high-heeled stoga boots on this fall.

And now every little off shoot of monopoly, every "Slocum" of the country press" will howl about the State being "in the hands of THE ENEMY," the farmers. What a terrible state of things that will be when the farmer shall have so reconstructed the markets as to allow him his just rights therein!

According to the calculations of the astute Pioneer Press, "the enemy" (the farmers,) will carry the southern half of the state, and "the enemy" has the north half nearly solid, and yet it says "Merriam will carry the state by 15,000 at least." How it can reconcile "the enemy" sufficiently to accomplish the latter we fail to see clearly.

The love of party is great in man, but parties are formed for the benefit of mankind, and when parties fail to accomplish that for which they are formed then will every true patriot arise and vote for his own interest. The old parties have utterly failed to correct the evils under which agriculture labors, so the people have arisen in their might, put a ticket in the field, and they are determined to elect it.

The Pioneer Press says "it looks very black in several counties in southeast Minnesota." By this statement it means that the people are determined to vote for themselves once in their lives, at which the monopolistic Pioneer Press frets and fumes like an old hag. But its howls are significant of the coming storm in which the voice of the people will be heard in unmistakable tones demanding justice.

Hon. S. G. Comstock was in the city on Monday and we had the pleasure of shaking the hand of an honest Congressman and a noble man. Mr. Comstock's labors in the behalf of his constituents has been unremitting and he lost 20 pounds in weight during the long seige. He is the only first term Congressman who has accomplished so much for his constituents, and when he returns he will be able to do much more.

Mathias Cornelius, the present deputy auditor, was born in Norway. Was educated in a German college, was clerk in a mercantile establishment four years. Upon his arrival in this country his first job was in Minneapolis where he was called as an expert bookkeeper in a very intricate case. After a successful termination of his labors in that case he went into the German American bank of St. Paul, which place he resigned to accept an offer from John Christianson, who was talking of going over to the old country and wanted to employ a good man in the auditor's office while away. Before he started for Crookston, he saw in a newspaper the account of Christianson's sudden death; however, as he had arranged to come, he came, and soon after found employment as clerk for Fontaine & Anglim, with whom he remained two years. He has had about 9 years experience in the auditor's office and is perfectly familiar with the business. Mat does not "chin" much but he is a safe man to tie to in business matters.

Some newspaper men are so hot for boodle themselves that they can explain the actions of others only upon the boodle theory, and so it is that the Red Lake Falls News accuses THE JOURNAL of espousing the cause of the farmers

FOR BOODLE!.

What a picnic we must be having, for it is a well known fact that the wheat rings have left the farmers with unlimited wealth at their command to buy newspapers with. The News seems envious because the farmers saw fit to "buy up" THE JOURNAL instead of the News. Well, we can't help it. We always did give the farmers credit for eminent good sense, anyhow. The News is raking Holston over the coals, hoping thus to defeat him, but then that is to be expected, for Holston recently obtained a $1,000 judgment against the News and moreover the News seems lately to have taken the contract to defeat the farmers in their efforts to obtain an open wheat market. Joinnd the Pioneer Press gang who calls the farmers "the enemy!" THE JOURNAL does not believe that is the way to build up this country. When the farmers are prosperous every business interest thrives, and their rights in the market is the real, living issue in this campaign.

Replying to several letters we have received this week we would say that THE JOURNAL seeks the best interests of Polk County in this campaign, and when we are asked to support any man whom we know to be notoriously incompetent we cannot do it, for it is not to the interest of Polk County to elect such men, either in county, state or congressional offices. THE JOURNAL urges its readers to be independent, but not bigoted in this matter. To vote for a man you know cannot do your business satisfactorily, simply because he happens to be on your ticket is not independence, but bigotry. It is this that has caused so much harm in the past and will ever continue to do so. Vote for your own interests and for the men who can best subserve them. If you were going to hire a man to run your farm or conduct a store for you, you would not for a moment think of hiring an incompetent man who knew nothing of the business in hand. Apply the same rule to hiring your public servants for public matters are fully as important as private.

Glyndon News: THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL is a pretty stiff republican paper, but has felt constrained to support the Alliance nominee for governor and lieutenant governor. In announcing this change, THE JOURNAL observed that it expected the party mud batteries to be opened upon it. The News, as a republican journal, is not in the least provoked to make good such a prophecy. On the contrary, we respect any change based upon conviction, such as THE JOURNAL's must be. The enlightment we should like to receive in the premises is upon this point: 1. Has Bro. Cooke found that Gov. Merriam is worse than he was two years ago, when he had THE JOURNAL's support? 2. Does THE JOURNAL hold that the alliance political departure (which it deprecated and opposed) is sufficiently formidable to offer a hope of electing its state nominees? 3. Or would THE JOURNAL prefer Wilson's election even to Merriam's, as a possible result of Owen's candidacy? We know many good men and some good newspapers that answer yes to these inquiries, or most of them—but when we get hold of so good a witness as Bro. Cooke we like to catechise him. The News is known as not bursting with admiration for Gov. Merriam's character and style as a politician, but conceding that he is one of the ablest among his own friends, and has been a sagacious, worldly-wise man of affairs while at the head of the state. We think he is in a degree the embodiment of much that is of evil and aristocratic tendency in our government, and that his opponent, Owen, sincerely represents the contrary principle; but we do believe in sincerity that the alliance party methods of curing these evils will prove abortive in so far as the Minnesota state plan goes.

Bro. Osborne will please observe that THE JOURNAL did not include the News in the category when it said "and now every SCALAWAG newspaper will open its mud batteries, &c." Bro. Osborne was a brave soldier and uses only the solid shot of truth—never mud. As to question 1. Gov. Merriam was elected by the farmer support and owed them a debt of gratitude which he has not discharged. They were pleased by his attitude when in the legislature and they were assured that if he was elected their rights in the grain market would be sacredly guarded as far as the Governor could do it, and he by proper appointments on the Board could do a great deal in that line, but how did Gov. Merriam justify their expectations? Did he not make every appointment on the Board with a view solely to his own political advantage, without regard to its effect upon the farmers' interests? Did he not utterly disregard the law by dictating every appointment under the Board? Did he not appoint C. A. Pillsbury's right hand man, Clauson, as chief inspector, and allow the elevator system in Minneapolis to dictate every other appointment? Charles H. Graves, the head of the elevator system in Duluth, said that as "that business had to be done in Duluth he should insist that Duluth control the appointments!" And did not Graves control these appointments? Do you not know that old soldiers who were farmers were ruthlessly slaughtered to make room for political ward heelers and strikers? Was all this done with a view to help farmers? No sir, and the farmers all know it and are disappointed with Gov. Merriam, who had given them assurances that their interests should be sacredly guarded. As to No. 2, yes sir, that is just what we expect from the present outlook. The farmers have been shamefully neglected. They know that S. M. Owen represents the Washington and Lincoln idea of a government of the people, BY the people and FOR the people, and they know that he fought their battles along with Bro. Osborne and other true men at the time when men took their lives in their hands to contend for principles. No. 3. No, we do not prefer to see Wilson elected and there is no danger of that, as Merriam will lead Wilson by a good many votes. The candidates today stand thus: Owen, Merriam, Wilson. If anything occurs to change this order before Nov. 4th, it will elect Merriam. THE JOURNAL's objection to Merriam is that he allowed his political ambition to swamp every other consideration, and in so doing he "went back on" farmers and old soldiers and everybody else who did not seem able to contribute to his political ambition. Had he stood by the farmers by appointing their friends on the Board, had he stood by the old soldiers as he might have done; there would not have been in Minnesota to-day a greater man than Wm. R. Merriam, but, you see, had he done all this the railroad and elevator influence would have been against him and he was more afraid of that than he was of the poor farmers. These have money, the farmers have none. Again, the sentiment of Polk County was in favor of Knute Nelson for Governor, but by machine methods the will of the people was thwarted and the delegation misrepresented the people's known wishes by voting for Merriam. We are surprised that Bro. Osborne, knowing these facts as well as he does, can support Merriam.

Merriam's organ, the Pioneer Press, calls farmers "the enemy," while Merriam came up to Polk County and sends out free trains to bring in "the enemy" to listen at his speeches.

Gov. Merriam and Senator C. K. Davis spoke to a good audience at the Opera House on Monday evening. Hon. S. G. Comstock, who unexpectedly arrived on a freight, made a few remarks at the close. Gov. Merriam in his remarks said everything the farmers had asked had been done for them. The farmers have repeatedly asked for their rights in the wheat market but they don't seem to have succeeded. They now demand a change in the government and they will no doubt get that.

"Held By The Enemy!"

That is the way the Pioneer Press describes the situation in Yellow Medicine County, where it says the ALLIANCE is in the majority! And it has come to pass that the farmer, who is simply striving to obtain his just rights in the market, is called by the leading Merriam organ of the State! Having been robbed of his just share of the profits for these years that the elevator system is in vogue, now, when he has arisen in his might to demand his rights, he is called "The Enemy!" by a paper that has been built up by the agricultural interests of the State. The object of the farmer is to place agriculture upon an even footing with other business interests, so that the farmer can retain his just share of the products of his toil, thus enabling him to pay his debts like other business men and enjoy with his family some of the comforts of life, but when he attempts this the great Pioneer Press arrays itself against him and calls him "THE ENEMY." The farmer is the enemy only to trusts, to monopolies, to oppression in every form, and the Press hastens to ally itself with all these by calling the farmer "THE ENEMY!" And it tries to leave the impression on the minds of its readers that it is the mouthpiece of the great republican party. The farmers are in the fight for a principle—one that will benefit all of the people of the State and the Pioneer Press' seems to be in it merely to win a party triumph—something that benefits only a few.

This is the year of independence. "The enemy," the farmers, are up in arms and bound to vote for their own interests for once in their lives, if they never did before. Let monopolists and their defenders beware of "the enemy!"

Ex Governor A. R. McGill spoke at the agricultural fair in Murray County, not long ago and among other things said:

"In Minnesota the power of the farmer predominates. His influence for good or bad will mark the state for a thousand years. That it will be exercised for the best, I cannot doubt. Our farmers exceed 100,000 in numbers—more than one-third of the voting population of the state. By co-operative action your power is almost complete. You can control and regulate public affairs as you will. I believe you desire honesty in public station and economy in the administration of the burdens of taxation and that the poor man be at all times accorded the same opportunities to fill positions of trust and responsibility as the rich. In this all good citizens everywhere will agree with you. There should be no aristocracy in public office, and certainly no discrimination against the poor man. Merit alone must be the test of fitness if we would build up a stong government for a strong and self-reliant people. Any other proposition is degrading and demoralizing. A republican form of government is better than all others when pure and upright; but when thoroughly corrupt it becomes the worst. God grant that here in the North Star state we may never have reason to regret the liberties handed down to us through brave and heroic sacrifices of the fathers of the republic. It is the duty of every voter to take an interest and a hand in public matters. This duty is imposed by our form of government. You are the rulers. Those who fill the offices are but your servants. Put none but true men on duty—honest fearless, upright men whom you can trust. If you neglect to exercise your duty in the nomination and election of public officers, you have no right to complain if things go wrong. I, for one, do not feel frightened when I see farmers taking a hand in public affairs—it is an omen for good. When they stay at home and sulk, and refuse to perform their duties as electors, then there is cause of apprehension. You are masters of the situation. Combined and working in harmony you can control the destinies of the state. Let this great power be used in the name of justice and wisdom. "Oh, it is excellent to have a giant's strength, but tyrannous to use it like a giant."

Shipping Facilities Refused Farmers.

Editor of the Daily News.

McIntosh, Minn., Oct. 11.—The Pioneer Press of Sept. 30 published a Duluth special, headed: "Cars Not Refused." The article is very misleading, and that part of it referring to the refusal to furnish cars at McIntosh is an infernal lie. The agent at McIntosh positively refused to furnish cars for wheat to be consigned to Duluth up to Sept. 30, and he also refused to accept wheat consigned to Minneapolis commission firms. Kicking at this end was useless. The agent knew it all, and swore by all that was good that he was simply following his instructions, and until the matter was brought to the attention of the commission men it was impossible to get satisfaction.

It is impossible for many of the farmers tributary to this station to comply with the twenty-four-hour rule, or even to load a car between trains, which run only three times a week on this line, so they organized a stock company with a capital stock of 10,000 for the purpose of building a farmers' elevator. An application for a site was made to the Great Northern, and a very favorable reply was received, but the further action was postponed and delayed until it was thought that the matter would be quietly dropped on account of the lateness of the season, when, upon being pressed for an answer, one way or the other, they positively refused to grant us a site upon their right of way. The farmers are thoroughly organized here and they understand full well why the Merriam delegates to the Republican State Convention received free passes "and expenses" and a liberal supply of spending money. Nor will they be fooled by the oily promises of the stock agents of the railroad company, who are scouring this section of the country. They know what they want and they will have it, or they will boycott the railroad in every possible manner.

Yours for the right.

C. T. LANMAN.

GENTLMENLY CRITICS.

"A Demogogical Croaker."

Farm Stock and home.

Does farming pay? Yes everybody but the farmer.

Martin County (Minn.)Sent'nel.

The above from the pen of Mr. Owen the Alliance candidate for governor, is a slander upon our state and a libel upon our farmers.

Lanesboro (Minn.) Journal.

Tauer words were never spoken than the above from the Sentinel, and it is to the shame of S. M. Owen that he ever uttered such slandrous and demogogical words as are quoted from his paper, Farm Stock and Home.

If the above gentlemanly commentators will turn to pages 658 to 674 of Part First of the Compendium of the United States Census for 1880, they will find the figures given herewith:

In 1850 the value of farms was	$3,273,575,426
Of implements and machinery	$151,587,638
Of live stock	$544,180,516
In 1860 farm values were	$6,645,045,007
Increase 101 per cent
Implements values	$246,118,148
Increase 61 per cent
Live stock values	$1,089,329,915
Increase 95 per cent
In 1870 farm value were	$9,262,803,861
Increase 49 per dent
Implements values	$336,878,429
Increase 27 per cent
Live stock values	$1,525,275,457
Increase 30 per cent
In 1880 farm values were	$10,197,096,776
Increase 9 per cent
Implement values	$406,520,055
Increase 15 per cent
Live stock	$1,500,464,609

a decrease of nearly $25,000,000 though the population grew in that decade 27 per cent.

It is believed that the census of 1890 will show a decline in farm value of from 10 to 15 per cent; from data already received it is safe to assume that the decrease will be even grater than those estimates.

While farm values have been so slowly growing, wealth in all other departments of business has increased with almost fabulous rapidity. In 1860 our national wealth was estimated $16,000,000,000; in 1890 at $65,000,000,000. In 1860 the agricultural wealth of the country was $8,080,593,063, or half of the entire wealth of the nation. In 1890 agricultural wealth is surely not over $13,000,000,000,—probably less than in 1880,—or one fifth of the entire wealth of the nation!

In the meantime the ratio of agricultural population to the whole is substantially unchanged. There are relatively as many farms and farmers as ever, but their share of national wealth has shrunk from five-tenths to two-tenths of the whole. It is undeniable that our vast national wealth—that proportion of it which is real—was largely created by farmers; some of it, of course comes from mines, but mines would be but sparingly worked were it not for farmers. Does it not appear that Farm Stock and Home was justified for that two-line item which is so viciously criticised? This journal rarely makes a statement, no matter how brief, that is not justified by the facts, and the one quoted at the head of this article is no exception to the rule.

The "libel" and the "slanderous" matter in the quotation exists only in the feeble brain and narrow minds of its critics. They can scarcely comprehend anything beyond their own counties, and to think there is any world outside of Minnesota would make them dizzy. Farm, Stock and Home, on the other hand, writes for and of the entire Union; when it speaks of conditions it has the whole country in mind, and in estimating effects it considers long periods of time, not single seasons. If our critics are fair they will look up the figures herewith cited and give them to their readers, as a matter of news if for no other reason.

A Railroad Governor.

St. Paul News.

The Merriam organs are wonderfully exercised over Judge Wilson having been employed as attorney for railroads.

What do they think about being employed "as Governor" for railroads?

That is exactly what Gov. Merriam is.

The railroads have used him thus far to carry out their wishes, and the little show he has made in behalf of the people has been merely to throw dust in their eyes, but has accomplished nothing.

This is proven by the fact that Gov. Merriam is the railroad candidate to-day.

When the President of the Northern Pacific visits St. Paul he is the guest of the Governor at his residence, and last spring Mr. Merriam accompanied the President of the road in his private car to the Pacific coast, making investments which rely upon the railroad for their profit.

A professional attorney can be employed by a railroad company entirely legitimately.

It is business to accept cases for and against individuals or corporations, but a public officer acting in the interest and practically as the attorney of a railroad corporation is another matter. The people, however, can avoid taking either horn of the dilemma by voting for Owen.

CALL AND SEE US.

A Thanksgiving Feast is offered in Peterson for November. It is especially rich in illustrations, beginning with two beautiful pictures, "A Reverie" and "Thanksgiving Moning." The opening article, A Medieval City," is as interesting as a romance, and capitally illustrated. Mrs. Rebecca Harding Davis contributes one of her best stories, Minnie Irving a charming poem accompanied by a pretty landscape. "House-Plants" will be welcome to all flower-cultivators. "His Thanksgiving." by Robert B. Graham, is worthy of its effective illustration. Knick knacks and Necessaries" tells what a woman's ingenuity devised, and appropriate designs show the success of her efforts. We cannot particularize further, though every tile, sketch and poem deserves mention. The Fashion and Household departments teem with novelties and information. Next year, Peterson, will reach its fiftieth anniversary of successful publication. It has stood at the head of ladies' periodicals during all those years, and for the coming year the publishers announce a large increase of pages, more abundant illustrations finer paper, and other improvements that will add greatly to its attractiveness and strengthen its claim as a model magazine for the familyl.

Now is a good time to get up a club for 1891. Terms: Two Dollars a year. Club rates: Two copies for $3,50; three copies for $4.50, with a handsome premium to the getter-up of the cloub; four copies, $4,40: six copies, $9.00, with an extra copy of the magazine for one year to the getter up of the club. For larger clubs, still greater inducements are offered, Address Peterson's Magazine, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia Pa. A sample-copy will be sent for five cents.

Campaign Thoughts.

Jackson Republic

Gov. Merriam's likeness is appearing in about all the papers that are supporting him. Wonder if they think his manly beauty is the best thing to catch votes.

"The Alliance game is up." Is a flowing headline in the Pioneer Press. The Pioneer Press will discover that it is the gamest game that it ever bucked, before Nov. 4.

It is reported that several conferences have taken place, with a view to withdraw Merriam and indorse Owen, to save the State from going Democratic. It is not necessary, gents; the State will elect Owen by a good-sized majority.

Faribault paper say that Merriam will not get votes enough in the country to even allow him a place in the scattering columns.

ATTEMPTED ROBBERY.

Two Young Toughs Enter Nelson & Opheim's Drug Store Bent on Burglary and Andrew Opheim had a Close Shave.

Fertile Journal.

Last night just after 10 o'clock two young fellows entered Nelson & Opheim's drug store, one of them pulling a formidable looking revolver with the command to Mr. Opheim to "Throw up your hands." Instead of obeying Mr. Opheim backed towards an adjoining room. Just as he had got through the door and seized a glass vial to defend himself the young despera'o fired, the bullet barely missing Mr. Opheim. Before he could fire again Mr. Opheim smashed a bottle in his face and then got out of the back door double quick and called for help. Before any one arrived at the store the two toughs had gone. They were seen running across the railroad track towards the Thorpe elevator, after which they were lost to view. A search was made but they were not discovered. This morning the towns north and south were wired, but as yet without result. The boys were seemingly about 16 and 18 years old rspectively, and had been hanging around town in company with two others since Monday afternoon. Nothing was taken from the store and Mr. Opheim fortunately escaped without injury, though it was a narrow escape.

Why not try it once! Elect a governor whom the people have selected, S. M. Owen?

Ignatius Donnelly will take the stump for the alliance ticket. We told you he would. Now let monopoly howl.

Hasn't a democratic alliance man as much interest in a free and open wheat market as any other man? And how will they get that if railroad attorney Wilson is elected?

Never mind what politicians and stump speakers may say, you have a sacred duty you owe yourselves and your families, and that is to elect your own governor and legislature.

The election of Owen means an attempt to correct the evils that exist in our market. The election of Merriam means that the market system is all right as it exists.

Don't think more of party than anything else, said Wilson the other evening. All right, Thomas, we won't. We will go right ahead and elect Owen, the independent candidate for Governor.

The fact that the farmers must do it if anything ever is done for them, ought by this time to be emphatically impressed upon the minds of all. And there is no time like the present to do it.

When other business interests are suffering for lack of legislation they do not send a farmer to correct the evil. Why should not the farmers adopt the same system and send only farmers to attend to their business for them? They should, and we believe that they will.

Farmers should give as much time as possible to the alliance work up to and on election day. You now have a chance to make your power felt as never before and you will miss it if you neglect this golden opportunity. Assert your rights and then you will get them.

A. R. Holston is just the man for county attorney. He is a bright young man and will do credit to the office. See that the name of A. R. Holston is on your ballot.

The politicians are scared to death for fear the people will elect Owen, all the while they appear to be serene, and they say: "Of course, the farmers could elect their candidate if they will stick together, but then, of course, they will not do that, don-cher-know. But wont they? We believe they will.

Oh, yes, you had better vote to perpetuate the enormous tax on the old cow! Why had you better do so? Oh, because some politician may ask you to do so, and not because it will be of any benefit to you. That's good logic, ain't it? Well, it is the only reason under the canopy why you should not elect Owen.

You have been talking all summer about voting the independent ticket, and now what are you going to do? Are you going to vote for Owen and your legislative ticket or are you going to snuggle up to your old party ticket like a sick kitten to a hot brick? Politicians all say that you are going to snuggle up! We guess not. You have too much independence.

Under the present market system the farmer is bound to lose every time. The quickest and surest way to effect a cure is to elect S. M. Owen and a farmer legislature to back him. If every farmer will now take hold in earnest, this can be done. And they are doing it. Remember last fall and vote as you have talked. Send your own men to correct the pernicious system.

How do you expect that a governor who makes his money out of railroads and elevator stocks will bother himsel to squeeze the watered stock out of railroads and elevators? S. M. Owen is a poor man—like the average farmer of to-day, and has no railroad or elevator stock, and if elected will not scruple to squeeze to the best of his ability. Try him once.

Farmers, when you cast your ballots next month, remember last fall and cast your ballot for a free and open wheat market. Your candidates for the legislature and S. M. Owen are pledged to aid you in the good work—others are not. Be independent and vote for yourselves once in your life and see how it would seem. If you elect your own men you will accomplish your purpose, if you do not you will not. That's the difference.

Reports from all over the county show that the alliance ticket will get an immense vote. Every farmer is interested in a free and open wheat market, and this fall, by voting for S. M. Owen and the farmer legislature, he will be enabled to vote for it. Every farmer in Polk County should vote for his own interests once, and his interests clearly lie in the election of S. M. Owen.

Merriam party leaders are flattering themselves that the voters will rally round the old machine like sheep on election day. There is no reason why they should do so and there is every reason why they should not. "You can fool all of the people part of the time and part of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time," said Gen. Clapp when Merriam was nominated.

Just now the Merriam crowd is trying to create the impression that the alliance has sold out to the democrats," and they are making the air blue with their howls. There is no truth in the statement and it is only made in hopes to scare somebody into voting for Merriam. Neither Merriam nor Wilson will do anything for farmers if elected, and the farmers well know this fact. They will vote for a man who will help them—S. M. Owen.

Farmers, you have got a good legislative ticket, every man on it a good, honest, practical business farmer, and now it is your duty to elect it. The only thing the opposition has to say against them is that they have no money to run a campaign. Oh, no! they have been trying to raise wheat for rich men to gobble all the profits on too long, but they are a level headed lot just the same.

It is true that the farmers lack for money to pay for big speeches and to get up a big hurrah, but they always will be too poor for these things and everything else until they learn to do as other business men do—attend to their own business. It is your business to elect your governor and your own legislature now that you have nominated them. Will you be united on this question? We believe you will.

We have heard that Gov. Merriam has been accused of being the farmers' friend, because a binding twine factory is to be established at Stillwater. But how is that, anyhow? Did not the committee appointed by Merriam two years ago come back and report that it would cost a million or so, and was therefore impracticable? Did not the alliance revive the scheme last spring, and was it not on their demand that another committee investigated and reported that the cost would be merely nominal, and was not that the reason that Minnesota will have a twine factory? Give the Devil his due and don't accuse our good "business Governor" of something that he is entirely innocent of.

The Journal urges the voters to select only such men for county offices as are competent, honest and trustworthy, regardless of the party that represented them. Not one of them has the power to affect the price of wheat a cent's worth, but when you come to the gubernatorial and legislative ticket, that's different. Elect S. M. Owen with a solid farmer legislature to back him, and that's different. Then you will accomplish something that will affect the price of your wheat if it can be done by legislation—

AND IT CAN BE.

Remember that Owen and a farmer legislature will be elected

ON THAT ISSUE,

pledged to enact laws in behalf of the farmers and the laboring classes, and and no other candidates before the people stand upon this platform. Farmers be TRUE to your own interests by casting one ballot for yourselves.

The two great parties are now mendicants before the people for votes. With hat in hand they are in the field begging the suffrage of the dear people. And this is the people's opportunity—the time to correct the evils that do exist in our markets. This is a very important matter to farmers who are in great need of legislation to help them in their business. The warehouse bill will fully correct existing evils. Are these mendicants for votes willing to pledge us this? Are they willing to pledge us money loaned direct to the people, instead of through the round-about methods now in vogue? Will they pledge us government control of railroads? Will they pledge us equality in taxation? Certainly they should be willing to for us in return for our votes. What will they do?

Those Minneapolis wheat gamblers are getting terribly uneasy for fear the farmers will take the bits in their teeth for once and run away and smash their beautiful wheat system. So they are sending out their oily speakers to urge people to vote for Merriam. And why do they incur all this expense? Because the present system of handling wheat is a gold mine to them and, very naturally, they do not want to give it up. They know that if Merriam is elected the system will still continue, so it is worth while to put money into his election.

And now they say that S. M. Owen is no good for Governor, "because he is a poor man!" Not rich enough to furnish the money necessary to run the campaign. But they know that if he is elected governor he will endeavor to save to the farmer that stealage now going on in the wheat markets, and that is enough to enable the farmers to run their own campaigns. It would be a grand good thing for Minnesota to elect a poor man once, a man in sympathy with poor people. That man is S. M. Owen and he will be the next Governor of Minnesota.

The Merriam State Central Committee has received another scare and issued another address to the people, begging them to stand by candidate Merriam, but they fail to show how he will stand by the farmers. The people have once asked of Merriam a free and open wheat market and did not get it, and now with sublime cheek his backers beg them to stand by Merriam. Go to, rave and howl, but the people are in dead earnest in their efforts to obtain a competitive market, and they know that the Merriam government will not give them this. They know that the only chance they have to get it is through the election of Owen, and they are bound to try that method,

Organize Alliance Clubs.

Organize an alliance club in every village in the county, and in every township except those where every man, or almost every man, belongs to the farmers' alliance, as you will get men in who would not otherwise be with you. For a constitution for an alliance club, and how to organize, address D. E. Hatlestad, Atty. at Law, Crookston, Minn. Clubs of this kind have already been organized in Crookston and Red Lake Falls. Organize well; get every man in the town to join you. We want to see an alliance club in every town in the county before October 10th. Don't wait for some one else to take hold of this matter, but do it yourselves. Go at it now, every man who wants Owen elected.

Attention, Alliance Officers.

Some of the secretaries fail to do their duty by neglecting to report the names of members, the number, etc., to the County Secretary, Nels Muus, of Fertile, Minn. Those who have not done so, do so at once. Don't delay this matter any longer; the officers should do their duty and do it at once. Let every alliance hold weekly meetings from now until the election, and let every voter attend these meetings, as the time is short before election. Hold your meetings often from now on. It would be best where there are many farmers or workingmen in a town who are not members of the alliance to organize an alliance club, as many will join an alliance club who would not, or who cannot join the farmers' alliance.

NELS MUUS.
Sec. County Alliance.

The Alliance Party.

Many look upon this party as a class party. It is often associated with the Farmer's Alliance, whose membership is made up exclusively of farmers. This is a mistake. The word Alliance as the name of the new political party is without qualification. It characterises the party as the alliance of all the good and reform elements of society. Hence no one need feel out of place in this party because he does not happen to be a farmer. The principles of the party, stand above the occupation of its members, Hence all men who love justice and hate iniquity, in high places as well as in low, properly belong to this party.

OVER THREE MILLIONS.

Last winter, with the best information to be had, THE JOURNAL estimated the amount of wheat raised in Polk County, at 2,000,000 bushels. This week deputy auditor Cornelius informs us that by statistics now in his possession it is shown that the county produced over 3,000,000 bushels. On a basis of 2,000,000 bushels one cent per bushel means a loss or gain of $20,000 to Polk County, and on 3,000,000, $30,000. Now we are confident that the farmers, through watered stock, freight rates and frauds in the wheat market were defrauded out of at least 10 cents per bushel, which on 3,000,000 bushels means dollars withdrawn from the legitimate channels of trade in the county. Is not his a matter in which the business man of Polk County is mutually interested with the farmer? Is it not high time that steps were taken to prevent this immense drain upon our resources, or shall we continue to sleep upon this volcano until it swamps the whole fabric of our prosperity? Now, if some well-informed person will tell us what steps our "business" Governor and our "business" Board of Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners ever has or ever would take (were they continued in power) to stop this leak, we should be happy to hear from him. Don't be backward, but just speak right out in meeting and let us know about it. The only way we can see is by electing Owen for governor and a farmer legislature to back him, and then we believe it can be done. One thing is very certain, S. M. Owen would never make those appointments to further his own political ambitions.

Those party fiends are sneering at the farmer who contributes his little dollar toward the campaign of freedom from monopolies and tell him that "his tariff on tin won't amount to as much in three years!" Yes, but if he don't change the present deal at once the TAX upon his poor old cow will put him in a position in which he will NEED no tin in less than three years.

The Mankato Free Press, a red hot Merriam organ, speaks of

in favor of Owen, the alliance candidate for Governor," in the Second District. That's the way it looks up here, and if the situation is anything near like that elsewhere what is to hinder Owen's election? The people are tired of promises unfulfilled and want a change. They want Owen for governor and he will be elected.

THE JOURNAL believes in being consistent, and urges the farmers to vote only for the best men—men who will do your business correctly. It is not necessary to bite off your own nose to spite your face, by electing men to office who are utterly incompetent to attend to the business of the office to which they aspire. In county matters you should bear this in mind and elect only such men as are able to do your business right. In this way only you accomplish the full relief you seek.

A Cold Blooded Steal!

The Moorhead News, a paper that advocates the election of W. R. Merriam and the perpetuation of the same steal that it complains of, says:

"There is no doubt, as it is admitted on all hands, that the elevators are determined to buy as much wheat as possible at grades at least one point below its actual worth. The elevator agents undoubtedly have strict orders to give no higher grades than No. 2 Northern for any wheat that is offered, if by any means it can be had at that grade. The result is that the great bulk of wheat now going into the elevators is bought for No. 2 Northern, while it is actually good enough to grade No. 1 Northern, and much of it would grade No. 1 Hard if cleaned, or upon a liberal dockage allowance. This is a loss of 5 cents per bushel to the farmer, or $5 in every 100 bushels, and $50 in every 1,000. It is not the fault of the local buyers in the elevators, but of the owners in Minneapolis or wherever their headquarters may be. There appears to be no help for it, and the grower is again at the mercy of the capitalist. Shipment to Duluth or Minneapolis does no good, as the state inspectors appear to be under the influence and control of the same power. It is a deliberate and cold-blooded steal."

The Hawley correspondent of the News adds the following:

"Never in the history of the wheat market in this part of the country has there been such injustice in the grading of wheat. Wheat, which in other seasons would grade No. 1 Hard, is now rated at No. 2 and 3 Northern and the company is now continually harping at our agents for giving too high grades. The fault seems to be in the inspection at Duluth and Minneapolis, although it may be a trumped up case with the big Eastern wheat moguls which own and operate our elevators. Our agents, Mr. Glasgow and Bennett have been doing the best that they can, but the company is now complaining that they are giving too high a grade. I think the fault comes from our state inspectors of wheat, who are in with these wheat sharks, no doubt. Tell Gov. Merriam to fire the gang."

Yes, "tell Merriam to fire the gang" indeed. Did not the farmers in the start beg and entreat of Governor Merriam to appoint a Board in their interests? And did he not appoint a Board in the interest of railroads and elevators? A Board that did not have sand enough to insist on its rights to appoint the employes under it in the interest of the people? A good deal of good it will do to "tell Merriam" something that he knows better than the farmers. He would be liable to "fire" all that political strength, wouldn't he now?

The Beauties of the System.

In conversation with a Crookston business man one evening this week, he said: "I know the system of marketing wheat is an outrage on a free people, but I am not quite clear as to the best way to manage it. One day last fall I happened, on one of my business trips, to call on a personal friend of mine who was an elevator man, and shortly a poor Norwegian man drove up with a load of wheat. My friend examined the wheat and offered No. 3 Northern, three pounds off for dirt. The man said 'I will go to the other house and if I cannot do better I will let you have it.' I followed the man to the other elevator where he was offered No. 3 Northern, four pounds off. The man took his wheat back to the first elevator and sold it. After it had been dumped in the hopper, settled for and the man had gone, I said to my friend: 'How much did you make on that load?' 'What do you mean?' said he. 'I mean what I said, what did you make on that load more than a legitimate profit?' 'Oh, indeed,' said he, 'I didn't make anything on that wheat.' 'I'll bet you a four dollar hat,' said I, 'that you made over six dollars; that wheat will test 1 Hard all right enough!' 'Ill take you,' said he, so we took a half bushel, cleaned it perfectly and took out one-half pound of dirt, then upon weighing it it weighed 59½ pounds to the bushel. 'Gosh,' said the elevator man, 'the hat is yours, I am over $8 ahead of the farmer on that deal!' [Only a LITTLE discrepancy, but that much bread stolen out of the mouths of the poor farmer and his family.—Ed.] Again, I know of one man who last fall stored his wheat in a certain elevator, receiving No. 8 tickets therefor, This spring he demanded his wheat, but this elevator man was quite fresh, and said: 'Indeed, I cannot let you have it, as I shipped it out last fall, and shipped it out last fall, so of course I can't get it for you.' It is needless to say that that wheat was settled for on a basis of No. 1 Northern and no questions asked." And all this and hundreds of other cases occur under Merriam's inspectors, yet the elevator men have the cheek to ask these poor, wronged, deluded farmers to vote for Merriam. To vote to continue this same system! And they ask you to vote for Wilson who will do nothing to change the deal! The farmers ARE NOT all fools and THEY KNOW that with Owen for Governor this magnificent system will be changed, or at least a mighty effort will be made. Farmers, when you vote and cast your vote in your own interest once. Vote for S. M. Owen and the farmers legislature.

I PUT IT IN A NO. 1 NORTHERN BIN

REMEMBER LAST FALL,

Of Course Not.

Of course this hiring of delegates to attend the county conventions, paying them day wages, board and traveling expenses, don't mean anything! Of course sending delegates to the State conventions on free railroad passes, boarding them at high-priced hotels and paying their little incidental expenses don't mean anything! Of course such things are all done in the interest of a good government for the people, aren't they? Of course those who pay all these expenses are afraid to trust such matters as nominating candidates in the hands of common, ordinary farmers, for fear that they might not nominate those who would try to obtain a free and open wheat market, aren't they? Or is it all done to carry out some selfish schemes that are against the interests of the people as a whole? Well it is a fact that Owen delegates got none of these soft snaps but paid their own expenses like men.

The Moorhead News, while admitting the outrageous steals in the market system under the Merriam government, still has the sublime cheek to ask the suffering farmers to vote to perpetuate the steals. The farmers once stood by Mr. Merriam nobly and elected him against all the influence of the big cities to the contrary, and how did Mr. Merriam reward the farmers? Did he not, as soon as he came into power make the important appointments on and under the Board of railroad and warehouse commissioners, solely with a view to build himself up politically and with no reference to the benefit of the farmers whatever? Was not this important service placed in the hands of the railway magnates and the elevator sharks? How could any sensible man expect relief from such methods? The farmers have tried Bill Merriam in the balance and found him wanting, and now they are determined to try somebody else. They hope and trust it will be Governor Owen, and we believe it will. But it will be a change and don't you forget it.

The Mankato Free Press belittles the cause of the farmers because Bill Erwin says a good word for it. And that seems to be the way they are doing in other quarters. They single out Bill Erwin, Gen. Baker or Donnelly, call them rogues or rascals or demagogues, and then they argue because such men are trying to help the farmers obtain their rights in the markets that the farmers should not vote for a free and open wheat market. It makes no difference to the farmers what kind of people support their cause, what they are after is justice in the markets and they will not be misled by abuse of those who are trying to help them get it, whether he be black or white, rogues or honest men. Now the Free Press and such papers don't care a continental whether Bill Erwin is a rogue or an honest man. All it wants is to try and defeat the farmers cause by throwing mud upon its supporters. Look out for these things, farmers, and vote for your own benefit once in your lives.

Col. Plummer, the silver tongued orator of Dakota, was down at Mankato on Thursday evening, Oct. 2d, to speak for the Merriam party. The Col. roundly abused the alliance workers—called them a pack of demagogues and said that farmers ought to vote for Bill Merriam for that reason, but he did not say what GOOD that would do farmers. He failed to show what Merriam has done to correct the evils that exist in the wheat market for the very good reason that he could not. He failed to show wherein Merriam represents true republican principles even, but the sum and substance of it all was that republicans should vote for Merriam because he has been sharp enough to capture the nomination. He did not say who paid for the free fares for the delegates to the Merriam convention nor who footed the hotel bills and incidentals, nor who paid for the liquor that ran like water on the evening of the nomination at the Merchant's hotel, all of which the people have a right to know about, and would no doubt have proved interesting information. The people know that if Owen is elected there will be an effort made to correct the evils of our market and this is what they are after regardless of the political ambition of any man or any set of men.

Last year Polk County raised over 3,000,000 bushels of wheat. The farmers were swindled out of from 5 to 20 cents per bushel, which means an aggregate loss of an immense sum to the county. On all wheat bought as rejected that graded No. 3 in Duluth or Minneapolis, there was a clean steal of 19 cents over all expenses, as that was the difference between No. 3 and rejected in this market. Figure up all that whe t taken from you at two or three grades less than it was worth and then you will begin to have some idea of the extent of the swindle. Do you want that state of things to continue? Well, you have got a repetition of the same deal in the markets to-day, and you will continue to have until you elect your own governor and legislature. Farmers, on November 4th next is your opportunity. Remember your wrongs and vote for Owen and your own legislative ticket.

Fairmont News; Is it funny though? Only a short time ago the Merriam ring organs were howling themselves hoarse that the Alliance and Labor party had no strength and now they are shouting themselves black in the face that W. W. Erwin is after C. K. Davis' seat in the United States Senate, and warning voters not to believe him on that account. Just how anybody can be in danger if the movement has no strength passes our comprehension, and for Merriam to use Davis' name to conjure with is little short of the ridiculous, especially as every body knows Merriam is after that seat, but all good government demands that C. K. Davis succeed himself for lo! these many years.

Grand Forks Herald: The newspaper that does its duty in protecting public interest, says the Oregon Scout, is sure to make enemies. But what of that? Enemies rather help a newspaper than otherwise, especially when their hostility is generally known to arise from an independent and public spirited course on the part of the journal that incurs their displeasure. The paper that stands by the public is on solid ground, and the people will heartily support it in the advocacy of their rights. In every small town or city there are people who think themselves entitled to control everything, and that opposition to any of their proceedings is an offense equal to personal grievance or affront. They want to boss the community, newspapers included. They lack apprehension or understanding of the true function of a newspaper in relation to public interest, and if they could have their way the local press would be simply the organ of their own private interests and aims.

A Close Race

Minneapolis Herald: The gubernatorial race will be a close one. Mr. Owen is developing unexpected strength among independent voters. To what extent the defection of these voters from the two old parties will affect either, is problematical, but the indications are that Mr. Merrim will be the loser.

Sauk Rapid Sentinel: Last winter as the Farmers' Alliance and labor unions began to show increased vigor, Gov. Merriam knocked over his tariff platform of the previous year, and constructed a new one designed to be so near "free trade" as to suit the demands of the alliance before whom he changed his colors. The republican congressional conventions held this year have to a greater or less extent indorsed the high tariff McKinley bill. Who will state whether we have any party policy on the tariff question, and if so, what it is? And if we have no fixed tariff policy, will some one who is authority please to state what party issues there are to contend about except the postoffices, land offices, etc.?

Winona Herald: The Merriam managers are now comprehensive of the blunder they made in taking Rabilly off the alliance ticket. They have made numerous other blunders for which they are to atone. Joel said that this was not to be a "boodle" campaign. It is doubtful if Joel or any of his constituents could really tell what kind of a campaign it is.

Albert Lea Standard: There are four state tickets: Republican, Democratic, Prohibition and Farmers' Alliance, headed by W. R. Merriam, the banker, Thos. Wilson, the lawyer, Jas. A. Pinkham, the preacher, and S. M. Owen, the editor. The latter is the only old soldier of the four, and he is said to be the most modest. That he is making a contest solely for principle, is generally and very justly admitted.

LeSueur Sentinel: W. W. Erwin, of St. Paul, who has become famous as an alliance speaker as well as a criminal lawyer, has made a calculation on the political outlook, in which he brings S. M. Owen, the alliance candidate for governor, out ahead. He shows that the vote of the counties in which there are cities of 5,000 or over in 1888 gave Merriam but about 80 majority, and he figures that Owen, in addition to the labor vote of those counties, will receive a majority of the votes in the other strictly agricultural counties. Politics are greatly mixed this year, and it may be that Erwin is not far wrong.

Verndale Journal: There is one characteristic of Gov. Merriam's which is not very consoling to the friends who have been true to him in all times and who have aided him in his political aspirations; he seems to be more thoughtful of placating his enemies than of serving those who are friendly to him. And if his majority is cut down in November it will be largely due to this fact. Nothing benefits a man more in the long run than loyality to his friends, and this is eminently true in politics. And he who most valiantly fights his enemies is certain of victory and the respect of all.

Duluth Times: The re-election of Gov. Merriam will hurt the republican party far worse than a straight defeat for it this fall. Merriamism is a menance to the republican party. It means the concentration of party machinery and party power in a few men at St. Paul—men who will run it for a personal advantage, men who will establish machinism in Minnesota politics and ultimately bring destruction upon the party. What Matt Quayism is to Pennsylvania, Merriamism will be, when developed to its full, to Minnesota.

Glencoe Register: We had thought all along that Merriam had a fighting chance, that in all likelihood he would be our next Governor, and here comes "Bill" Erwin and says it cannot be Owen to his little figures. Well, they say that figures won't lie, and W. R. must give up his ambition of being the next governor of Minnesota with as much fortitude as he can command, and he must charge it up to "Bill" Erwin and his little figures.

Fergus Falls Journal: Mr. Owen does not seem to have a very good impression of Judge Wilson as the farmer's friend, for in his speech he said: "Judge Wilson, the democratic candicate, says it is useless and pure demagoguery to rail at the railroad. Now I have a high respect for Judge Wilson and his personality; and he is all right in saying this; it is simply the opinion of a paid attorney for the corporation who employs him. He would be foolish not to say it."

A correspondent of the St Paul daily News, writing from Herman, says: "A large and enthusiastic audience greeted S. M. Owen, alliance candidate for governor. Farmers were present from Stevens and Traverse counties, while the various towns adjoining Herman turned out almost enmasse. Mr. Owen's speech was a triumph in every respect. For argument, satire, true wit and general information it was universally admitted to be the best political speech ever delivered in Herman. Our people here are practically solid for Owen. The hat was passed around and $25 collected for the campaign fund."

This is the year of independence. "The enemy," the farmers, are up in arms and bound to vote for their own interests for once in their lives, if they never did before. Let monopolists and their defenders beware of "the enemy."

Duluth Times.

The Alliance campaign is a hot one, and all over the State meetings are being held, and enthusiastic ones, too. It is no breach of confidence to say that William Merriam is to-day trembling in his boots. The Alliance vote in this State will surprise the nation.

Press News.

The Farmers' candidate for Governor, S. M. Owen, is gaining ground. All indications point to a tidal wave in his favor.

Montevideo Commercial.

Owen will crowd his opponents close onto the pole in the Gubernatorial race. His chances are good for passing under the wire first and holding down the coveted seat in the Capitol for two years. We believe S. M. Owen is the peer of any man in the race.

St. Cloud Times.

The fact is that Gov. Merriam's election is desired by every railroad operating in Minnesota! This is well known to all who are familiar with the inside facts of the campaign. They are for Merriam because he comes of a "railroad family," was born and bred with railroad instincts, and also because, as Governor, he has been satisfactory to them.

Alexandria Post.

There is hope of his election if the Alliance stick as the organization should, as he will get many votes from the villages and the solid labor vote which is largely Democratic. If he is elected the State will have for the first time in years a man in the Governor's chair who combines a knowledge of politics, integrity, ability to address an audience in an effective way and more, yes more than average mental ability. There is no reason why any man cannot vote for S. M. Owen.

Duluth Times.

The Twin City Merriam papers, or some of them, have discovered the existence of the Railway Employes' Club as a political faction, a discovery made by the Times two months ago. The Pioneer Press gravely announces that the club will decide later which Gubernatorial candidate it will support—that it will be Merriam or Wilson, as Owen, on account of the professed hostility of the Alliance party to railroads, is out of the question. There is no question as to which of the two candidates the club will support. Indeed, the decision was made long ago. The members of the club, and especially the officers, have for two months been out working for Merriam. It is his club, This club came into existence two years ago, during the last gubernatorial campaign, and the same men who are now working through it for Merriam did the same thing then. The club has no existence outside of Minnesota. It is prima facia a Minnesota political club.

The News Reporter Three Rivers Mich.

Farmers and other working men who are not slaves to any political party, will do well to give attention to and study Senator Stanford's bill, which provides for loans at one-half cash value on real estate bearing; 2 per cent, interest. Such a loan will establish low rates of interest, make a revenue to the government of $840,000,000 annually, a sum greater than is now raised by the tariff and the internal revenue put together. Hence, there will be no taxation necessary in any form to support the federal government. There will be no longer a necessity or even an excuse for indirect taxation in the form of a tariff of any kind. Such loans by the government will make reciprocal free trade with all the nations possible and in every way desirable. It will be God's blessing, provided through human agency for those who are struggling under mortgage indebtedness in various forms amounting to many billion of dollars.

Kansas Commoner.

Farmers! workingmens! citizens! generally! If you will vote the People's ticket entire, overwhelmingly in Kansas this year you will establish a principle that is meant to place you on an equal footing with all other interests of the people of our common country. You will more conspicuously exert your manhood in your own interests than you have ever had a chance to do before. If you do so you will drive Wall street and the Pennsylvania boodlers out of politics and consequently they will not put up the money for a corruption fun when they see the futility of it. Upon the action of the people this fall depends the beginning of grand reform. Let us apply the same to Minnesota.

And now every little off shoot of monopoly, every "Slocum" of the country press" will howl about the State being "in the hands of THE ENEMY," the farmers. What a terrible state of things that will be when the farmer shall have so reconstructed the markets as to allow him his just rights therein!

Merriam's organ, the Pioneer Press, calls farmers "the enemy," while Merriam came up to Polk County and sends out free trains to bring in "the enemy" to listen at his speeches.

The Alliance Not a Myth.

Minneapolis Times.

Judging from the savage attacks on the alliance by the organs and by Col. Joel P. Heatwole, it cannot be such an insignificant movement as it is reported to be. The organs never waste their space on contemptible opposition. If the antagonist does not rise to the dignity of a positive force they are accustomed to sneer at him, it he seems strong enough to draw any considerable body of voters away from the old parties they immediately begin to abuse him like a pickpocket; if he threatens to sweep the machine out of power the organs hasten to get down on their knees and crawl for his favor. In the second predicament the organs find themselves toward S. M. Owen. The Pioneer Press has begun to attack him violently through its news columns, and the evening Tribune has started on its usual career of prairie dog yelping which in the Evening Tribune is generally a sign of exquisite pain. The Times has thought it too early to put men in the field to learn the strength of the industrial movement in the agricultural portions of the state, and does not know yet, of its own observation, what it is, but judging from the hysterical state of the organs it must be considerable. Such disinterested and able sheets as the Fergus Falls Journal are being relied upon to produce evidence that the farmers are all going back to old affiliations on the day before election. The importance of this statement does not lie in the novelty of its conclusion, but in the admission that the farmers at present are not in line with either of the old parties. This is just what the alliance has claimed. Joel Heatwole has run back and forth in a state of patriotic perspiration to make the most, in the organs, of the fact that the alliance has indorsed Bierman, the democratic candidate for auditor.

The bowels of the state committee holds this as proof that the alliance has sold out to the democracy. Wonderful demonstration! The alliance had a chance to swallow the democracy, but Mr. Owen, mindful of his health, refused the dose. But now when one democrat succeeds another on the tail end of the alliance ticket, this wonderful abdominal logician figures out a complete surrender. Heatwole was probably the first man to discover this; being chairman, and the wisest meal sack in Minnesota, he naturally would be, but he is not going to keep it to himself. He is going to issue a confidential circular to farmers, warning them against the dreadful plot. It is all very funny, and the funniest part of it is the horrible scare Mr. Owen, single handed, without a bar'l or a 250 pound chairman, has given the machine.

Empty Appeal.

Minneapolis Times.

The Merriam organs don't like the alliance party. The more they ponder upon the origin and purpose and methods of the farmers' movement the more they are impressed with its strength and importance. They see that it is growing steadily among the class of voters who are not in leading strings to the machine, or have no "axes to grind," and it makes them wild-eyed and dizzy. The following from the Fergus Falls Journal is a fair sample of the sort of argument and appeal they make to the republican voters:

> A well posted man who has just been through Otter Tail County on business—not on politics—says that Mr. Owen will get no democratic votes in this county from democratic alliance men. Mr. Wilson will get the full democratic vote when the time comes. The democrats will keep up the Owen racket until election day, then quietly vote solid for Wilson. Republicans who are in the alliance should not be caught in a trap like this.

It is no doubt true that more republicans will vote the alliance ticket than democrats, and with better reason. The democratic platform represents that party's principles, such as they are. The republican platform was a mere "verbal juggle,"—a paltry trifling with great issues and vital principles. The people asked for bread and the machine gave them a stone. Morover, the democratic platform is more closely in sympathy with that of the alliance on the tariff and other important questions, which the republican convention dodged entirely. As to the candidates, the democratic convention nominated for governor a man stronger with his party and more honestly representative of its principles and spirit than the republican candidate is of his party. For these and other reasons the alliance will draw its chief strength from the republican party. The sterotyped machine appeal to party fealty, has lost its force. Independent republicans face the possibility that their defection from the old party may elect a democratic governor, with complacency. Even that, they insist, is better than the perpetuation of the present corrupt and cold-blooded party despotism. The party will not be severely injured; but, on the contrary, it will be strengthened and bettered by the wholesome discipline of defeat.

This Is Alliance Year.

Minneapol's Times.

There is no doubt of it. The evidences, not of the growing power of the farmers, but of their growing consciousness of power, multiply on every hand. Encouraged by the steps taken by the farmers of Minnesota to vindicate their independence by making independent nominations for state officers, and protesting against the supremacy of corporations and their corrupt tools in the politics of the state, the farmers of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois are beginning to bestir themselves; and threaten unless the right sort of men are put forward for congress to help the farmer by tariff reform, and greater economy in the public expenditures, they will nominate their own candidates and elect them. This threat has greatly rattled the politicians and bosses in those states, to state it mildly. They twist and writhe under it, and there are fewer jocose allusions to "hayseeders." They have conceived a sudden respect for the farmer, and contemptuous remarks about "grangers in politics," are by no means so common as they once were. The change is due to the increased intelligence of the farmer upon question affecting the interests of his class, and his unmistakable determination to insist upon their respectful recognition. The "granger" has been carrying the load a long time. He has been the patient hewer of wood and drawer of water too long. This bound Sampson is now awaking to a sense of his strength. The Times recognizes the signs of a growing consciousness of power among all industrial classes in this country, and rejoices in it. If the farmers and the toiling classes will but use their power wisely they may do much to restore this government to its early simplicity and honesty, and set it in the line of progress toward a noble and benign future. The men who earn their bread in the sweat of their faces are the real sovereigns. It is their own fault if they suffer wrong or oppression. The power is in their own hands. The peaceful but resistless agencies and methods of redress are provided by the constitution.

Norman County Herald: The report circulated in some of the republican newspapers that S. M. Owen intends to withdraw is utterly unfounded. Mr. Owen is a true alliance man, and will stand by his party even at the risk of being defeated at the election. His prospects are as bright now as they ever were, and it would not be miraculous if among all the aspirants he would be the lucky one.

"Rushing into Politics"

Farm, Stock and Home.

Many people, and with the best of intentions, too, are incessantly censuring farmers because they are "rushing into politics," and also censuring agricultural papers that discuss economic and political reforms. Those people do not realize how much the farmer has and does suffer because he did not intelligently "rush into politics" years ago. His political duties began and ended with voting his party ticket, leaving all the rest to be looked after and manipulated by the party mechanics. By this indifference he has allowed to grow up around him abuses of a character so oppressive and tyrannical that had they been sprung upon him at once he would have resisted them to the death if it had been necessary. The farmer is now rapidly becoming familiar with the true situation, hence his "rushing into politics." Instead of censuring the armer, all good citizens should applaud him, for no better evidence could possibly be given of his capability for self government, and in that evidence lies the brightest prospect for the perpetuity of true republicanism, of a truly representative government in this land. If farmers are showing that they are capable of self-government, that they can be more the citizen and less the partisan, that means the ultimate salvation and emancipation of our agricultural interests, with consequent increased prosperity to them, and hence increased prosperity to every other intrest. Not blame but the highest praise should be given to the American farmer for "rushing into politics."

The love of party is great in man, but parties are formed for the benefit of mankind, and when parties fail to accomplish that for which they are formed then will every true patriot arise and vote for his own interest. The old parties have utterly failed to correct the evils under which agriculture labors, so the people have arisen in their might, put a ticket in the field, and they are determined to elect it.

Attention, Alliance Officers.

Some of the secretaries fail to do their duty by neglecting to report the names of members, the number, etc., to the County Secretary, Nels Muus, of Fertile, Minn. Those who have not done so, do so at once. Don't delay this matter any longer; the officers should do their duty and do it at once. Let every alliance hold weekly meetings from now until the election, and let every voter attend these meetings, as the time is short before election. Hold your meetings often from now on. It would be best where there are many farmers or workingmen in a town who are not members of the alliance to organize an alliance club, as many will join an alliance club who would not, or who cannot join the farmers' alliance.

Nels Muus.
Sec. County Alliance.

Organize Alliance Clubs.

Organize an alliance club in every village in the county, and in every town ship except those where every man, or almost every man, belongs to the farmers' alliance, as you will get men in who would not otherwise be with you. For a constitution for an alliance club, and how to organize, address D. E. Hatlestad, Atty. at Law, Crookston, Minn. Clubs of this kind have already been organized in Crookston and Red Lake Falls. Organize well; get every man in the town to join you. We want to see an alliance club in every town in the county before October 10th. Don't wait for some one else to take hold of this matter, but do it yourselves. Go at it now, every man who wants Owen elected.

Taen Up.

Six Pigs. Owner can have them by calling on Chas. P. Bailey, 5th ward, Crookston, Minn.

For Sale.

New milch cow. Call on M. E. Bartlett, Fairfax, or at Journal office.

For Sale.

A fine new milch cow, five years old. Call on O. Snyder, Sec. 8, Crookston, or at Journal office.

Stock Farm for Sale.

Consisting of 600 acres, lying on Maple Lake, in the town of Godfrey, includes the old townsite of Maple Bay 80 acres fenced for pasture; 160 acres under the plow, balance hay land and timber; house, barn, granary and good well; one of the best located farms for stock in the famous Maple Lake region. Also 50 acres heavily wooded timber land within 4 miles. Will sell with all my stock and farm machinery if so desired. For full particulars call on W. N. Godfrey, Maple Bay, or Journal office, Crookston. [7-tf]

The Pioneer Press says "it looks very black in several counties in southeast Minnesota." By this statement it means that the people are determined to vote for themselves once in their lives, at which the monopolistic Pioneer Press frets and fumes like an old hag. But its howls are significant of the coming storm in which the voice of the people will be heard in unmistakable tones demanding justice.

Lovely weather this week.

Dr. Dunlop is so much improved as to be able to ride out.

Go and see Mrs. Abbott at the opera house on Monday evening next.

O. D. Rood, proprietor of the city laundry is very sick with typhoid fever.

Work on the sewer along Main street, from Robert to Fletcher commenced on Monday.

I. U. Jennings went to Thief River Falls, to speak in the alliance couse on Monday.

John Paterson says no candidate is "in it" unles he is branded "Alliance" in big wood type.

Hon. S. M. Owen will address the citizen of Ada and vicinity on Monday evening of next week.

The county board last week appointed R. J. Montague to serve out the term of D. D. Williams, resigned.

The brick work is completed to the new opera block and the carpenters are busy putting on the finishing touches.

Don't forget that S. M. Owen will speak at the Opera House on Monday next at 2 p. m. Everybody should hear him.

Farmers, whatever else you do, don't fail to come out and see and hear your candidate for governor, S. M. Owen, on Monday next.

John Locken, the farmers candidate for Register of Deeds, is fast making friends wherever he goes. He will roll up a big majority vote.

"1890 Opera Block, Bjoin & Austin" is the inscription, on the new three-story, Main Street block. The block will soon be ready for occupancy.

W. E. McKenzie, the Times man, went to St. Paul on Sunday evening. Maybe the Republican Central Committee wanted to know about that $1,000 offer.

If you want value for your money in the boot and shoe line call at Holmboe's. New goods arriving every week. [14-27]

A. R. Holston, alliance candidate for county attorney, was in the city on Monday, leaving for the north part of the county on Tuesday. He is doing good work.

A three months scholarship in Prof. J. B. Lanigan's business college for sale. Call at THE JOURNAL office. [21-tf [

While other candidates have been busy in the field, Mat. Cornelius has been in the office of County Auditor attending to the public business. The people will take care of him at the polls.

This is the time of year when people begin to think about storm doors and windows and their winter supply of fuel; and most people do a heavier banking business about this time. If they don't they miss it.

The Alliance has engaged the G. A. R. hall in McKinnon block for Monday next for a reception for our next governor, S. M. Owen. The hall will be open from 9 a. m. till 1 p. m. Everybody call and meet Mr. Owen.

Best water white kerosene only 15 cents per gallon at A. Holmboe's, Robert street. [14-27]

T. G. Thompson, J. E. Morissey and Theodore Greenhalgh started for Dakota on Saturday after geesse and you should have seen the flocks that flew over Crookston on Sunday. Guess the boys drove every last goose out of Dakota.

Judge Mills, arrived on Monday, to to try the bond case. The case was postponed untel Wednesday. This case involves the legality of the bonds isued by the city of Crookston, in favor of the Crookston & Northen Railroad Company.

Ladies, you will miss it if you purchase your fall millinery before you call and see Mrs. E. E. Bangs' elegant stock and get prices. She can surprise you in both. You are cordially invited to call at her shop on Second Street and inspect her goods.

Ira DeCamp, well-known to Crookston old timers was in the city last week shaking hands with his many friends here. Ira is running the new Columbia hotel at Fargo, and it is needless to add, that the Columbia is the most popular hotel in Fargo.

W. W. Erwin delivered an eloquent address in the Opera House on Friday evening of last week. The house was filled to overflowing by an enthusiastic audience who cheered the speaker to the echo whenever a good point was made, and many were made. It was quite easy to see that a large majority of the audience was fully in sympathy with the speaker, and the good effects of the speech will be seen on election day.

Our thanks are due to those of our friends who have remembered THE JOURNAL by calling with, or sending in their little subscription. Such little remembrances are very acceptable in these days and are duly appreciated. We trust that all who wish to see a free and open wheat market established will help THE JOURNAL in its efforts to obtain that result. It means at least ten cents per bushel more for wheat to every man who raises wheat.

Alliance Men, Attention !

CROOKSTON, Oct. 17, 1890.

GENTLEMEN:—In the coming election, to by held Tuesday, Nov. 4th, 1890, the committee desire that each Alliance man in his respective town will please see that the following matter shall be attended to and that all other details pertaining to the election shall receive prompt thorough and effective work and attention. First—See that your elections are regular as required by law. Second.—See that every alliance man is registered and casts his ballot on election day. Third.— See that no illegal or fraudulent votes are cast. Fourth.—Appoint your committees and be at each polling place in each town at work for the straight alliance ticket. Fifth.—Be sure and vote yourself. Sixth.—Take your team if you can and get out the full alliance vote. Seventh.—Watch out for split and bogus tickets containing the alliance heading but bearing the names of some of the democrat and republican candidates for state, legislative or county offices. Eighth.—See that the votes are correctly counted and returned. Ninth.—Report the result to E. E. Lommen Chairman Co. Com. Crookston. Report as soon as votes are counted. Tenth.—Hold meetings of your alliance at least twice before the election. By hard work the alliance will score a complete victory over both the old party rings. This fight is the fight of the farmer; now let every alliance man who reads this constitute himself a committee of one to see that his town gives a solid alliance vote. Your county committee leaves this with you and expects that you will use all honorable means to carry your town solid for every man on the alliance ticket from governor to coroner.

Yours Respectfully,
ALLIANCE CO. CENT. COM.

BARLEY.

One of the most successful farmers of this state, after many years observation and experience, has discovered that most of the damage to barley from being colored, is caused by binding while damp from dew or rain. Cutting when perfectly dry has been of great benefit to him. I am prepared to buy or ship in car lots, from any station, advancing cash liberally on shipments and furnish sacks free to handle the grain. Bring in your samples.

D. N. TAYLOR,
Crookston.

Proposals for Bids.

Bids will be received by the Recorder of the village of Red Lake Falls, Minn., until Nov. 3d, 1890, at 12 o'clock m., for drilling a flowing well at the southwest corner of Second street and Champagne avenue in said village. The village to furnish tubing. The same to be paid for in village orders on the general fund. The right is hereby reserved to reject any or all bids.

Dated Red Lake Falls, Minn., Oct. 21st, 1890.

[27-28] H. B. DAVIS, Recorder.

Turn out and hear our next governor, S. M. Owen, at the Opera House on Monday next at 2 p. m.

C. A. Severance was up from St. Paul this week. He did not find much consolation from a Merriam stand-point in Polk County.

The opposition is making the biggest fight on those who are doing the best work for the farmers' cause. Stand by your friends and work for them.

K. O. Gigstad was down from St. Hilaire this week. He is of the opinion that the farmers will all vote for their governor, S. M. Owen, and a farmers' legislature.

Iver Krohn intends to visit the old country this coming winter. He will start about the middle of November and may remain away one year. He will take a prominent hand in the election of Owen and a farmers legislature before he goes.

Mat Cornelius, besides being a thorougly educated man is also a farmer and a good one, too. He works his quarter section near the city, and, even under existing circumstances makes it pay. Here is a thoroughbred farmer for you and an A. 1 business man, one, who if elected will be able to do the business properly. He is not and never has been identified with any ring or clique that may have existed nor could he be.

Last week the republicans of McIntosh wanted to get up a big rally, so they advertised that "J. M. Burlingame, alliance candidate for Attorney Gen'l," would speak. This not only shows up some of the despicable means to which politicians resort to carry a point, of which the people of this county complain, but it is an insult to the average intelligence of the farmers. Just as though every farmer in Polk County didn't know who Burlingame is !

John W. Hack Sr. left on Sunday after a pleasant visit of two weeks in our city. He called upon THE JOURNAL one day last week and in conversation about the many improvements going in this summer reminded us of the times in 1878 when he together with Joseph Netzer and John McLean accompanied the writer on his rounds after statistical information as to the improvements for the year. The total footing as published in our issue of June 11th, 1878 numbers $34,000 not one half the money that has been spent in the city in improvements this summer. The addition to the McKinnon block alone will reach more than our total for '78. Mr. Hack is immensely pleased with the start Crookston has taken this summer and predicts that she will become the leading city of Northwestern Minnesota and that too at no very distant day.

A Woman of Mystery.

Mrs. Abbott, the Little Georgia Magnetic Marvel, will appear at the Opera House on Monday evening, Oct. 27th, in modern miracles and new, wonderful and startling tests of her inexplicable phenomenal and mighty force or power. Scientists are baffled and the public astounded. Nothing like it ever seen before, and all alike exclaim: "This is truly something new under the sun." Don't fail to attend and see this, the world's greatest mystery. Prices 35 and 50 cents. Seats can be secured at Tom Morri's jewelry store without extra charge.

The Washington Post of July 25th, 1890, says: "Mrs. Abbott did all that was claimed for her. We can't define her power. Truly it is phenomenal, as there is possitively no sort of physical or muscular force used by her. She is a great wonder.

I. I. Hillestad was down from Fosston on Wednesday looking the situation over.

Mike Leguee is driven with business in the veterinary line now-a-days. Mike cannot be easy while a sick horse remains in the county.

Watch your election precincts. Every kind of dodge known to tricky politicians will probably be tried, but in vain if you are alert to your own interests. Remember, "Eternal vigilance in the prise of liberty," and your liberty in a free and open wheat market depends on the election of S. M. Owen and a farmer legislature. See that no one tampers with your ballots and be sure that all of your friends are at the polls and vote. Look to your own interests.

Farmers, remember that your interests are at stake in this campaign. The ticket that represents your interests you have paid your good hard earned money to place in the field, and if you now neglect to elect your governor and your legislature you lose all you have invested. Not only so, but you still contribute from five to ten cents per bushel to the old system. Five or ten dollars per hundred on your wheat is worth saving. Vote for it on Nov. 4th next.

National Alliance: Mr. Hayseed may be a little thick headed, but after patiently thinking it over, he can't quite see the justice of legislation which permits the government to lend money to the national bank almost free of interest, and in addition to this permits these same banks along with its manufacturers and other capitalists, to fleece him out of the fruits of his toil, and then to add insult to his injury, he is admonished to be more economical if he would prosper.

FOR ALE.

A fine full blood Holstein-Friesian bull, about eight months old. For particulars apply to C. Snyder, Sec. 8, Crookston, or call at JOURNAL office.

Learning from the Hon. Thos. Wilson and other democratic missionaries that the immediate effect of the "McKinley Tariff Bill" will be to largely increase the cost of tin pans, milk pails, shoes, hosiery, and other items entering into the necessities of the dairyman's life, we have decided to advance the price of milk one cent per quart, and on and after the 20th of October we will sell milk in quantities of one quart and upwards for 5 cents per quart, and one pint or under at 3 cents per pint.

CROOKSTON BUSINESS COLLEGE AND INSTITUTE OF SHORTHAND.

TEACHING FOREIGNERS.

A Business College has great advantages over other schools for teaching Germans Scandinavians and other foreigners.

Of course, business is done in this country very differently from the way it is done in the old country, and a young man who has been in America only a few years cannot understand what is needed in business here, unless somebody teaches him. If he goes into a store, no one there has the time to teach him. So the best place to learn how business is done is in a college.

In our school he can learn how to read and write the English language correctly, and prepare himself to conduct his own business affairs successfully.

Our teachers will do all they can to help along those who do not know our language very well, and every student receives personal, and individual instruction.

Our foreign students generally make as good progress as our American students.

There is a great demand in business for young men who can speak the German or Scandinavian languages, so our foreign students have no trouble in getting work when they finish our course of study.

Wherever S. M. Owen goes he makes friends. This is perfectly natural for he is pre-eminently a man of the people.

While S. M. Owen was honorably fighting for his country on southern battle-fields, where was banker Merriam and railroad attorney Wilson? Not on the battle-field by a long chalk.

Arnold R. Holston, alliance candidate for county attorney, was in the city this week on business connected with the alliance work. He is a hustler and if elected the county will be sure of one good worker.

Because W. W. Erwin is telling some solid truths in behalf of the alliance, the cross-roads politician is just now trying to prejudice the farmers against Erwin, hoping thus to make them forget their own wrongs in the market and vote for those who will not try to correct the evils.

Oh yes! Watch my smoke; I am going to give the farmers cheap binding twine, says Billy. So Billy's committee, ignoring American manufacturers of serviceable machines goes to Europe and purchases a machine that the Deerings have tried and found impracticable. He is a healthy old "farmers friend" aint he? That's a "business governor,, for you with a vengance. But the farmers have determined to try Owen and no amount of sophistry will turn them from their purpose.

If Merriam had ever intended that the farmers of Minnesota should ever have cheap binding twine, how is it that his committee has selected a twine machine that has once been proved unfit for working American fibre? Mr. Todd offered to put in an American machine that can work American fibre at about $6,000 less than the European machine costs, and if on trial it was proved incapable of doing the business it should not cost the state a dollar. Does this look like an honest effort to obtain cheap binding twine?

And now the State Chemist condemns our wheat because there are "green kernels in it!" Wonder if he don't know that what few there are will come out of the bin all right in the spring? Anything to down the poor farmers seems to be the popular idea no matter how flimsy. There may be a few green kernels in the wheat, but there are not half so many GREEN VOTERS among the farmers as there once was and the schemers will find that out on Nov. 4th, 1890.

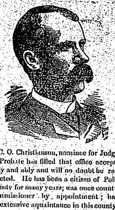
Arny Grundyson, the alliance candidate for sheriff, was in the city this week looking after his fences. Mr. Grundyson is a native of Norway, coming to this country with his parents when a trifle over a year old. He received a lib.ral education and has taught a number of terms of schools, and was for a year deputy sheriff of Polk county. He owns and operates a farm in the town of Sletten. If elected he will be fully capable of attending to the duties of his office.

Do you believe you have been wronged in the wheat market? Then vote for S. M. Owen who will be elected on that issue. Have you not given Wm. R. Merriam a fair trial and has he not proved a failure to remedy existing evils? How can he remedy the evils when he fattens upon them, for it is currently reported that he owns thousands of railroad stocks. It is a patent fact that he is perfectly acceptable to railroads and the elevator system. Vote for your own friend, S. M. Owen.

There is a little campaign sheet at Ada called The Times, which makes the statement that E. E. Lommen is called "the dude candidate, up in Polk County." Now that's too funny for anything, for those who know Mr. Lommen and who know that he is as thorough going a man as Polk county can boast of, but then if they didn't call Lommen a dude, they know that they would have absolutely nothing to bring against him for his character is absolutely irreproachable. Mr. Lommen is no more of a dude than his honorable opponents and the writer of that article must have racked the place where his brains ought to be terribly to find some false charges to bring. Mr. Lommen is the peer of any candidate in the field and he has hosts of friends in many callings whose votes on Nov. 4th will tell what is their opinion of him. That he will be elected then seems to be but little doubt.

Not long ago Mr. Edward Lanctot, one of the prominent French farmers living near Gentilly addressed a meeting of farmers on the subject uppermost in their minds at present—a free and open wheat market. The next issue of the East Grand Forks News contained what it called a synopsis of the speech which was a very silly attempt to belittle the speech by ridicule. Mr. L. says he may be too ignorant to give as finished a speech as the dude writers of the attack upon him probably can decorate but he is not too ignorant to perceive the enormous steals to which he and his brother farmers are subject under the present market system and he is not afraid to stand up and urge his friends to vote for deliverance, the only hope of which is in the alliance cause. It is by such little tricks that the opposition hope to induce farmers to vote against their own interests, but we very much mistake the temper of the farmers if the tricks succeed. The only chance for relief they have is in the election of S. M. Owen for governor.

C. O. CHRISTIANSON.



C. O. Christianson, nominee for Judge of Probate has filled that office acceptably and ably and will no doubt be re-elected. He has been a citizen of Polk county for many years; was once county commissioner by appointment; has an extensive aquaintance in this county, and so well and favorably known that his election is conceded by all. Vote for C. O. Christianson.

"No man can serve two masters." If it is true that Merriam is the friend and ally of monopolists he cannot be such to the poor farmer and laboring man on whose vitals monopoly fattens. S. M. Owen is pre-eminently the poor man's friend, a man who has proved his friendship long before he was a candidate for your suffrage. Vote for S. M. Owen.

Did you notice what a dust the stump speakers are kicking up on the tariff question? And did you ever stop to think that you have a system in your midst that costs you from three to ten cents per bushel at least to maintain? And did you even stop to think what an enormous drain the watered stock system of railroads is upon the resources of the country? Is not the living issue found in these evils? What then is the reason for kicking up such a dust over the tariff if not to try to hide the greater evils that afflict agriculture? That is just what it is for and no other reason. If the railroads and elevator systems can make you think that it is only the tariff that is taking the life out of you then they can keep right on with their nefarious traffic for they dont care a snap which party wins on the tariff issue they are safe in any event. With the alliance party it is different. That party is bound to down every evil that afflicts agriculture and if placed in power will squeeze the railroad watered stock; will regulate the market and pay enough attention to the tariff question. The alliance party is the only one that will pay any attention to watered stock and elevator exactions, therefore it is the plain duty of every man who believes in the upbuilding of the country to vote for S. M. Owen and the leigslative ticket.

Democrats are loudly calling upon farmers who were democrats to vote the straight democratic ticket. But they fail to make it plain how that will help farmers get their rights in the market. Democratic and every other kind of farmer should vote for Owen and the alliance legislative ticket as this is the only party that makes any pretense of securing to the country a free and open market. Farmers vote for your OWN INTERESTS for once in your lives and see how that would seem.

Congressman S. G. Comstock in his first term, has won the reputation of being one of the hardest working members in that body, ever faithful to the interests of his constituents, and his ability to do good work for them is shown in the appropriations, amounting to $730,000, which he got for his district. The only objection that has been made to him is his vote on the McKinley bill, but every candid, reasonable man will at once perceive that in order to obtain anything for his constituents he was obliged to vote with his party. The Hon. Knute Nelson, who made such a record in Congress by voting with the democrats on the Mills bill, made his record for independance, and yet the Mills bill did not entirely suit Mr. Nelson. By voting with the democrats for the bill he was enabled through their strength to put through all of his local bills. We personally know that Mr. Comstock does not agree with every feature of the McKinley bill, but it is a painful fact that one man alone does not control that body, and if Mr. C. had voted against the bill he would have accomplished nothing for his district, yet the bill would have carried just the same. That he is in full accord with Knute Nelson on the tariff question is shown in the fact that Mr. Nelson heartily endorses Mr. Comstock's course in Congress, and urges his friends to support Mr. Comstock for the second term. If Mr. Kittleson should be elected the district would, practically, be without a representative, as he would be practically alone, and even if he was as able a man as Mr. Comstock would from this fact if for no other be unable to pass any measures. Important measures will come up and Mr. Comstock could pass them for us, the other man could not, and the most important question before the voters today is, "Can we afford to be practically without representation for two years?" When we consider the needs of this new district we unhesitatingly say no, we must have a man who can do our business. We think every man who has the best interests of this new country at stake will take the same view, especially as Mr. Comstock is just as much in sympathy with the farmers as any man can be. Let good common horse sense rule in this matter.

And now the Merriam managers are saying to the farmers: "Lo, this great man and that great man advises you to vote for Governor Merriam!" Go to! Are the farmers "voting cattle" that they have to be instructed how to vote? Do they not know that the present "business administration" costs them $5 to $10 per hundred on their wheat to sustain it? Let the great men keep right on advising the farmers, THEY DON'T HAVE TO FOOT THE BILL, but the farmer does, and he proposes to cast his ballot for himself this fall. He intends to vote in his own interests for once in his life, and not "as some big man tells him to!" That is the kind of independent voter the farmer is and the insinuation of the Merriam bosses that the farmer will vote as some big man tells him to is an insult to the average intelligence of the farmer.

From every county in the state comes the cheering intelligence that the farmers are getting in line for Owen, their candidate for Governor, and more than that, from the cities and villages the report comes that Owen will have lots of votes, and it is certain that if the farmers only stand true to their cause their candidate, S. M. Owen, will be the next Governor of Minnesota, but the Merriam party say that the farmers will not be true, that at the last moment they will cowardly surrender their cause and vote to defeat their own interests, but we do not think they will. It is just as true to-day as it was last winter that the farmer cannot get justice in the wheat market under the Merriam inspectors, and he will not be able to if Merriam is re-elected. We can see no reason why the farmers should desert their own leader, S. M. Owen, for a man who cannot or will not at least afford them any relief. Everywhere the people protest against the Merriam regime and the only way to end the farce is to elect S. M. Owen. We are confident if the farmers are true to their own interests this will be done.

Gov. Merriam plumed himself on what he had done to get free twine in Minnesota when he spoke in this city. It now transpires that his committee has bought a foreign machine at a greater cost than an American machine would cost and a machine that the Deerings could not use on American flax. Was this done to defeat cheap twine? It certainly looks that way.

Nelson For Comstock.

Hon. S. G. Comstock spoke at Glenwood, Pope County, on Thursday evening, Oct. 16th. Hon. Knute Nelson was present and also addressed the meeting. Speaking of Mr. Comstock, Mr. Nelson said:

"And now I wish to say a word in behalf of my old friend, Mr. Comstock. Upon retiring from congress, the highest pleasure I ever experienced in my life was that afforded me in introducing there to my associates my friend and successor, Hon. S. G. Comstock. He has ever been a friend to me. We were pioneers together, he coming with a shovel on his shoulder to Moorhead, and I locating in a claim shanty at Alexandria the same year. During the famous Nelson-Kindred campaign he was loyal and true to me, and at that memorable Detroit convention he withstood slungshot, billies and revolvers in defense of the "Little Norwegian." He has served you faithfully and well. He is a man, to use a Southern phrase, who always "totes fair," and my friends in Pope County cannot pay me a higher compliment than by giving him their hearty support."

Mankato Free Press: "For several years the American hog has been boycotted in France and Germany—that is, on the erroneous plea that our pork was deceased, those countries have prohibited its importation.

Some folks are too all-fired particular for any use, it would seem, but this is the first instance we ever heard of where people prefer to eat live pork.

Gov. Merriam and C. K. Davis go about the country on special trains, sometimes carrying a brass band, and yet despite all that parade the Merriam managers are beginning to tumble to the fact that their cause is in extreme danger. They begin to realize that the people are doing a wonderful amount of earnest thinking this year, the result of which will be disastrous to Merriamism.

Bro. Deacon, of the St. Vincent New Era, says: "Polk County will go two to one in favor of Owen." The only fault we find with that statement is its modesty. It should be three to one, at least—but then we ought to be satisfied with the world without demanding a wire fence around it.

Princeton Union: Solomon G. Comstock has developed into an able legislator during the nine months of congress. Well, the entire delegation in Congress has developed and done good work, but the Fifth district congressman is entitled to especial praise for what he has done for his district. Not a single interest to be reached by congressional legislation has been left undone by him, and the benefits of his work will be more apparent as they are felt and become operative.

Comstock up and Doing.

Freeman Enterprise.

Representative Comstock is making a vigorous canvass in the short time which he has had since congress adjourned, and the result is already apparent. Very flattering reports come in from all over the district. St. Louis county, which includes Duluth, and which Whiteman has been claiming to carry in his breeches pocket, is rallying around Comstock and will give him an old-time rousing majority.

When the old-time politician approaches you with the request to vote his ticket, just flash upon him the following:

Farmers' Alliance Platform.

First—We demand the free coinage of gold and silver, and that the silver dollar or silver certificate issued by the government upon the silver bullion shall be legal tender for the payment of all debts, both public and private, thereby restoring silver to it's time honored place in our monetary system under the constitution.

Second—We demand that the government loan money direct to the people upon demand at a low rate of interest and take as security thereof real estate; said amount loaned not to exceed one half of the assessed valuation of said real estate, when free from all incumbrance. We believe American lands are the best security for American money.

Third—We demand that the government establish sub-treasuries for the use of the agricultural districts for the storing of grain, cotton or tobacco, and loan the owners thereof 80 per cent. of the value of all produce that they have in store at 2 per cent. per annum under rules and regulations established by the U. S. government.

Fourth—We demand the repeal of the war-tariff tax, which long has been and is a greivious burden upon the producers of the wealth of the nation and that we favor a tariff upon all articles of luxury only to be imposed to pay the current expenses of the government honestly administered, and that a graduated tax be levied upon all incomes in excess of $2,000 per annum.

Fifth—We demand the continuance of prohibition in the state and favor the national abolition of the liquor traffic.

Sixth—We demand government ownership of all railroads, telegraph lines and coal mines, in the interests of the people.

Seventh—We demand equal suffrage.

Eighth—We demand that our state adopt the Australian system of conducting elections.

Ninth—We demand that the constitution of the United States be so amended that United States Senators, President and Vice-President be elected by the direct vote of the people of each state.

Tell him that no party in existance, except the Alliance party, demands these and all of these things, and it is high time that farmers began to legislate for their own interests. Do not be fooled by specious arguments into voting against your own interests.

The Minneapolis Tribune claims to have discovered that Thos. Wilson intends to resign in favor of S. M. Owen. This is not in accord with rumors that were floating about the streets in St Paul last week which were to the effect that Kelly & Doran had dropped Wilson and that they were doing all they could to elect Merriam. It was also intimated that the old parties have a perfect understanding and if Wilson withdraws it will be in the interest of Merriam. The Tribune claims the deal is with a view to defeat Cush Davis in '92, and then frantically asks the farmers if they will stand that racket? Probably the farmers are not caring very much for the severe attack of nightmare which the Tribune has experienced and they will still insist that S. M. Owen is the only man who cares a tinker's frisket whether they get an open market or not. Bill Merriam certainly does not and a Merriam victory would not be a victory for the farmers.

The Pioneer Press and other papers with monopolistic tendencies are just now trying very hard to convince voters that all the alliance rally is is a trap set by the wily democrats to catch unwary voters. But the Pioneer Press never raised wheat at less than cost and tried to support a family that way; never paid exhorbitant freight rates on account of watered stock and raised wheat at a loss to do it; never raised stock at a loss to support the beef trust; never endured the trials under which the farmers sweat and groan in a vain endeavor to pay that soul killing mortgage and therefore the Pioneer Press knows nothing about the situation or nothing about the object of the alliance. Of what avail to the farmer is party triumph when it brings him no relief? The alliance seeks means to remedy the evils under which agriculture is suffering and will not be influenced by such bugbears as such monopolistic sheets may hatch up. The farmers are not after democratic success, republican success or any other success save only agricultural success. S. M. Owen is the only candidate pledged to this end.

Governor Merriam says that the things that the farmer asks for has already been done by the republican party. The farmer has asked for an equal share in the wheat market. That has not been given. He has asked to be relieved from the pernicious elevator system that has robbed him. That has not been given him and elevator stock is yet gilt edged. He has asked relief from watered stock of railroads; that has not been given him and when you pin the governor right down to facts the only thing he can say that the republican party (that is governor Merriam) has given the farmer when he asked for it was a car or two now and then and that the law gives him; a law passed by a farmers legislature. But just about this time of year politicians and office seekers are very solicitous about the wellfare of the farmer—but it dont last very long after election. Oh yes, the republican party has done everything that the farmer has asked and yet he don't have his rights in the market, so it is about time to try S. M. Owen and a farmer legislature and we will do it.

For Work at the Polls. Get Alliance Ballots into the Hands of the People

County and Town Committies see to it that there is no Failure on November 4th

If the Citizens are Supplied with Our Tickets a Majority Will Vote them. God Speed the Holy Cause of Reform.

The Indutrial Age.

We most earnestly call the attention of friends of "The Alliance" to the imperative necessity for thorough work now.

We have no well disiplined party organization to attend to the distribution of ballots.

We have no barrel to furnish funds to pay agents to visit the different voting precints and attend to the work of ballot distribution.

The friends of our great cause must do the work, and begin now.

Many are in sympathy with us who will not declare themselves openly; see that all doubtful voters are cared for.

Select the best men for workers. Don't select men who say "they'll try." Select men who say that they WILL.

Arouse to victorious action! This is no time for slumber. The day of decision draws on apace; let it find us ready for the contest.

Don't trade; traffic in principle is devil's work. Stand by the state ticket. All the powers of plutocracy are combining to compass the defeat of Owen.

An Alliance governor in the State house will cause such a scattering of thieves as has not been witnessed since Christ drove the money changers from the temple.

The capitol at St. Paul is "the temple of a commonwealth's liberty," but it has been invaded by the representatives of a new feudalism. Let us cleanse it from their deflements and establish there the shrine of economic freedom, make it the ark of a just political covenant, whereby God shall be justified to his children, and we learn to know Him as our Father, and ourselves as members of one universal family.

Our fight is for human rights and for justice in law. We have had Cains to slay us, and we may have a Judas to betray us; but we have also brothers to redeem us, and "the day of the Lord draweth nigh."

Act as men inspired and forgetful of self, "seek all the common good."

The thrones of iniquity are already trembling and refuge is sought behind the old barricades of falsehood, but "Their lies shall become rent cobwebs in the torturing glare of Truth.

True to our God, to our convictions of right, and to each other. Now, altogether far the last supreme struggle, for behold, the land is already gray with the morning light of a better day.

WHO IS OWEN.

The Record of the Alliance Candidate for Governor of Minnesota.

To the Editor of Minneapolis Journal.

The above question is frequently asked and here is the answer. S. M. Owen was born in 1836 in a little log house among the timber of Huron County, Ohio. He was a plucky, hard working lad, helping his father level the trees and convert them into ashes and potash for sale. His father had a little country store. The son became its manager, securing a half interest and moving it 10 miles to a railroad station. In 1866 Mr. Owen moved to Toledo and engaged in the wholesale notion and fancy dry good business; in 1873 took a position in charge of the white good department of O. R. Keith & Co., Chicago, at $3,500 a year, during which time his brother started the Farm, Stock & Home in Minneapolis, which has become the leading agricultural paper west of Chicago. M. Owen had always been a great student of political economy and kindred questions. As a magazine writer on such topics he had won high reputation. The Chicago Tribune and like journals had repeatedly interviewed him on the business situation and other topics, adopting his clear views, oral and written, and publishing them editorially. His first contribution to Farm, Stock & Home, sent here from Chicago, was an article in favor of a readjustment and reduction of the tariff.

Mr. Owen has been an uncompromising antagonist of the evils of stock watering by railroad companies which have sought to earn dividends on fictitious valuations, and is one of the staunchest friends in the state of the farmers' institute and of such methods in agricultural education in connection with the agricultural department of the university as shall produce practical results and tend to educate for the farm instead of away from it. He is an able and conscientious man dignified and courteous in his bearing, a forcible witer and a vigorous and independent thinker, with views upon public questions that command a respectful hearing.

Farmers Prosperity.

Farm, Stock and Home.

That man should not be proud of his abiliy to comprehend the magnitude o the problem of to day who judges of existing conditions by those things that come under his personal observation in his own immediate neighborhood. For instance, some writers see farmers of their acquaintance making money, with more or less rapidity, and at once jump at the inference that all farmers are not only making money, but are making it in very liberal quantities, and so reach the conclusion that our systems and conditions are all right. It is only the most superficial thinker who so reasons. General results must be considered if the real effect of universal conditions is to be ascertained; and all oppressive forces must be considered if we are to determine whether the farmer is enjoying that degree of prosperity which his natural environments entitle him to. That very many of our farmers are slowly getting ahead is undeniable; but that they are getting ahead as rapidly as they should is disproven by the existence of systems and forces that are unjustly taking from them a large share of the fruits of their toil. That the farmer is not yet a pauper is true, but that he is being rapidly pauperized who can doubt after studying the figures given elsewhere in this issue? It is unwise to ignore the significance of those figures; while to do so in the interest of a political party is both unpatriotic and unsafe.

Government Railroad.

Farm, Stock and Home.

It is astonishing how rapidly the belief is growing than the only solution to the railroad problems of the day is government ownership and control of the roads. Public speakers notice this and freely comment upon it. Whenever that sentiment is uttered hearty and prolonged applause follows, no matter whether the audiences are composed of business men, farmers, mechanics or railroad employes. This is as it should be, for no more important or serious problem was ever presented to an intelligent people than this same railroad problem. When the scores of fortunes, ranging from one to one hundred millions each, which have been made from railroads during the past quarter of a century, are considered, the terrible drains they have been, and still are, on the productive industries of the land, appears in all its horrible reality. That the drain must be stopped is self-evidont, and the only way to do it is througe ultimate government ownership now appears undeniable. If the country could be relieved from the wealth-centralizeing influences of present railroad management it would bound into sudden and properly diversified prosperity; a belief in the truth of this proposition is filling the minds of men, and with that belief comes a longing for release from the hampering tethers that now forbid the bound; hence the growth of the government railroad sentiment. The next great forward step this nation will take is along the road herewith suggested, and it will be a step in the interest of all the people.

According to the calculations of the astute Pioneer Press, "the enemy" (the farmers,) will carry the southern half of the state, and "the enemy" has the north half nearly solid, and yet it says "Merriam will carry the state by 15,000 at least." How it can reconcile "the enemy" sufficiently to accomplish the latter we fail to see clearly.

Mathias Cornelius, the present deputy auditor, was born in Norway. Was educated in a German college, was clerk in a mercantile establishment four years. Upon his arrival in this country his first job was in Minneapolis where he was called as an expert bookkeeper in a very intricate case. After a successful termination of his labors in that case he went into the German American bank of St. Paul, which place he resigned to accept an offer from John Christianson, who was talking of going over to the old country and wanted to employ a good man in the auditor's office while away. Before he started for Crookston, he saw in a newspaper the account of Christianson's sudden death; however, as he had arranged to come, he came, and soon after found employment as clerk for Fontaine & Anglim, with whom he remained two years. He has had about 9 years experience in the auditor's office and is perfectly familiar with the business. Mat does not "chin" much but he is a safe man to tie to in business matters.

Some newspaper men are so hot for boodle themselves that they can explain the actions of others only upon the boodle theory, and so it is that the Red Lake Falls News accuses THE JOURNAL of espousing the cause of the farmers

FOR BOODLE!

What a picnic we must be having, for it is a well known fact that the wheat rings have left the farmers with unlimited wealth at their command to buy newspapers with. The News seems envious because the farmers saw fit to "buy up" THE JOURNAL instead of the News. Well, we can't help it. We always did give the farmers credit for eminent good sense, anyhow. The News is raking Holston over the coals, hoping thus to defeat him, but then that is to be expected, for Holston recently obtained a $1,000 judgment against the News and moreover the News seems lately to have taken the contract to defeat the farmers in their efforts to obtain an open wheat market. Joinnd the Pioneer Press gang who calls the farmers "the enemy!" THE JOURNAL does not believe that is the way to build up this country. When the farmers are prosperous every business interest thrives, and their rights in the market is the real, living issue in this campaign.

Replying to several letters we have received this week we would say that THE JOURNAL seeks the best interests of Polk County in this campaign, and when we are asked to support any man whom we know to be notoriously incompetent we cannot do it, for it is not to the interest of Polk County to elect such men, either in county, state or congressional offices. THE JOURNAL urges its readers to be independent, but not bigoted in this matter. To vote for a man you know cannot do your business satisfactorily, simply because he happens to be on your ticket is not independence, but bigotry. It is this that has caused so much harm in the past and will ever continue to do so. Vote for your own interests and for the men who can best subserve them. If you were going to hire a man to run your farm or conduct a store for you, you would not for a moment think of hiring an incompetent man who knew nothing of the business in hand. Apply the same rule to hiring your public servants for public matters are fully as important as private.

"Held By The Enemy!"

That is the way the Pioneer Press describes the situation in Yellow Medicine County, where it says the ALLIANCE is in the majority! And it has come to pass that the farmer, who is simply striving to obtain his just rights in the market, is called by the leading Merriam organ of the State! Having been robbed of his just share of the profits for these years that the elevator system is in vogue, now, when he has arisen in his might to demand his rights, he is called "The Enemy!" by a paper that has been built up by the agricultural interests of the State. The object of the farmer is to place agriculture upon an even footing with other business interests, so that the farmer can retain his just share of the products of his toil, thus enabling him to pay his debts like other business men and enjoy with his family some of the comforts of life, but when he attempts this the great Pioneer Press arrays itself against him and calls him "THE ENEMY." The farmer is the enemy only to trusts, to monopolies, to oppression in every form, and the Press hastens to ally itself with all these by calling the farmer "THE ENEMY!" And it tries to leave the impression on the minds of its readers that it is the mouthpiece of the great republican party. The farmers are in the fight for a principle—one that will benefit all of the people of the State and the Pioneer Press seems to be in it merely to win a party triumph—something that benefits only a few.

"THE ENEMY"

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more fully shown by the following statement: A, aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his insurance	$88 44
Each year on his loan for interest	80 00
Total yearly payments	$ 168 44
Total for ten years	1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $184.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

Ex Governor A. R. McGill spoke at the agricultural fair in Murray County, not long ago and among other things said:

"In Minnesota the power of the farmer predominates. His influence for good or bad will mark the state for a thousand years. That it will be exercised for the best, I cannot doubt. Our farmers exceed 100,000 in numbers—more than one-third of the voting population of the state. By co-operative action your power is almost complete. You can control and regulate public affairs as you will. I believe you desire honesty in public station and economy in the administration of the burdens of taxation and that the poor man be at all times accorded the same opportunites to fill positions of trust and responsibility as the rich. In this all good citizens everywhere will agree with you. There should be no aristocracy in public office, and certainly no discrimination against the poor man. Merit alone must be the test of fitness if we would build up a stong government for a strong and self-reliant people. Any other proposition is degrading and demoralizing. A republican form of government is better than all others when pure and upright; but when thoroughly corrupt it becomes the worst. God grant that here in the North Star-state we may never have reason to regret the liberties handed down to us through brave and heroic sacrifices of the fathers of the republic. It is the duty of every voter to take an interest and a hand in public matters. This duty is imposed by our form of government. You are the rulers. Those who fill the offices are but your servants. Put none but true men on duty—honest fearless, upright men whom you can trust. If you neglect to exercise your duty in the nomination and election of public officers, you have no right to complain if things go wrong. I, for one, do not feel frightened when I see farmers taking a hand in public affairs—it is an omen for good. When they stay at home and sulk, and refuse to perform their duties as electors, then there is cause of apprehension. You are masters of the situation. Combined and working in harmony you can control the destinies of the state. Let this great power be used in the name of justice and wisdom. "Oh, it is excellent to have a giant's strength, but tyrannous to use it like a giant."

Shipping Facilities Refused Farmers.

Editor of the Daily News.

McIntosh, Minn., Oct. 11.—The Pioneer Press of Sept. 30 published a Duluth special, headed: "Cars Not Refused." The article is very misleading, and that part of it referring to the refusal to furnish cars at McIntosh is an infernal lie. The agent at McIntosh positively refused to furnish cars for wheat to be consigned to Duluth up to Sept. 30, and he also refused to accept wheat consigned to Minneapolis commission firms. Kicking at this end was useless. The agent knew it all, and swore by all that was good that he was simply following his instructions, and until the matter was brought to the attention of the commission men it was impossible to get satisfaction.

It is impossible for many of the farmers tributary to this station to comply with the twenty-four-hour rule, or even to load a car between trains, which run only three times a week on this line, so they organized a stock company with a capital stock of 10,000 for the purpose of building a farmers' elevator. An application for a site was made to the Great Northern, and a very favorable reply was received, but the further action was postponed and delayed until it was thought that the matter would be quietly dropped on account of the lateness of the season, when, upon being pressed for an answer one way or the other, they positively refused to grant us a site upon their right of way. The farmers are thoroughly organized here and they understand full well why the Merriam delegates to the Republican State Convention received free passes "and expenses" and a liberal supply of spending money. Nor will they be fooled by the oily promises of the sleek agents of the railroad company, who are scouring this section of the country. They know what they want and they will have it, or they will boycott the railroad in every possible manner.

Yours for the right.

To The Farmer's Alliance of of Polk Co. Minn.

GENTLEMEN:—The farmers and workingmen of Minnesota in general and of Polk County in particular have arisen in their might to shake off the burdens that monopolists, usurers and corrupt machine politicians have placed upon them. As a first step to that end, the farmers and laborers have declared their independence of the democratic and republican parties both of which have deserted the principles of their founders and are now ruled, controlled and run by the monopolists and for the monopolists, while the interests, the wants and the needs of the people are neglected. A full Farmers Alliance State, Congressional, Legislative and County ticket has been placed in the field and a victory for the Alliance means the control of the State and county affairs by the people. Besides and furthermore this movement is but the advance guard of a great reform party which, in 1892 will sweep the nation from Maine to California, and place in the Presidential chair a man of the people. Monopoly will be dethroned and the reign of the plutocrats will end, and again we will have restored to the masses a government of the people, by the people and for the people.

Your candidates are mostly poor men like yourselves; your leaders are without money or means and are now pitted againts the birelings of monopoly, and are fighting for your interests the most desperate political battle ever waged upon the soil of Minnesota. Defeat means ruin to your leaders, increased taxes to you and the filling of your offices with the tools of your oppressors. It means that interest, taxes, freight rates and tariff will be high and that your wheat will still pay tribute to the elevator pirates; success means the abolition of these iniquitous robberies now being so successfully practiced upon the farmers and in fact upon all the poor or middle-classes of whatsoever profession, calling or trade, for nearly all the poor people in the city who feel the sting of poverty and wear the yoke of monopoly more galling than the one which our lawmakers and office-holders have placed around the necks of the farmers. Your County Committees are willing to work, but to send our speakers and campaign literature requires money. "We must educate or must perish."

Many towns and villages are without alliance organizations; these can and must be organized before the election if we would win. To organize means expense. Will the farmers furnish the money to fight their own battle? We do not want a corruption fund but we do want money for the purpose of paying the necessary expenses for organization, speaking and campaign documents. We have no candidate with a barrel; we cannot call upon the rich for contributions—their money is being spent by the enemy to defeat us and elect the hirelings of plutocracy. You farmers, you individually, are the men to pay these campaign expenses. We want every farmer in Polk county to give somthing—be it little or much. If you cannot contribute much give all you can. Let those better fixed give their dollars and the poorer their quarters. Remember every cent given will come back a hundred fold. Call an alliance meeting at once for the purpose. Give all that you can, personally or from the alliance funds, and have your secretary forward the amount to E. E. Lommen, the chairman of the County Central Committee, Crookston, Minn. You will get a receipt for your money sent and the committee will account to your alliance for the manner in which every cent so contributed is spent. Do not delay but send in at once.

Polk County will cast a tremendous vote for Owen. Mark the prediction.

Owen will have a large vote in the big cities. If the country does its duty he will be elected. A triumph for the common public.

Owen has no money to buy the venal press or voters but the people are behind him and he will be elected.

Farmers do not deny that the Republican party has a glorious record—they are more interested in the question: "What is it now?" It has done great things in the past but just now is doing nothing for the farmer in this state.

Wherever S. M. Owen goes he makes friends. This is perfectly natural for he is pre-eminently a man of the people.

Hon. C. A. Gilman has announced himself an independent candidate for State Senator in this district. Hon. Henry Kellar is his opponent.

Ovide Morean republican candidate for treasurer who was in the city on Thursday. Says he thinks Owen will carry the county by a large majority.

Wm. Carlton came down from Angus on Wednesday evening and left on the Fosston train for a trip to Beltrami county. Mr. C. says the Alliance prospects are brilliant.

When he was in this city Governor Merriam pointed with pride to the record of the Republican party and said it was a party of principle. What principle does the Governor represent?

So far no serious inroads have been made on the Alliance strength in Polk County. Just as much reason exists today why farmers should vote for themselves as ever and they are bound to do it.

Alderman C. U. Jennings went up in the northeast part of the county last week to address the people on the important issues of the day from the Alliance standpoint. He says the Alliance sentiment is very strong up there.

Reports from all over the state continue encouraging and the cause is daily growing in strength in the cities and villages. If the farmers remain firm and are true to their cause Owen and a farmers legislature will surely be elected. Stand firm and watch the polls faithfully to prevent frauds. Your opponents are desperate and determined to win if it be possible.

That "great change" which Merriam managers predicted would come to alliance men by which they should come a running back into the Merriam ranks don't seem to have come yet. And it will not. The farmers are in dead earnest and intend to try their own plan despite the disinterested(?) advice of politicians. Present methods will secure no relief and the farmers will try Owen and a farmers legislature.

All the farmers seek in the independent movement is simply their rights in the market and yet some papers sneer at them and act as though the farmers had no rights that politicians are bound to respect. All the same these very politicians are dependent upon the farmers for their daily bread, farmers are thinking now if they never did before.

The republican party, while it has had a grand record in the past has allowed railroads an undue advantage over the common people in the matter of watered stocks. When the party takes hold of this question and begins to act in the interest of the people we shall have some faith in its conversion. It will do them good to get a good whaling this fall.

Insignificant papers throughout the state are saying that Owen will not speak unless he gets $100 a speech. This is an infernal lie out of whole cloth and too thin to wash. It is true that Owen has no money to use to corrupt voters nor would he so use it if he had but he is a rattling good, upright man and will make a grand governor.

Owen Will Carry Lac qui Parle County.

MADISON, Minn., Oct. 21.—[Special.]—It may now be said that the campaign in this county is fully on. The Farmers' Alliance convention met at this place recently and nominated an exceptionally strong ticket. Every town in the county was represented and unusual interest was manifested by all the delegates, among whom were the representative men of the county, most of whom affiliated with the republican party heretofore.

The Alliance legislative ticket from this district will surely be elected. The Republicans, the old hard headed fellows, are getting in speakers and are tryin to turn the tide, but their efforts will be of little avail, as the intelligent farmers are heartily sick of the G. O. P.S and have left it to stay. In estimatin the vote for Governor, put Lac qui Parle county in the doubtful column. Merriam will not have a majority in the county. Neither will Judge Wilson receive as large a vote as did Hon. E. M. Wilson two years ago.

The fight in this county is not between Merriam and Wilson but between Merriam and Owen, and from present indications Owen will receive the biggest half of the vote of Lac qui Parle county. The farmers of this county are wide awake to their own interests, and if other counties of the State do as well for Owen as this county he will be our next governor.

Editor POLK COUNTY JOURNAL:—I notice that Mr. E. J. Grefthen the alliance candidate for Supt. of schools has been repeatedly attacked by the Daily Chronicle. I do not myself belong to the alliance, but when I see an honest, upright gentleman, who is respected by all good citizens that who him, and regarded as one of our leading advocates for morality, temperance and education, abused by the Chronicle man of this city, I am not going to fold my arms and let the dirty work go on any longer. Of course if all the voters of Polk County knew the editor and the political history of his cowardly paper it would be a good recommendation for any candidate to be abused by said sheet. Evidently our Chronicle man has awakened and noticed the fact, that Mr. Grefthen is "in it" and is going to "get there," that is the reason why he howls so loud. Some time ago, our "truth loving" Chronicle man's only objection against Mr. G., as a candidate for Superintendent of schools for Polk county, was, that he was a temperance man and did not hold a first class teachers' certificate.—And when Mr. Grefthen comes out and shows his first class certificate, the very "truth loving" Chronicle man in an editorial in his paper of Oct. 10th, in a most impudent manner states that Mr. Grefthen has been compelled to go to Iowa for an alleged first-class teacher's certificate." There is something rotten somewhere, and I shall look up where it is, Mr. Chronicle.

Mr. Grefthen passed examination before A. O. Bakken an Iowa Supt. late of Iowa. Further "the Fertile Journal claimed that he held a first-class certificate, but failed to state that it was not from the Supt. of schools of Polk county. Yes! Mr. Grefthen virtally held a first-class certificate from our sister state N. D., where he has been teaching for a number of terms. He had nothing to do with a certificate from Polk county in order to teach in Traill county N. D. "and that paper made that statement before the candidate went to Iowa for his certificate" is a fabrication of Mr. Chronicle, the Fertile Journal did not.—I shall not spend much more time or paper in refuting said papers well paid for falsehoods, but shortly explain. "Mr. Grefthen dared not undergo an examination of any grade last spring long before he ever had an idea of being a candidate for the office of school Supt. of Polk county." I know that he did not intend to teach school any more in Polk county is the reason why he did not pass the examination.—"The aspirant well knows that he can not pass examination before any "first class Supt. in the state."—How many classes of Supt's. are there in this state, Mr. Chronicle, and under which do you classify our present Supt. Casey, who offered an alliance man a teachers' certificate without an examination this spring, provided he desired to teach in Polk county? As to the character and ability of the alliance candidate for Superintendent of schools I refer the reader to: A report claiming that Mr. Shelly, democratic nominee for same office will withdraw in favor of Thos. Casey a short time before election. I dont hardly believe Shelly is such a man, that he would sell out to a democratic turn-coat like Mr. Casey and we would like to hear from Shelly in regard to the matter. If the democratic nominee withdraws in favor of Casey, it will hurt the entire democratic ticket.

Solid Against Merriam.

Duluth Times.

Some of the good friends, Republican friends, of the Times who oppose William R. Merriam for Governor of Minnesota, and who have noted with a great deal of interest the fight of The Times against his re-election, have asked in the past day or two if the attitude of this paper had changed towards the man who now occupies the gubernatorial chair. To these friends The Times can only say that it has not. It has opposed Gov. Merriam from the beginning of the campaign and will until the end, and it advises all the Republicans of Duluth who are indignant that such a candidate should be the leader of their party, to keep up their opposition to him until the polls close, whatever be the result. He is no no man to be Governor of Minnesota, he is no man to be the leader of the Republican party, and the sooner such as he are consigned to political death the better for Minnesota and for the party.

Gov. Merriam plumed himself on what he had done to get free twine in Minnesota when he spoke in this city. It now transpires that his committee has bought a foreign machine at a greater cost than an American machine would cost and a machine that the Deering could not use on American flax. Was this done to defeat cheap twine? It certainly looks that way.

Simon Pure Republican.

Minneapolis Times.

The Litchfield Independent is what its name implies, a thoroughly independent Republican paper. It has convictions and the courage. Replying to a carping contemporary, it says:

The Ledger objects to our designating the St. Paul News and the Minneapolis Times as Republican journals. Will the Ledger be kind enough to give us a list of the simon pure Republican papers of Minnesota? If all are excluded that denounce the boodle methods of the Republican clique that now controls the party in this state, the list will not be large, and will be made up largely of men with Merriam or Harrison collars around their necks.

The merely partisan sheet that regards allegiance to the machine and servile obedience to the party managers as its highest duty, ordinarily has no more conception of political morality or principle than a deaf man has of music. Their idea of what constitutes Republicanism is essentially narrow and immoral. It is that no paper can be Republican, or is entitled to the Republican name, that refuses to support a corrupt, incompetent and otherwise unfit Republican nominee, or endorse venal and dishonest combination, and methods. Of course it is absolutely useless to expect such a paper to recognize until it is too late—that the best chance—if not the sole chance—of continued Republican control, is to make Republicanism identical with the most earnest convictions and the more courage of good citizens. The Republican party in Minnesota has enjoyed a long lease of power, it has had a splendid record and has brought forward great and good men; but W. R. Merriam is not one of them. Its decline and overthrow are sure unless it becomes by a happy fortune once more the fearless representative of living principles and a definite policy. This it can never become under the leadership of men of the Merriam type. Indeed, the nomination of such a man is the most conclusive proof that the party has fallen away from its former high estate, and that its self constituted leaders have turned their backs upon its high ideals.

It will be urged that at its worst the Republican party, is better than the Democratic party, with its hideous record. But, clearly, it is not enough to maintain the party supremacy that it is no worse than others and that others are no better than itself. That is no reason for supporting a party. Politics is something more than a choice between a rascal and a knave. We are confronted at this moment in this state with questions of the utmost significance to society, to labor, to our agricultural and industrial interests, to the prosperity and good name of the state. They cannot be dealt with by charlatans and boodlers and cowards. They are not to be evaded by the stale tricks of false alarms, by the shouting of party shibboleths, or obsolete appeal to party loyalty. When a disgraceful nomination is thrust upon the party, when Republican are threatened with party ostracization if they refuse to support a notorious corruptionist for the highest state office, it is worst possible treachery to the Republican party and Republican principles to tamely accept the situation and support the tainted ticket. It is this servility to party leaders, this slavish obedience to the machine that breeds political corruption, and poisons the foundations of government. The truest loyalty to the Republican party lies in most outspoken and earnest opposition to the machine-despotism which has the effrontery to foist its own venal and corrupt instrument upon the party, and demand that they be supported because they were "regularly nominated." That is sim mpure Republicanism.

Owen Can Be Elected.

St. Paul News.

Owen can be elected.

Reports from all over the State show that instead of a backward there is a forward movement in behalf of the Alliance.

The efforts of the old parties and particularly the Merriamites to wheedle Alliance men into the support of the old party tickets, is proving a lamentable failure.

The Alliance has victory in its grasp. If it fails it will be its own fault.

When the movement was inaugurated we do not suppose any one anticipated it had prospect of success other than by indirection,—that is by polling a sufficient vote to command respect from the old parties, and bring one or the other to their platform as a matter of self-defense, but circumstances have now changed, and especially during the past month, until it can be candidly and confidently stated, that Mr. Owen's chance to-day is, to put it exceedingly moderate and modest, equal to that of either Merriam or Wilson.

The most tremendous efforts by party pleas and the use of money will be made to whip the members of the Alliance into the support of Merriam.

We confess to have had some doubts as to whether such efforts might not be successful, but reports we now receive indicate that they cannot be.

And why should they be successful?

Why should an earnest, sincere member of the Alliance party betray it because he formerly belonged to an organization by another name?

What does party name signify in comparison with the doctrines of a party which will rob the producing and industrial classes?

That is the issue, and while we do not say as a positive prediction that Mr. Owen will be the next Governor of Minnesota, we do say in all candor and sincerity, that if the Alliance organization and its supporters both in and out of the organization, stand by their guns, his success is sure.

The responsibility for failure, if it comes, will rest upon the Alliance and its friends themselves.

They have only to stand firm and their initial success in Minnesota will prove the greatest political triumph this country has ever seen.

When the old-time politician approaches you with the request to vote his ticket, just flash upon him the following:

Farmers' Alliance Platform.

First—We demand the free coinage of gold and silver, and that the silver dollar or silver certificate issued by the government upon the silver bullion shall be legal tender for the payment of all debts, both public and private, thereby restoring silver to it's time honored place in our monetary system under the constitution.

Second—We demand that the government loan money direct to the people upon demand at a low rate of interest and take as security thereof real estate; said amount loaned not to exceed one half of the assessed valuation of said real estate, when free from all incumbrance. We believe American lands are the best security for American money.

Third—We demand that the government establish sub-treasuries for the use of the agricultural districts for the storing of grain, cotton or tobacco, and loan the owners thereof 80 per cent. of the value of all produce that they have in store at 2 per cent. per annum under rules and regulations established by the U. S. government.

Fourth—We demand the repeal of the war-tariff tax, which long has been and is a greivious burden upon the producers of the wealth of the nation and that we favor a tariff upon all articles of luxury only to be imposed to pay the current expenses of the government honestly administered, and that a graduated tax be levied upon all incomes in excess of $2,000 per annum.

Fifth—We demand the continuance of prohibition in the state and favor the national abolition of the liquor traffic.

Sixth—We demand government ownership of all railroads, telegraph lines and coal mines, in the interests of the people.

Seventh—We demand equal suffrage.

Eighth—We demand that our state adopt the Australian system of conducting elections.

Ninth—We demand that the constitution of the United States be so amended that United States Senators, President and Vice-President be elected by the direct vote of the people of each state.

Tell him that no party in existance, except the Alliance party, demands these and all of these things, and it is high time that farmers began to legislate for their own interests. Do not be fooled by specious arguments into voting against your own interests.

The Pioneer Press and other papers with monopolistic tendencies are just now trying very hard to convince voters that all the alliance rally is is a trap set by the wily democrats to catch unwary voters. But the Pioneer Press never raised wheat at less than cost and tried to support a family that way; never paid exhorbitant freight rates on account of watered stock and raised wheat at a loss to do it; never raised stock at a loss to support the beef trust; never endured the trials under which the farmers sweat and groan in a vain endeavor to pay that soul killing mortgage and therefore the Pioneer Press knows nothing about the situation or nothing about the object of the alliance. Of what avail to the farmer is party triumph when it brings him no relief? The alliance seeks means to remedy the evils under which agriculture is suffering and will not be influenced by such bugbears as such monopolistic sheets may hatch up. The farmers are not after democratic success, republican success or any other success save only agricultural success. S. M. Owen is the only candidate pledged to this end.

C. O. Christianson, nominee for Judge of Probate has filled that office acceptably and ably and will no doubt be reelected. He has been a citizen of Polk county for many years; was once county commissioner by appointment; has an extensive aquaintance in this county, and so well and favorably known that his election is conceded by all. Vote for C. O. Christianson.

Attention, Alliance Officers.

Some of the secretaries fail to do their duty by neglecting to report the names of members, the number, etc., to the County Secretary, Nels Muus, of Fertile, Minn. Those who have not done so, do so at once. Don't delay this matter any longer; the officers should do their duty and do it at once. Let every alliance hold weekly meetings from now until the election, and let every voter attend these meetings, as the time is short before election. Hold your meetings often from now on. It would be best where there are many farmers or workingmen in a town who are not members of the alliance to organize an alliance club, as many will join an alliance club who would not, or who cannot join the farmers' alliance.

NELS MUUS.
Sec. County Alliance.

Organize Alliance Clubs.

Organize an alliance club in every village in the county, and in every township except those where every man, or almost every man, belongs to the farmers' alliance, as you will get men in who would not otherwise be with you. For a constitution for an alliance club, and how to organize, address D. E. Hatlestad, Atty. at Law, Crookston, Minn. Clubs of this kind have already been organized in Crookston and Red Lake Falls. Organize well; get every man in the town to join you. We want to see an alliance club in every town in the county before October 10th. Don't wait for some one else to take hold of this matter, but do it yourselves. Go at it now, every man who wants Owen elected.

Taen Up.

Six Pigs. Owner can have them by calling on Chas. P. Bailey, 5th ward, Crookston, Minn.

For Sale.

New milch cow. Call on M. E. Bartlett, Fairfax, or at JOURNAL office.

For Sale.

A fine new milch cow, five years old. Call on C. Snyder, Sec. 8, Crookston, or at JOURNAL office.

Stock Farm for Sale.

Consisting of 600 acres, lying on Maple Lake, in the town of Godfrey, includes the old townsite of Maple Bay 80 acres fenced for pasture; 160 acres under the plow, balance hay land and timber; house, barn, granary and good well; one of the best located farms for stock in the famous Maple Lake region. Also 50 acres heavily wooded timber land within 4 miles. Will sell with all my stock and farm machinery if so desired. For full particulars call on W. N. Godfrey, Maple Bay, or JOURNAL office, Crookston. [7-tf]

The Pioneer Press says "it looks very black in several counties in southeast Minnesota." By this statement it means that the people are determined to vote for themselves once in their lives, at which the monopolistic Pioneer Press frets and fumes like an old hag. But its howls are significant of the coming storm in which the voice of the people will be heard in unmistakable tones demanding justice.

"and that paper made that statement before the candidate went to Iowa for his certificate" is a fabrication of Mr. Chronicle, the Fertile Journal did not.—I shall not spend much more time or paper in refuting said papers well paid for falsehoods, but shortly explain. "Mr. Grefthen dared not undergo an examination of any grade last spring, long before he ever had an idea of being a candidate for the office of school Supt. of Polk county." I know that he did not intend to teach school any more in Polk county is the reason why he did not pass the examination.—"The aspirant well knows that he can not pass examination before any "first class Sup't. in the state."—How many classes of Supt's. are there in this state, Mr. Chronicle, and under which do you classify our present Supt. Casey, who offered an alliance man a teachers' certificate without an examination this spring, provided he desired to teach in Polk county? As to the character and ability of the alliance candidate for Superintendent of school, I refer the reader to: A report claiming that Mr. Shelly, democratic nominee for same office will withdraw in favor of Thos. Casey a short time before election. I dont hardly believe Shelly is such a man, that he would sell out to a democratic turn-coat like Mr. Casey and we would like to hear from Shelly in regard to the matter. If the democratic nominee withdraws in favor of Casey, it will hurt the entire democratic ticket.

Solid Against Merriam.

Duluth Times.

Some of the good friends, Republican friends, of the Times who oppose William R. Merriam for Governor of Minnesota, and who have noted with a great deal of interest the fight of The Times against his re-election, have asked in the past day or two if the attitude of this paper had changed towards the man who now occupies the gubernatorial chair. To these friends The Times can only say that it has not. It has opposed Gov. Merriam from the beginning of the campaign and will until the end, and it advises all the Republicans of Duluth who are indignant that such a candidate should be the leader of their party to keep up their opposition to him until the polls close, whatever be the result. He is no man to be the Governor of Minnesota, he is no man to be the leader of the Republican party, and the sooner such as he are consigned to political death the better for Minnesota and for the party.

Gov. Merriam plumed himself on what he had done to get free twine in Minnesota when he spoke in this city. It now transpires that his committee [illegible] an American machine would [illegible] a machine that the Deering [illegible] American flax. Was this done to defeat cheap twine? It certainly looks that way.

Simon Pure Republican.

Minneapolis Times.

The Litchfield Independent is what its name implies, a thoroughly independent Republican paper. It has convictions and the courage. Replying to a carping contemporary, it says:

The Ledger objects to our designating the St. Paul News and the Minneapolis Times as Republican journals. Will the Ledger be kind enough to give us a list of the simon pure Republican papers of Minnesota? If all are excluded that denounce the boodle methods of the Republican clique that now controls the party in this state, the list will not be large, and will be made up largely of men with Merriam or Harrison collars around their necks.

The merely partisan sheet that regards allegiance to the machine and servile obedience to the party managers as its highest duty, ordinarily has no more conception of political morality or principle than a deaf man has of music. Their idea of what constitutes Republicanism is essentially narrow and immoral. It is that no paper can be Republican, or is entitled to the Republican name, that refuses to support a corrupt, incompetent and otherwise unfit Republican nominee, or endorse venal and dishonest combination, and methods. Of course it is absolutely useless to expect such a paper to recognize until it is too late—that the best chance—if not the sole chance—of continued Republican control, is to make Republicanism identical with the most earnest convictions and the more courage of good citizens. The Republican party in Minnesota has enjoyed a long lease of power, it has had a splendid record and has brought forward great and good men; but W. R. Merriam is not one of them. Its decline and overthrow are sure unless it becomes by a happy fortune once more the fearless representative of living principles and a definite policy. This it can never become under the leadership of men of the Merriam type. Indeed, the nomination of such a man is the most conclusive proof that the party has fallen away from its former high estate, and that its self constituted leaders have turned their backs upon its high ideals.

It will be urged that at its worst the Republican party, is better than the Democratic party, with its hideous record. But, clearly, it is not enough to maintain the party supremacy that it is no worse than others and that others are no better than itself. That is no reason for supporting a party. Politics is something more than a choice between a rascal and a knave. We are confronted at this moment in this state with questions of the utmost significance to society, to labor, to our agricultural and industrial interests, to the prosperity and good name of the state. They cannot be dealt with by charlatans and boodlers and cowards. They are not to be evaded by the stale tricks of false alarms, by the shouting of party shibboleths, or obsolete appeal to party loyalty. When a disgraceful nomination is thrust upon the party, when Republican are threatened with party ostracization if they refuse to support a notorious corruptionist for the highest state office, it is worst possible treachery to the Republican party and Republican principles to tamely accept the situation and support the tainted ticket. It is this servility to party leaders, this slavish obedience to the machine that breeds political corruption, and poisons the foundations of government. The truest loyalty to the Republican party lies in most outspoken and earnest opposition to the machine-despotism which has the effrontery to foist its own venal and corrupt instrument upon the party, and demand that they be supported because they were "regularly nominated." That is sun pure Republicanism.

Owen Can Be Elected.

St. Paul News.

Owen can be elected.

Reports from all over the State show that instead of a backward there is a forward movement in behalf of the Alliance.

The efforts of the old parties and particularly the Merriamites, to wheedle Alliance men into the support of the old party tickets is proving a lamentable failure.

The Alliance has victory in its grasp. If it fails it will be its own fault.

When the movement was inaugurated we do not suppose any one anticipated it had prospect of success other than by indirection—that is, by polling a sufficient vote to command respect from the old parties and bring one or the other to their platform as a matter of self defense. But circumstances have now changed, and especially during the past month [illegible] candid and [illegible] that Mr. Owen's chance [illegible] exceedingly [illegible] equal to that of either Merriam or Wilson.

The most tremendous efforts by party pleas and the use of money will be made to whip the members of the Alliance into the support of Merriam.

We confess to have had some doubts as to whether such efforts might not be successful, but reports we now receive indicate that they cannot be.

And why should they be successful?

Why should an earnest, sincere member of the Alliance party betray it because he formerly belonged to an organization by another name?

What does party name signify in comparison with the doctrines of a party which will rob the producing and industrial classes?

That is the issue, and while we do not say as a positive prediction that Mr. Owen will be the next Governor of Minnesota, we do say in all candor and sincerity, that if the Alliance organization and its supporters both in and out of the organization, stand by their guns, his success is sure.

The responsibility for failure, if it comes, will rest upon the Alliance and its friends themselves.

They have only to stand firm and their initial success in Minnesota will prove the greatest political triumph this country has ever seen.

When the old-time politician approaches you with the request to vote his ticket, just flash upon him the following:

Farmers' Alliance Platform.

First—We demand the free coinage of gold and silver, and that the silver dollar or silver certificate issued by the government upon the silver bullion shall be legal tender for the payment of all debts, both public and private, thereby restoring silver to it's time honored place in our momentary system under the constitution.

Second—We demand that the government loan money direct to the people upon demand at a low rate of interest and take as security thereof real estate; said amount loaned not to exceed one half of the assessed valuation of said real estate, when free from all incumbrance. We believe American lands are the best security for American money.

Third—We demand that the government establish sub-treasuries for the use of the agricultural districts for the storing of grain, cotton or tobacco, and loan the owners thereof 80 per cent. of the value of all produce that they have in store at 2 per cent. per annum under rules and regulations established by the U. S. government.

Fourth—We demand the repeal of the war-tariff tax, which long has been and is a greivious burden upon the producers of the wealth of the nation and that we favor a tariff upon all articles of luxury only to be imposed to pay the current expenses of the government honestly administered, and that a graduated tax be levied upon all incomes in excess of $2,000 per annum.

Fifth—We demand the continuance of prohibition in the state and favor the national abolition of the liquor traffic.

Sixth—We demand government ownership of all railroads, telegraph lines and coal mines, in the interests of the people.

Seventh—We demand equal suffrage.

Eighth—We demand that our state adopt the Australian system of conducting elections.

Ninth—We demand that the constitution of the United States be so amended that United States Senators, President and Vice-President be elected by the direct vote of the people of each state.

Tell him that no party in existance, except the Alliance party, demands these and all of these things, and it is high time that farmers began to legislate for their own interests. Do not be fooled by specious arguments into voting against your own interests.

The Pioneer Press and other papers with monopolistic tendencies are just now trying very hard to convince voters that all the alliance rally is is a trap set by the wily democrats to catch unwary voters. But the Pioneer Press never raised wheat at less than cost and tried to support a family that way; never paid exhorbitant freight rates on account of watered stock and raised wheat at a loss to do it; never raised stock at a loss to support the beef trust; never endured the trials under which the farmers sweat and groan in a vain endeavor to pay that soul killing mortgage and therefore the Pioneer Press knows nothing about the situation or nothing about the object of the alliance. Of what avail to the farmer is party triumph when it brings him no relief? The alliance seeks means to remedy the evils under which agriculture is suffering and will not be influenced by such bugbears as such monopolistic sheets may hatch up. The farmers are not after democratic success, republican success or any other success save only agricultural success. S. M. Owen is the only candidate pledged to this end.

C. O. Christianson, nominee for Judge of Probate has filled that office acceptably and ably and will no doubt be re-elected. He has been a citizen of Polk county for many years; was once county commissioner by appointment; has an extensive acquaintance in this county and so well and favorably known that his election is conceded by all. Vote for O. O. Christianson.

Attention, Alliance Officers.

Some of the secretaries fail to do their duty by neglecting to report the names of members, the number, etc., to the County Secretary, Nels Muus, of Fertile, Minn. Those who have not done so, do so at once. Don't delay this matter any longer; the officers should do their duty and do it at once. Let every alliance hold weekly meetings from now until the election, and let every voter attend these meetings, as the time is short before election. Hold your meetings often from now on. It would be best where there are many farmers or workingmen in a town who are not members of the alliance to organize an alliance club, as many will join an alliance club who would not, or who cannot join the farmers' alliance.

NELS MUUS,
Sec. County Alliance.

Organize Alliance Clubs.

Organize an alliance club in every village in the county, and in every township except those where every man, or almost every man, belongs to the farmers' alliance, as you will get men in who would not otherwise be with you. For a constitution for an alliance club, and how to organize, address D. E. Hallestad, Atty. at Law, Crookston, Minn. Clubs of this kind have already been organized in Crookston and Red Lake Falls. Organize well; get every man in the town to join you. We want to see an alliance club in every town in the county before October 10th. Don't wait for some one else to take hold of this matter, but do it yourselves. Go at it now, every man who wants Owen elected.

Stock Farm for Sale.

Consisting of 600 acres, lying on Maple Lake, in the town of Godfrey, includes the old townsite of Maple Bay 80 acres fenced for pasture; 160 acres under the plow, balance hay land and timber; house, barn, granary and good well; one of the best located farms for stock in the famous Maple Lake region. Also 50 acres heavily wooded timber land within 4 miles. Will sell with all my stock and farm machinery if so desired. For full particulars call on W. N. Godfrey, Maple Bay, or JOURNAL office, Crookston. [7-tf]

The Pioneer Press says "it looks very black in several counties in southeast Minnesota." By this statement it means that the people are determined to vote for themselves once in their lives, at which the monopolistic Pioneer Press frets and fumes like an old hag. But its howls are significant of the coming storm in which the voice of the people will be heard in unmistakable tones demanding justice.

Lost, a small flat key. Leave at JOURNAL office.

Hay seems to be in good demand at good prices.

Ladies call at Mrs. E. E. Bangs' millinery store and examine that elegant stock of millinery. Prices reasonable.

P. L. Ramstad was up from Norman County this week, looking over the political field. He sees heaps of alliance business in Polk County.

The farmers want simple justice in the wheat market and know that their only chance to obtain it is by voting for Owen and a farmer legislature.

THE JOURNAL is requested to announce a meeting of the Farmers' Protective Association on Nov. 6th, at 2 p. m., in the City Hall, Crookston.

The opera house was well filled on Monday with farmers—nearly all voters and a more earnest, determined lot, you never saw. They are all Owen men.

Ole Omlie was over from Grafton last week and took a trip up to Kittson and Marshall Counties. He says it is all Owen up there, as strong as Polk County, at least.

I. U. Jennings and D. E. Hatlestad went up to Tabor on Friday of last week and held an alliance meeting. They report the dwellers in Tabor all alive in the good work.

Reports from all over the state continue encouraging and if everybody who would like to see Owen our governor will vote for him he surely will be elected. He is ahead in the race so far.

Ladies, don't fail to call at the millinery parlors of Mrs. I. U. Jennings, on Robert street, and examine her new stock of elegant fall millinery. Others may imitate, but none can beat her in style and prices.

Aleck McDonald returned from the White Earth survey last week, having had the misfortune to cut his foot badly He says the boys are wading in water ankle deep and having an uncomfortable time generally.

Bro. Bierly, of the Grand Forks News, went up to Red Lake Falls last week to teach Polk County farmers how to vote. He whacked away at Comstock for awhile, but gave that up as a bad job as his audience was not in sympathy with him.

We hope in the next issue to be able to announce that Owen is elected. We believe we shall if the farmers are true to themselves. Owen and a farmers legislature would soon dispel the clouds that now surround our market system, and give us a better price for wheat.

Deacon Bain was up from Fisher on Monday to hear Owen speak and dropped in to renew allegiance to THE JOURNAL. Says he can't get along without THE JOURNAL as long as the fight for a free and open wheat market is on. He will vote for Owen and hopes to see every farmer in the county do the same.

The Merriam crowd is scared out of its wits at the inroads that Owen is making and they are trying all manner of dodges to check him. Never mind, stand true to your interests and Owen will be elected all the same. He will make the best governor Minnesota ever had, zealously guarding the interests of all.

On Friday last A. J. Arnold, an employe in THE JOURNAL office, got his right hand severely pinched in the job press. He is now O. K. again and will be able to vote for Owen with his right hand, whereas he was afraid he would have to cast a left-handed vote. It was a close call, and he is lucky to have escaped so easily.

The results of this campaign cannot help being beneficial to the agricultural interests, even if it does no more than to convince the old parties that there is something wrong which needs attention. It will also convince them that the farmers are, at least, awake to their own necessities and that they are bound to obtain their rights. We hope and expect that it will also elect Owen as our governor.

Although it was a pleasant day, and many farmers have not completed their threshing, the Opera House was packed full to listen to the speech of our next governor, S. M. Owen. Mr. Owen briefly outlined the condition of agriculture to-day, showing that while in 1860 the farmers owned three-fifths of the wealth of the country, to-day they only own two-fifths, and unless they combine in their own interests this state of things will continue at the expense of the farmer. He said that the thinking masses of the United States are beginning to realize this fact more than ever before, and the result will be emancipation for the farmer. Mr. Owen spoke earnestly for over two hours and was listened to with earnest attention to the close. At the close, Hon. H. Steenerson followed in an eloquent speech, urging his hearers to work and vote for S. M. Owen and the alliance cause. His speech was cheered to the echo.

A Sad Accident.

On Friday last, Einer G. Rude, son of Ole E. Rude, who lives on section 10, in Fairfax, went out to feed the hogs at about 2 p. m. He was in the habit of getting into the pen to keep the large ones away from the trough while the smaller hogs ate awhile, using a small whip for the purpose. In the lot was a two-year-old boar, and as he climbed into the pen that time the animal attacked him. His cries brought his uncle to the rescue, who was sacking wheat in the granary near by, who succeeded in getting the boy out of the way of the now infuriated brutes, but not until a main artery had been severed. The boy was carried to the house and a neighbor dispatched to the city for a physiciean, but too late, as the injured boy died in about twenty minutes after being taken from the pen. The father was sent for but arrived too late to see his boy alive. He at once killed the ferocious brute that had robbed him of a son. The boy was about twelve years old and was becoming a great help to his father and mother. The funeral services are to be observed on Friday, the 31st inst.

"It was grand," was the universal verdict upon Owen's speech.

Frank Cernousek came down from Tabor on Monday to hear Mr. Owen speak. Says Tabor is almost solid for Owen and the legislative ticket.

P. C. Schmidt intended to have moved to Duluth this week but owing to the illness of Mrs. S. was unable to do so. His many friends here will regret to see him leave us.

The boys who came in from Fosston to hear Mr. Owen speak, had to pay their own fare. Those who came to hear Merriam, did not pay a cent fare, but Owen will get the votes.

If we attempted to mention every man who came down on the Fertile train it would require several columns of space. There were a host and every one a straight alliance man.

THE JOURNAL is informed that thousands of tickets have been printed with Alliance Ticket at the head but the rest is filled up with the candidates of other parties. Look out for these frauds.

Geo. Tripp was in from Mentor on Monday and gladdened the heart of the printer with a little wherewithal on subscription. He also listened with pleasure to the speech of S. M. Owen.

Business men, the things that the farmers seek to accomplish by legislation are just as much for your interests as for that of the farmers themselves. Why can you not help them by your votes?

Mayor McKinnon has taken possession of his new office (we mean the one in the new block, not the senatorial—that is in doubt as yet) and he looks as snug as a bug in a rug. The building will be a great credit to the city.

Four colts, from 1 to 3 years old, mares with foal and other work horses. fine stallion, span ponies, buggy and double harness at $125, several Berkshire and Poland China hogs, or fresh milch cows, at $15 to $25, call on

D. N. TAYLOR.

The best way to build up our country is to save as much of the wheat money at home as possible. Farmers expect to do this by proper legislation and business men should stand by them in their laudable attempt. Vote for Owen and the farmers legislature.

E. E. Abbott came down from Mentor on Monday to ask us "what's hay seed worth?" The same question a flunkey cab-driver in St. Paul asked us one evening last fall and which we never could just answer until now, and now we have decided that it is way above par.

The Chronicle published a review of Owen's speech in which it attempted to belittle the alliance candidate, he was only the farmers' candidate, &c. Well, it seems strange to us that any one living in this country and knowing the condition of the wheat market can venture to oppose the farmers in their efforts to obtain a free and open wheat market.

S. M. Owen, by his calm, impassioned manner won hosts of friends in Polk County. His countenance bears the impress of honesty and uprightness, and no one in that vast audience but felt if Owen was elected governor we would have an honest, upright and capable man at the helm. The only pledge he has given as yet is that if elected he will discharge his duties to the best of his ability.

And right here we wish to thank those of our friends who on Monday dropped in to give us a cheering word of encouragment and to set that subscription ahead a peg. We hope when they get to publishing a paper their patrons will all do likewise. And we wish to remember the new friends who came in to order THE JOURNAL sent to their address. It shall be our endeavor to merit their good opinion ever.

Miss Sophia Aaker, daughter of L. K. Aaker, register of the U. S. Land office was united for life to E. B. Steensland, of Madison Wis., on Wednesday evening of last week. The ceremony was performed at the Norwegian Lutheran church by the pastor Rev. Roalqvam, in presence of hundreds of the brides friends. A reception was given at McKinnon hall immediately thereafter when a bounteous wedding feast was spread. The happy couple left last week for their new home followed by the best wishes of hosts of friends.

Another Pioneer Gone.

On Friday last, Oct. 24th, Mr. Joseph Barrett, one of the pioneer settlers entered into rest at his residence in this city aged 66 years. Mr. Barrett was born in St. Cuthbert Canada and came to the United States in 1842. He was married in 1845 to a Miss Rondeau who preceded him to the better world but a few months. Mr. B. came to Crookston in 1871, being one of the first to settle at this point and has lived here ever since. By his quiet undemonstrative manner he had made many friends who mingle their sympathy with the grief of mourning relatives. The funeral services were attended on Monday by a large concourse of friends.

A Card Of Condolence.

The members of the Association St. Jean Baptiste, of Crookston, learn with profound regret of the death of their esteemed member, Mr. Joseph Barett. At a special meeting presided over by Mr. Elie Asselin, motion was made by Mr. Louis Fontaine, seconded by Mr. Auguste Munn, that we offer our sincere sympathies to the bereaved family. Moved by Mr. Abraham Munn, seconded by Zepherin Geroux that a copy of these resolutions be furnished to the Crookston, newspapers, and to the Le Canadien, of St. Paul, with a request to publish.

Elsewhere we present the views of State Auditor Braden on the Railroad amendment. Vote No on that amendment.

The candidate who depends for his election upon tearing down the character of his opponent richly deserves to be thoroughly beaten at the polls.

Chas. Robbeck was down from Thief River Falls this week. Charlie is a Crookston old-timer and is coming wealth in a hotel up there. Says the alliance strength is wonderful in that neighborhood.

The Fosston extra train came in on Monday loaded down with enthusiastic Alliance men. They all declare that there are nothing but Alliance votes on that line.

C. E. Cragin was up from Ada this week, feeling the political pulse from a democratic stand-point. He did not find many of that creed yet alive in old Polk County.

The figures given by the experts as to the cost of construction of the Crookston & Northern furnish interesting data to those who wonder why farmers kick against railroads.

Mr. E. Roberts pounded out about 16 bushels per acre of No 1 Hard and is getting 89 cents per bushel. He is satisfied that good farming pays better than poor in this country.

Alderman & Sylvester have the contract for putting the tin on the roof of the new opera house block. This firm has been doing a rushing business this summer.

If Crookston is obliged to give the $50,000 bonds does Merriam get $10,000 of it? Those who are so dead struck on Merriam might possibly learn something about his "business" methods by looking this matter up.

THE JOURNAL force has been rushed with work this week and it has been impossible to get all the help we needed. We would like to hire a good active boy for the winter one having had some experience at type setting preferred.

John Locken is a very popular man in Polk County. He has amply proved his capacity for business since he lived in Polk County and now he will be called to a further test in the office of Register of Deeds for the coming term. Vote for Locken.

The latest reports obtainable show a very flattering prospect of the election of S. M. Owen and a farmer legislature. In the southern part of the state, the farmers are all enthusiastic and they will have a big city vote also. We fully believe that if the farmers are true to their own interests, they will win by a good majority. Then we may hope to see some attention paid to our market system.

Proposals for Bids.

Bids will be received by the Recorder of the village of Red Lake Falls, Minn., until Nov. 3d, 1890, at 12 o'clock m., for drilling a flowing well at the southwest corner of Second street and Champagne avenue in said village. The village to furnish tubing. The same to be paid for in village orders on the general fund. The right is hereby reserved to reject any or all bids.

Dated Red Lake Falls, Minn., Oct. 21st, 1890.

Elsewhere, in our advertising columns, appears a communication signed by Ole Hagen and others which we consider an uncalled for and wholly gratuitous attack upon a worthy and well-qualified official, Prof. Thomas Casey. Prof. Casey has been a faithful and efficient official since he took charge of our schools discharging his duties in a creditable manner and meriting the commendation of all. Thus far this campaign has been conducted almost without any mud throwing by the candidates and this uncalled for attack made simply and solely to aid the candidacy of Even J. Grefthen should, and will doubtless fail of its intended purpose. It is a mighty weak stick whose reputation has to be built up at the expense of the reputation of another man and even if the charge was true it does not make Even J. Grefthen a better man nor one bit better qualified for the position. That he has not placed himself in a position before the people of the county to prove to their satisfaction his capacity for the office no one but himself is to blame for, because he has had ample opportunities in the past and has not availed himself of them. The people have a right to know whether a candidate is qualified for the position he seeks and it is his business to give them satisfactory evidence if he expects their votes. Mr. Grefthen should have presented himself at the late Polk County Teachers Institute if he is capable of filling the important office of School Superintendent but his excuse for not doing so was that he "had to go home and mark up a stock of goods!" As to Mr. Casey the records show him to be fully capable and efficient, he having taught many of the most important schools in the county, at big salaries and at one time he saved to the county schools over $1,500 that had been lost to them through carelessness and inattention. Mr. C. insisted on re-opening the matter and after much labor succeeded and procured the money. THE JOURNAL deprecates such attacks and while its advertising columns are for the benefit of those who choose to use them, editorially we do not endorse such underhanded attacks as the one referred to.

LET IT STAND.

Vote Against the Proposed Railroad Tax Repeal.

State Auditor Braden Explains the Operations of the Law.

State Auditor Braden addresses the following letter to the St. Paul News in regard to the repeal of the law taxing the gross earnings of railroads:

To the Editor of the Daily News:

So many inquiries have been addressed to this office regarding the repeal of Chapter 2, General Laws of 1887 relating to taxation of railroad companies, which repeal is soon to be voted for or against, that it may not be inappropriate to answer these questions through the columns of the public press. Chapter 3, Special Laws of 1883, provides: "That in consideration of a payment of its gross earnings by the St. Paul, Stillwater & Taylor's Falls Railroad Company it should be exempt from all other forms of assessment and taxation." This payment was to be 1 per cent on its gross earnings for the first three years, 2 per cent for the next seven years, and 3 per cent thereafter.

Section 2 of this act provided that any company owning or operating, or which may hereafter own or operate lines of railroad in this state, might file its acceptance of this provision of this law and thus become subject to it. It will be observed that it was optional with the railroad companies to accept or reject the obligations of this act. Chapter 2, General Laws of 1887, provides that any company owning or operating, or which might hereafter operate lines of railroad within this state, which had not accepted of the law of 1883, should become liable to pay on its gross earnings, as provided by said law, thus placing all the roads on a uniform basis.

Chapter 191 of the General Laws of 1889, provides for the repeal of the law of 1887, which repeal is required by section 32, article 4 of the Constitution, to be submitted to a vote of the people before it can become operative. If the vote be yes, the law of 1887 will be repealed, and the gross earnings of taxation will not apply to the following roads, which have not formally filed an acceptance of the law of 1873 until they do file such acceptance, viz: The Winona & Southwestern: Duluth, Red Wing & Southern, and the Duluth & Winnipeg railroad companies, all new lines and in process of construction at the present time.

The contention of some people is that gross earnings under the inter-state commerce law cannot be collected on passenger or freight traffic passing through the state; that taxes can only be collected on such earnings under the present laws, within the state. There seems to be ground for argument on both sides of this question. The present answer is, however, that the companies do pay on gross earnings within the state and also on traffic passing through the state. In this connection it might be interesting to give the amount paid in by the companies, and also the increase in payment since 1880.

Amount paid in 1880 ....$284,480 94

Hay seems to be in good demand at good prices.

Ladies call at Mrs. E. E. Bangs' millinery store and examine that elegant stock of millinery. Prices reasonable.

P. L. Ramstad was up from Norman County this week, looking over the political field. He sees heaps of alliance business in Polk County.

The farmers want simple justice in the wheat market and know that their only chance to obtain it is by voting for Owen and a farmer legislature.

THE JOURNAL is requested to announce a meeting of the Farmers' Protective Association on Nov. 6th, at 2 p. m., in the City Hall, Crookston.

The opera house was well filled on Monday with farmers—nearly all voters and a more earnest, determined lot, you never saw. They are all Owen men.

Ole Omlie was over from Grafton last week and took a trip up to Kittson and Marshall Counties. He says it is all Owen up there, as strong as Polk County, at least.

I. U. Jennings and D. E. Hatlestad went up to Tabor on Friday of last week and held an alliance meeting. They report the dwellers in Tabor all alive in the good work.

Reports from all over the state continue encouraging and if everybody who would like to see Owen our governor will vote for him he surely will be elected. He is ahead in the race so far.

Ladies, don't fail to call at the millinery parlors of Mrs. I. U. Jennings, on Robert street, and examine her new stock of elegant fall millinery. Others may imitate, but none can beat her in style and prices.

Aleck McDonald returned from the White Earth survey last week, having had the misfortune to cut his foot badly. He says the boys are wading in water ankle deep and having an uncomfortable time generally.

Bro. Bierly, of the Grand Forks News, went up to Red Lake Falls last week to teach Polk County farmers how to vote. He whacked away at Comstock for awhile, but gave that up as a bad job as his audience was not in sympathy with him.

We hope in the next issue to be able to announce that Owen is elected. We believe we shall if the farmers are true to themselves. Owen and a farmers legislature would soon dispel the clouds that now surround our market system, and give us a better price for wheat.

Deacon Bain was up from Fisher on Monday to hear Owen speak and dropped in to renew allegiance to THE JOURNAL. Says he can't get along without THE JOURNAL as long as the fight for a free and open wheat market is on. He will vote for Owen and hopes to see every farmer in the county do the same.

The Merriam crowd is scared out of its wits at the inroads that Owen is making and they are trying all manner of dodges to check him. Never mind, stand true to your interests and Owen will be elected all the same. He will make the best governor Minnesota ever had, zealously guarding the interests of all.

On Friday last A. J. Arnold, an employe in THE JOURNAL office, got his right hand severely pinched in the job press. He is now O. K. again and will be able to vote for Owen with his right hand, whereas he was afraid he would have to cast a left-handed vote. It was a close call, and he is lucky to have escaped so easily.

The results of this campaign cannot help being beneficial to the agricultural interests, even if it does no more than to convince the old parties that there is [illegible]

A Sad Accident.

On Friday last, Einer G. Rude, son of Ole E. Rude, who lives on section 10 in Fairfax, went out to feed the hogs at about 2 p. m. He was in the habit of getting into the pen to keep the large ones away from the trough while the smaller hogs ate awhile, using a small whip for the purpose. In the lot was a two-year-old boar, and as he climbed into the pen that time the animal attacked him. His cries brought his uncle to the rescue, who was sacking wheat in the granary near by, who succeeded in getting the boy out of the way of the now infuriated brutes, but not until a main artery had been severed. The boy was carried to the house and a neighbor dispatched to the city for a physiccian, but too late, as the injured boy died in about twenty minutes after being taken from the pen. The father was sent for but arrived too late to se his boy alive. He at once killed the ferocious brute that had robbed him of a son. The boy was about twelve years old and was becoming a great help to his father and mother. The funeral services are to be observed on Friday, the 31st inst.

"It was grand," was the universal verdict upon Owen's speech.

Frank Cernousek came down from Tabor on Monday to hear Mr. Owen speak. Says Tabor is almost solid for Owen and the legislative ticket.

P. C. Schmidt intended to have moved to Duluth this week but owing to the illness of Mrs. S. was unable to do so. His many friends here will regret to see him leave us.

The boys who came in from Fosston to hear Mr. Owen speak, had to pay their own fare. Those who came to hear Merriam, did not pay a cent fare, but Owen will get the votes.

If we attempted to mention every man who came down on the Fertile train it would require several columns of space. There were a host and every one a straight alliance man.

THE JOURNAL is informed that thousands of tickets have been printed with Alliance Ticket at the head but the rest is filled up with the candidates of other parties. Look out for these frauds.

Geo. Tripp was in from Mentor on Monday and gladdened the heart of the printer with a little wherewithal on subscription. He also listened with pleasure to the speech of S. M. Owen.

Business men, the things that the farmers seek to accomplish by legislation are just as much for your interests as for that of the farmers themselves. Why can you not help them by your votes?

Mayor McKinnon has taken possession of his new office (we mean the one in the new block, not the senatorial—that is in doubt as yet) and he looks as snug as a bug in a rug. The building will be a great credit to the city.

Four colts, from 1 to 3 years old, mares with foal and other work horses, fine stallion, span ponies, buggy and double harness at $125, several Berkshire and Poland China hogs, or fresh milch cows, at $15 to $25, call on

D. N. TAYLOR.

The best way to build up our country is to save as much of the wheat money at home as possible. Farmers expect to do this by proper legislation and business men should stand by them in their laudable attempt. Vote for Owen and the farmers legislature.

E. E. Abbott came down from Mentor on Monday to ask us "what's hay seed worth?" The same question a flunkey cab-driver in St. Paul asked us one evening last fall and which we never could just answer until now, and now we have decided that it is way above par.

The Chronicle published a review of Owen's speech in which it attempted to belittle the alliance candidate, he was only the farmers' candidate, &c. Well, it seems strange to us that any one living in this country and knowing the condition of the wheat market can venture to oppose the farmers in their efforts to obtain a free and open wheat market.

S. M. Owen, by his calm, impassioned manner won hosts of friends in Polk County. His countenance bears the impress of honesty and uprightness. [illegible]

Another Pioneer Gone.

On Friday last, Oct. 24th, Mr. Joseph Barrett, one of the pioneer settlers, entered into rest at his residence in this city, aged 66 years. Mr. Barrett was born in St. Cuthbert, Canada, and came to the United States in 1842. He was married in 1845 to a Miss Rondeau who preceded him to the better world but a few months. Mr. B came to Crookston in 1871, being one of the first to settle at this point and has lived here ever since. By his quiet, undemonstrative manner he had made many friends who mingle their sympathy with the grief of mourning relatives. The funeral services were attended on Monday by a large concourse of friends.

A Card Of Condolence.

The members of the Association St. Jean Baptiste, of Crookston, learn with profound regret of the death of their esteemed member, Mr. Joseph Barett. At a special meeting presided over by Mr. Elie Asselin, motion was made by Mr. Louis Fontaine, seconded by Mr. Auguste Munn, that we offer our sincere sympathies to the bereaved family. Moved by Mr. Abraham Munn, seconded by Zepherin Gerohx that a copy of these resolutions be furnished to the Crookston newspapers, and to the Le Canadien, of St. Paul, with a request to publish.

The ladies will do well to call at Mrs. E. E. Bangs' millinery store for the latest fall styles.

Elsewhere we present the views of State Auditor Braden on the Railroad amendment. Vote No on that amendment.

The candidate who depends for his election upon tearing down the character of his opponent richly deserves to be thoroughly beaten at the polls.

Chas. Robbeck was down from Thief River Falls this week. Charlie is a Crookston old-timer and is coming wealth in a hotel up there. Says the alliance strength is wonderful in that neighborhood.

The Fosston extra train came in on Monday loaded down with enthusiastic Alliance men. They all declare that there are nothing but Alliance votes on that line.

O. E. Oragin was up from Ada this week, feeling the political pulse from a democratic stand-point. He did not find many of that creed yet alive in old Polk County.

The figures given by the experts as to the cost of construction of the Crookston & Northern furnish interesting data to those who wonder why farmers kick against railroads.

Mr. E. Roberts pounded out about 16 bushels per acre of No. 1 Hard and is getting 89 cents per bushel. He is satisfied that good farming pays better than poor in this country.

Alderman & Sylvester have the contract for putting the tin on the roof of the new opera house block. This firm has been doing a rushing business this summer.

If Crookston is obliged to give the $50,000 bonds does Merriam get $10,000 of it? Those who are so dead struck on Merriam might possibly learn something about his "business" methods by looking this matter up.

THE JOURNAL force has been rushed with work this week and it has been impossible to get all the help we needed. We would like to hire a good active boy for the winter one having had some experience at type setting preferred.

Elsewhere, in our advertising columns, appears a communication signed by Ole Hagen and others which we consider an uncalled for and wholly gratuitous attack upon a worthy and well-qualified official, Prof. Thomas Casey. Prof. Casey has been a faithful and efficient official since he took charge of our schools, discharging his duties in a creditable manner and meriting the commendation of all. Thus far this campaign has been conducted almost without any mud throwing by the candidates and this uncalled for attack made simply and solely to aid the candidacy of Even J. Grefthen should, and will doubtless fail of its intended purpose. It is a mighty weak stick whose reputation has to be built up at the expense of the reputation of another man and even if the charge was true it does not make Even J. Grefthen a better man nor one bit better qualified for the position. That he has not placed himself in a position before the people of the county to prove to their satisfaction his capacity for the office no one but himself is to blame for, because he has had ample opportunities in the past and has not availed himself of them. The people have a right to know whether a candidate is qualified for the position he seeks and it is his business to give them satisfactory evidence if he expects their votes. Mr. Grefthen should have presented himself at the late Polk County Teachers Institute if he is capable of filling the important office of School Superintendent but his excuse for not doing so was that he "had to go home and mark up a stock of goods!" As to Mr. Casey the records show him to be fully capable and efficient, he having taught many of the most important schools in the county, at big salaries and at one time he saved to the county schools over $1,500 that had been lost to them through carelessness and inattention. Mr. C. insisted on re-opening the matter and after much labor succeeded and procured the money. THE JOURNAL deprecates such attacks and while its advertising columns are for the benefit of those who choose to use them, editorially we do not endorse such underhanded attacks as the one referred to.

LET IT STAND.

Vote Against the Proposed Railroad Tax Repeal.

State Auditor Braden Explains the Operations of the Law.

State Auditor Braden addresses the following letter to the St. Paul News in regard to the repeal of the law taxing the gross earnings of railroads:

To the Editor of the Daily News:

So many inquiries have been addressed to this office regarding the repeal of Chapter 2, General Laws of 1887 relating to taxation of railroad companies, which repeal is soon to be voted for or against, that it may not be inappropriate to answer these questions through the columns of the public press. Chapter 3, Special Laws of 1883, provides: "That in consideration of a payment of its gross earnings by the St. Paul, Stillwater & Taylor's Falls Railroad Company it should be exempt from all other forms of assessment and taxation." This payment was to be 1 per cent on its gross earnings for the first three years, 2 per cent for the next seven years, and 3 per cent thereafter.

Section 2 of this act provided that any company owning or operating, or which may hereafter own or operate lines of railroad in this state, might file its acceptance of this provision of this law and thus become subject to it. It will be observed that it was optional with the railroad companies to accept or reject the obligations of this act. Chapter 2, General Laws of 1887, provides that any company owning or operating, or which might hereafter operate lines of railroad within this state, which had not accepted of the law of 1883, should become liable to pay on its gross earnings, as provided by said law, thus placing all the roads on a uniform basis.

Chapter 191 of the General Laws of 1889, provides for the repeal of the law of 1887, which repeal is required by section 32, article 4 of the Constitution, to be submitted to a vote of the people before it can become operative. If the vote be yes, the law of 1887 will be repealed, and the gross earnings of taxation will not apply to the following roads, which have not formally filed an acceptance of the law of 1873 until they do file such acceptance, viz: The Winona & Southwestern, Duluth, Red Wing & Southern, and the Duluth & Winnipeg railroad companies, all new lines and in process of construction at the present time.

The contention of some people is that gross earnings under the inter-state commerce law cannot be collected on passenger or freight traffic passing [illegible]

Vote for honest John Locken for register of deeds.

Vote for C. O. Christianson for judge of probate.

Be sure you vote for S. M. Owen and the farmers legislature.

The farmers will evidently stick together this year.

The Merriam bosses are beginning to see that farmers are not all fools.

How about Merriam's foreign twine plant? Another "business administration," ain't it.

THE JOURNAL wishes to see the best interests of the people subserved in this election. Therefore it urges the election of only those best qualified.

What did the Great West say about Merriam's twine plant? Or about his watered stock in the C. D. & N. R'y? Somehow we don't quite remember.

Look out for campaign lies of all kinds—published when too late to be refuted. You have a grand man for Governor and you will elect him if true to your best interests. Vote for Owen and the farmer legislature.

If Owen and a farmers legislature is elected the question as to what can be accomplished will be fully tested. Farmers will at least know that they have their frends at court.

If Owen is elected the old soldiers will have a true friend at court. Old soldiers will not be kicked out to make way for some green boy as under the autocrat Merriam.

Oh, yes! Merriam is a friend of the farmer. (?) The farmers shoula at once most earnestly pray (and vote) to be delivered from all such friends.

While other candidates have been raving about the country for votes, Mat Cornelius has been busy at work in the office of auditor, carefully guarding the people's interests. The people will see that Mat loses nothing by it.

It is against the law to water railroad stock, yet it is said that the stock of the C. D. & N. road was watered $9,000 per mile or so, and that this is the governor's road! "Business administration," did you say? Looks like it, don't it?

As every business man and every laborer in the country depends on the farmer for business, he should cast his vote to aid the farmer in his efforts to secure justice in the markets. If what the system unjustly takes from the farmer, was left at home, business of all kinds would soon feel the effects of it, to the benefit of all. Vote for Owen and a farmer legislature.

The farmers well know that, to obtain their rights, they must either make the alliance cause successful or go to war. They hope to settle the matter at the polls to avoid rebellion, therefore they will vote to elect their men. The farmers know no party in this fight, except the alliance, and the old time hackneyed arguments are not influencing them this fall. The only way for them to obtain their rights is through the alliance.

The Times speaks of Congressman Comstock as having robbed the people of Polk County via the McKinley bill. This gives Mr. Comstock more credit for popularity than even he is entitled to, for it implies that he passed the bill. In matters political the Times is not disposed to give an opponent credit for the good he has done, as the Times man well knows that Mr. Comstock's vote did not pass the bill; that Mr. Comstock labored hard to get free twine and free sugar, and did succeed in getting the tariff on these articles very much modified. Suppose that Mr. C. had voted against the bill, what then? Why, his district would not have had a cent where it did get over $700,000. If Mr. Comstock had been a demagogue he would have voted against the bill, and by that act been the most popular man in Minnesota, but the interests of his constituents would have been neglected by that act, and he well knew it. His action in this very particular shows his manhood, for it required a brave man to take the stand that he did in behalf of the best interests of his constituents. The object of democracy is plainly seen in this fight. By raising a great dust on the tariff question they hope to draw the attention of the voters from the main issue which is the railway and elevator robberies. The alliance seeks to correct these evils while the democratic party and the Merriam party are making no efforts in this direction. To them everything is lovely, and it makes no difference if the farmer does have to keep on raising wheat at a loss. The tariff cuts no earthly figure in this matter, for this reason: that it affects only those who buy the goods upon which it is imposed, and the excessive freight rates of watered stock, and the robberies of the elevator companies leaves the farmer in this country nothing to buy with, so how can the tariff rob him? It is all moonshine and only mentioned by demagogues for political effect! Mr. Comstock has proved a very valuable man for this country and deserves the hearty support of every man in it. His experience will render him more valuable to us in the next congress than in the past, and when the tariff question comes up again he will be found still fighting in the interests of the people. The Times is a democratic sheet, supports Whiteman, but it should be honest and manly about it.

S. M. Owen, the old soldier is a man of the people. That he will make a grand good Governor no one will doubt. Vote for Owen.

The opposition sheets, having diligently hunted all through the campaign to find something against candidate Owen, may, at the last moment, when too late to refute, spring some campaign lie. This should fool nobody into voting against the best interests of the people.

The Pioneer Press is filled with reports of trades and sales between alliance leaders and democrats, but then the Pioneer Press is doing all in its power to defeat the efforts of the farmers to secure a free and open wheat market and able-bodied lies seem to answer its purpose better than otherwise. Do not be fooled by such claptrap. Vote for Owen.

Of course the farmers might all vote for Merriam and elect him—but "would it be wise?" He has done absolutely nothing toward securing competition in the market for them, nothing toward squeezing the water out of railroad stock and nothing but to order cars for them now and then, and even that is his simple duty under the law! How about his watering the stock of his own road, the C. D. & N. $9,000 per mile or thereabouts?

The bosses are frantically beseeching the farmer to stand by what they call the republican party while they ENDORSE A DEMOCRAT for the legislature. Seems that they prefer a business man though a democrat, to an honest man if a farmer! And what has the poor farmer done? Why, simply asked for a fair show in the market, equal rights with other men. And for this the bosses malign and decry him.

It is a pitiable sight to see the depths of humility into which the Merriam managers, who call themselves the republican party in this district, ENDORSE A DEMOCRAT for the legislature. No plainer evidence could be given of their mortal fear of the honest farmer vote than this and they can but too plainly see the hand writing on the wall, when they have to depend on a democrat to rake their chestnuts out of the fire! Alas, poor Yorrick!

"Vote the straight ticket" has been the party war-cry for time immemorial but now the old parties are scared to death lest the honest granger will take them literally at their word. That's just what they don't want them to do at this time as it is liable to bust all of their fine-spun schemes. The farmers have learned their lesson so well that now the bosses are mortally afraid that they will vote the alliance ticket straight.

"Rally round the little schoolhouse" is the war-cry in Wisconsin, and "rally round the granary" should be that of Minnesota. For Wisconsin the little schoolhouse is in danger and in Minnesota the granary is in the grip of the elevator and railroad combine. "Rally round the little granary," farmers, vote to protect your own interests for once in your lives. Your candidate for Governor is a true man and if you are true you will elect him.

The Merriam crowd have laid great stress upon the principles of the republican party, (just as if they knew or cared anything about principle,) and have cried out in holy horror when any independent paper has advocated the election of a former democrat for poundmaster or some unimportant office like that, but now we find them in this district endorsing and supporting S. B. Cragin, the democratic nominee for the legislature. This action, taken simply to secure party success, shows plainly that they have no principles in the matter and that they are wholly unworthy to be trusted. They have pretended that it was "the principles of the republican party" for which they have been contending, and their action in this matter gives the lie direct to their claims. It is their own selfish plans they are after and no other purpose, and they are willing to support a democrat or any other man who will be their tool, to carry out their schemes. It is the action of these schemers that has driven every honest republican into rebellion and forced him to appeal to the ballot. Republican principles are all right, but the cabal now in power does not represent these principles and the people are beginning to find this out.

Of all the silly lies that are told in this campaign, is the one that S. M. Owen receives $50 for every speech he makes. It is an insult, not only to Mr. Owen himself, but to the farmers themselves. It implies that they should be dependent upon kid glove orators who come around with brass bands and free railroad trains. Oh, no, this kind do not demand $100 or $50 of the farmers at their meetings, but they and their backers steal more out of the granary to pay for their expensive blowouts than ten times $50. The lie about Mr. Owen is told under the impression that it injures him and the farmers' cause, but the farmers are not such a set of precious fools as the writers thereof think. Farmers would be totally devoid of sense to take any stock in such silly twaddle, and the only attention they pay to it is to laugh at the brainless fools who indulge in such lies. The farmers are paying only the expenses of their campaign, and it makes them [illegible] dependence to all them.

John Locken, alliance candidate for register of deeds, is an honest farmer living near this city. He has had a sufficient experience in business to qualify him for the position to which he aspires, having been for some time engaged in mercantile pursuits, and for two terms city treasurer of Crookston. The Merriam crowd made strenuous efforts to proselyte him to their own use, but he remained firm to the trust reposed in him by the farmers and refused to betray their cause. Vote for honest John Locken.

The farmers have an idea that if they can elect their governor and legislature they can correct the evils that exist in the markets and thus have more money to buy the necessaries and comforts of home. They have nominated a superior man for governor to any other candidate in the field, and many business men will vote for Owen, knowing that if the farmers succeed it will be to the interest of business men, and if the farmers, after electing their men, do not succeed, they will then be satisfied that the evils that afflict them cannot be cured by legislation, and Owen is a safe man to tie to. Thus reason many business men in our city, and they are right. Owen will have thousands of votes outside of farmers themselves.

Before another issue of THIS JOURNAL the important question: "who will be our Governor?" will have been answered at the polls, and upon the answer, depends, in a large degree, the welfare of the farmers of Minnesota. The Alliance has nominated a man of broad experience, one who understands the inequalities of the present system and who, if elected, will do all in his power to correct the evils of which they justly complain. We believe that, if the farmers are only true to their own interests, Mr. Owen will be elected by a grand majority for there are hundreds in our cities and villages, who are in full sympathy with the farmer in his effort to secure justice in the market and they will vote with him. The condition of the market last fall, and also to-day shows conclusively that no relief is to be expected from the present powers that be, and the only thing to do is to change the deal by electing a farmer Governor.

Governor Merriam is said to be a "business Governor," that is a governor in the interests of business men. Well, we have not heard that railroad men, elevator men, bankers and other business men were kicking—and they have no reason to. Agriculture, however, is suffering for attention which it does not get, and it is not so much a matter of wonder when we consider how little Governor Merriam knows about agriculture and its needs.

For once, if never before, the farmers are in earnest and will try the effect of united action on the situation. They will elect their own governor and legislature to make their laws and execute them. In Mr. Owen they have selected the best man for the business they could have found. And hundreds of business men will vote to help them in their honest endeavor to secure a free and open wheat market.

The Merriam crowd cannot find words in the English language venomous enough to express their opinions of papers that are trying to help the farmers to get a free and untrammeled wheat market, intimating that all the farmers are after is to elect some democrat to office, but here in this district we find these simon pure howlers endorsing a democrat for one of the most important offices in the gift of the people. "Oh, consistency thou art a jewel!"

Two important amendments to the constitution are to be voted upon next Tuesday. The one relating to trials by jury provides that in civil cases five-sixths of the jury is sufficient to render a verdict. We can see no good reason why this amendment should carry. Vote no upon it by marking out the "Yes." The other amendment relates to the taxation of railroads. Under this proposed amendment the roads would have the privilege of choosing the method of taxation, and it strikes us that this would be of no benefit to the people. This amendment, in our judgment should be voted down.

That's pretty good for "the farmers' friend," the business governor! Build a road for $7,000 per mile, bond it for $16,000 per mile and then ask the city of Crookston to put up $50,000 bonus! Let's see, the candidate for county attorney was in the deal, too, wasn't he? Now he asks you to vote for him and Merriam! Well, you might do so, but would it be wise!!

Another Campaign Lie.

THE JOURNAL is informed that a story is in circulation affecting the honesty of E. M. Walsh and M. E. Kirsch, charging them with stealing county funds. The story, we are glad to say, does not originate with the candidates themselves but seems to be the product of the fertile imagination of an old superannuated [illegible], who having a little smattering of education seems to think he knows it all, but it is told in the hope of benefiting certain candidates. Wherever Walsh and Kirsch are known this silly attack needs no refutation as they are known to be honest and upright men, but Mr. Walsh does not intend to allow such stories affecting his honesty to go abroad among strangers uncontradicted and proposes to make it exceeding [illegible] for the originator of the [illegible] slander. Such stories always [illegible] the cause they are told to advance.

County Superintendent of Schools.

FISHER, Oct. 27, 1890.

ED. POLK COUNTY JOURNAL.—At this critical period allow us, Sir, if you please, a little of your space to bring under the notice of your numerous readers a few facts pertaining to the office of County Superintendent of Schools as well as to the capabilities of its present incumbent. This office, as I presume all will allow, should be held by a man who is capable of instructing both teachers and scholars, as well as one who has proved by his examinations and his work, his claim to his statements. In a large county, like Polk County, the largest organized school district in our state, it behooves our voters to enquire carefully into the capabilities of the applicant for their votes, and not to accept the claptrap of political aspirants as the sum total of their abilities. In such an important office as the one I am writing about, the voter should carefully weigh in the balances the essentials of the office and then equally carefully calculate which of the candidates most fully conforms to the ideal standard. Doubtless any man would fail in reaching the highest mark on every point, but that should not deter us from giving the best man our vote. In order then that our voters may vote intelligently on this important office, allow me to put forward a few important points which I hope will lead them to continue their confidence in our present occupant.

First, then, as to the ability of Mr. Casey. This gentleman is an educated man—that no one will deny, for he has the papers to show it. He is an experienced man, and that I will show. Seven years ago Mr. Casey had charge of the Carman school, then he was employed as principal of the Fisher school which position he held for two years, then he took charge of the grammar department of the city school of Crookston, thence he proceeded to Grand Forks and took charge of the graded schools of that city. The Fisher folks, after trying a variety of teachers, found that they could not get such an one as Mr. Casey and so offered him $100 a month if he would come back, and when I say Fisher people I do not mean the trustees of the school, but I mean the people petitioned the trustees to get him back at almost any price. Here he stayed till called to the present high position he holds. That the people amongst whom he lived for so long should revere and like him is a pretty good testimony as to his ability and character. I know no better one.

Now, as to the way he has filled his office since he has been superintendent. The county commissioners, who should be judge, say the office has never been so well filled before. Dilligent and cautious, the schools have been well supplied with good teachers, and what is more, he has not been afraid to refuse to grant certificates where they had not been earned. When Mr. Casey came into office a year ago, everything was in a state of chaos, and through his representations to the proper authorities, the school districts of the county have recovered $1,543.76 which was lost to it through the negligence or oversight of his predecessor. The vouchers for this can be seen at the office. Again the holder of a graded certificate is no longer a laughing stock to his or her incompetency, as one who holds such has now to earn it. Moreover, Mr. D. L. Kiehle, the State Superintendent, stated publicly that he saw a marked improvement on the thoroughness of the teachers, and asked the people to stand by the one who had brought about such salutary change. Now, the people of Polk County are asked to oust this tried and found capable servant out of office and put in—who? A person by the name of Grefthen—and why? Well, God only knows, for nobody else seems to. However, let us look at his qualifications and give the devil his due. Mr. Grefthen claims he is well qualified to fill this office. Let us see. If so, why did he not come out last spring to the examinations when every teacher in the county was called out? It does look very much like his owning up his incompetence. Again, Mr. Grefthen has the unspeakable credit of holding a second grade certificate, and that is the only certificate he ever held until the 11th day of last month when he journeyed all the way to Iowa to get what he calls a "first grade" certificate. This he DID NOT obtain in spite of his assertions. He did get what is called in Iowa a "first-class" certificate, but not a "first grade," and there is as much difference in the two, as there is in the "first reader" and the "first book of Euclid." The only thing alike being the "first." In fact, it is not quite equal to the Polk County third grade! I will prove what I say. He was not examined in any one of the higher branches, not even in algebra, geometry, philosophy, physical geography nor any science. Yet he has a "first class" certificate! Why did Mr. Grefthen have to go to Iowa to pass his examinations? The people here have an idea that a first grade certificate from Polk County is nearly good enough for them. It seems to me like buying a broncho when we can get a good American horse cheaper. Mr. Grefthen also holds a kind of credential, (?) a recommend which he obtained from a superintendent in Dakota. This person's name is Kennedy, and he was barely elected to office himself. Moreover, Mr. Grefthen informed a friend of the writer that it was through his influence (?) that the said Kennedy got there at all. Hence the recommend.

How is it that this shining light has been wasting its fragrance on the desert air all these years, instead of teaching the young ideas "how to shoot?" How is it that all at once he blossoms out as a "first class" teacher with a second grade certificate? Of course it could not be for the purpose of self aggrandisement. Sir, when you get right down to it and view the matter in all its lights, it is an insult to the intelligence of Polk County voters to think that they will support such a man for such an office.

Please excuse the length of this letter. The importance of the case must plead for me. I care for no office in comparison with this. This should be free above politics, and only tried men should be put in, men capable and educated and not those who have to go to another state to obtain a third grade certificate. Respectfully,

[illegible]

St. Paul Daily News.

Almost the only rallying cry of the Merriam organs left is that the Alliance is going to pieces.

The days are too short and they are obliged to sit up during the nights to invent stories relative to the break in the Alliance ranks here, and the break in the Alliance ranks there; the consolidation of the Alliance and Democrats on this candidate and on that candidate, etc.

If they had not been absolutely stampeded by political fright, the Merriam gang would see that the iteration and reiteration of these falsehoods proves a complete give away.

The fact that they have withdrawn this man and that man from the Alliance ticket in favor of the Democrats, while atually there has been no such withdrawal, and the Alliance has pursued its aggressive course, as usual, shows the foolish falsity of the stories set afloat.

While it was, perhaps, hardly worthy of dignifying with a notice, nevertheless the official announcement of Secretary Warren of the Alliance State Committee, elsewhere published, should set at rest all those assertions.

The cause is gaining every day.

There is no such thing as looking backward.

A first campaign of a new movement never before had such favorable prospects as the present Alliance campaign.

It is only necessary for the Alliance and its sympathizers to stand unitedly to make the victory in November so complete that its echoes will reverberate from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

But whatever the result, the old parties need not lay the flattering unction to their souls that this is a campaign of [illegible].

The people are enlisted to right their wrongs.

They propose to resort to the peaceful means of the ballot box to remedy the existing evil, and they will not cease their efforts until right and justice has prevailed.

Alliance Prospects.

Minneapolis Times.

The election of S. M. Owens for Governor will not surprise some of the shrewdest politicians and the most astute observers of the trend of things in this campaign. The Alliance platform is the best embodiment of principles and doctrines that appeal to the practical intererests and the moral sense of the intelligent and patriotic citizens. Its candidate for Governor is a man fitted to stand upon such a platform—thoughtful, broad-minded, sincere. His election would give this state an Executive of whom all classes of the people would have reason to feel proud, and through whose administration our great industrial interests would receive just recognition and be lifted to their proper place in the economy of the State.

The Alliance today includes in its membership the best conscience and brains of both the old parties. It stands for the enfranchisement of labor, the elevation of the workingman, the recognition of his rights to an equitable share in the profits of his toil; it unites under its banners the toilers of all classes, and it moves steadily forward to the accomplishment of purposes that put it in the line of human progress toward great and beneficent ends. Nothing could more advantage the State of Minnesota than the success of the Alliance movement this year. It would be the breaking up of machine domination and the death-blow to party despotism. It would put heart and courage into the farmer, and the workingmen of every class. It would be an earthquake shock to the proud corporations and insolent monopolies which now purchase legislators like sheep in the shambles, dictate the policy of the state administration, defy the law and ride roughshod over the people. The election of S. M. Owen would mean a decided change of programme. It would mean rebuke, and repulse, and repudiation by the people of the rings and combinations and bosses. It would mean a new deal—a "full hand" for the workingman—the march of the people to the front, and the relegation of the corporations and Plutocrats to their proper places as the servants of the state, not its masters. The electors of Minnesota have an opportunity this year—the farmers and working classes especially—to prove the stuff they are made of and to demonstrate the sincerity of their professions of administrative reform. From present indications, and from authentic reports from all over the State, The Times is encouraged to hope for the triumph of the Alliance movement in the election of Mr. Owen for Governor. But whether Mr. Owen shall be elected or not a full showing of the real Alliance strength at the polls will have a most salutary effect upon the next Legislature, upon the State administration, and upon public sentiment.

Vote for Grefthen.

The temperance alliance of Polk County, Good Templar and Labor Organizations of this city, held a mass meeting at Montgomery Hall, Crookston, Minn. The object of this meeting was to consult with each other as to the position to be taken at the coming election relating to the election of Superintendent of Schools. They came to the following conclusion, after having mutually pronounced themselves concerning the qualifications and moral character, both in public and private life of the three candidates:—Be it therefore

Resolved, As the incumbent of said office is connected with the education of our youth, we consider it to be against good morals, unchristian and unjust to give our vote to any candidate for said office that we know is a friend of the saloon and does himself use intoxicating liquor as a beverage.

After having carefully examined the moral character of Mr. Thos. Casey, the republican candidate for Superintendent of Schools, it was satisfactorily proved that he is a steady patron at the saloons, consequently he will receive his main support from the saloon element. Therefore we cannot by any means sacrifice our vote for him.

Strong evidence was given which proved that the democratic candidate for said office also is in the habit of using intoxicating liquor, and is a frequent patron at the saloons. Therefore we cannot support him.

As to the alliance candidate for Supt. of Schools, Mr. E. J. Grefthen, is a staunch temperance man, one who has from his infancy been of temperance habits and of unquestionable good moral character. We consider it to be our duty to give him our support and use all honorable means to have him elected.

Moreover, reports are circulating as to Mr. Grefthen's qualifications for said office, and particularly has been circulated by his republican opponent, Mr. Casey, that Mr. Grefthen does not possess ample education to enable him to perform the duties of this important office in a satisfactory manner. Be it therefore

Resolved, That in consideration of certificate, recommendations and endorsements forwarded us from Prof. Breckenridge, Decorah, Iowa, Supt. Kennedy, Traill Co., N. D. and other noted educators, we are fully convinced that Mr. Grefthen is well qualified for the office of Supt. of Schools.

As said office, more than any other in the county, is by far the most important for the numerous growing youth, and as said office more than any other requires a man with good moral character, and as to the three candidates above mentioned the saloon is represented on one side (by the two) and temperance and good moral character on the side (by the one.) Be it therefore

Resolved, That we regard it as the duty of every moral citizen, at the coming election, to vote for E. J. Grefthen for Supt. of Schools of Polk County, Minn.

We earnestly appeal to every qualified voter, both men and women, without regard to party complexion to vote for E. J. Grefthen.

Prof. J. Breckenridge writes to the Red River Dalen, the following:

I am informed that E. J. Grefthen, one of my former students, has received the nomination for superintendent of schools of Polk County, I am sure that the schools of Polk County will not suffer if he is elected superintendent of schools, because he is an active and vigorous worker. FOSSTON, Oct. 24, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL:—In reply to an article in a recent issue of the Thirteen Towns, I will say: I went out to Martin Jensen, explained my business to him and Mrs. Jensen, served the papers, and levied upon the team at Jensen's farm, and not at Crookston, as stated in the Thirteen Towns.

That Mr. and Mrs. Jensen informed me that they had negotiated a loan with A. D. Stephens, and that Mrs. Jensen decided to come to town, get the money from Stephens, pay the execution and take the team home.

That Stephens, under some pretext unknown to me, refused to advance the money.

That Mrs. Jensen then requested me to get a team and take her home.

That I offered to take her home with the team I had levied upon, and that she objected to my driving the team out to the farm and back again, because the roads were bad.

That I refused to hire a team to take Mrs. Jenson home.

That the above statements are true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

[illegible] BRANDT,
Justice of the Peace.

Vote for honest John Locken for register of deeds.

Vote for C. O. Christianson for judge of probate.

Be sure you vote for S. M. Owen and the farmers legislature.

The farmers will evidently stick together this year.

The Merriam bosses are beginning to see that farmers are not all fools.

How about Merriam's foreign twine plant? Another "business administration," ain't it.

THE JOURNAL wishes to see the best interests of the people subserved in this election. Therefore it urges the election of only those best qualified.

What did the Great West say about Merriam's twine plant? Or about his watered stock in the C. D. & N. R'y? Somehow we don't quite remember.

Look out for campaign lies of all kinds—published when too late to be refuted. You have a grand man for Governor and you will elect him if true to your best interests. Vote for Owen and the farmer legislature.

If Owen and a farmers legislature is elected the question as to what can be accomplished will be fully tested. Farmers will at least know that they have their frends at court.

If Owen is elected the old soldiers will have a true friend at court. Old soldiers will not be kicked out to make way for some green boy as under the autocrat Merriam.

Oh, yes! Merriam is a friend of the farmer. (?) The farmers should at once most earnestly pray (and vote) to be delivered from all such friends.

While other candidates have been raving about the country for votes, Mat Cornelius has been busy at work in the office of auditor, carefully guarding the people's interests. The people will see that Mat loses nothing by it.

It is against the law to water railroad stock, yet it is said that the stock of the C. D. & N. road was watered $9,000 per mile or so, and that this is the governor's road! "Business administration," did you say? Looks like it, don't it?

As every business man and every laborer in the country depends on the farmer for business, he should cast his vote to aid the farmer in his efforts to secure justice in the markets. If what the system unjustly takes from the farmer, was left at home, business of all kinds would soon feel the effects of it, to the benefit of all. Vote for Owen and a farmer legislature.

The farmers well know that, to obtain their rights, they must either make the alliance cause successful or go to war. They hope to settle the matter at the polls to avoid rebellion, therefore they will vote to elect their men. The farmers know no party in this fight except the alliance, and the old time hackneyed arguments are not influencing them this fall. The only way for them to obtain their rights is through the alliance.

The Times speaks of Congressman Comstock as having robbed the people of Polk County via the McKinley bill. This gives Mr. Comstock more credit for popularity than even he is entitled to, for it implies that he passed the bill. In matters political the Times is not disposed to give an opponent credit for the good he has done, as the Times man well knows that Mr. Comstock's vote did not pass the bill; that Mr. Comstock labored hard to get free twine and free sugar, and did succeed in getting the tariff on these articles very much modified. Suppose that Mr. C. had voted against the bill, what then? Why, his district would not have had a cent where it did get over $700,000. If Mr. Comstock had been a demagogue he would have voted against the bill, and by that act been the most popular man in Minnesota, but the interests of his constituents would have been neglected by that act, and he well knew it. His action in this very particular shows his manhood, for it required a brave man to take the stand that he did in behalf of the best interests of his constituents. The object of democracy is plainly seen in this fight. By raising a great dust on the tariff question they hope to draw the attention of the voters from the main issue which is the railway and elevator robberies. The alliance seeks to correct these evils while the democratic party and the Merriam party are making no efforts in this direction. To them everything is lovely, and it makes no difference if the farmer does have to keep on raising wheat at a loss. The tariff cuts no earthly figure in this matter, for this reason: that it affects only those who buy the goods upon which it is imposed, and the excessive freight rates of watered stock, and the robberies of the elevator companies leaves the farmer in this country nothing to buy with, so how can the tariff "rob" him? It is all moonshine and only mentioned by demagogues for political effect! Mr. Comstock has proved a very valuable man for this country and deserves the hearty support of every man in it. His experience will render him more valuable to us in the next congress than in the past, and when the tariff question comes up again he will be found still fighting in the interests of the people. The Times, as a democratic sheet, supports Whiteman, but it should be honest and manly about it.

S. M. Owen, the old soldier is a man of the people. That he will make a grand good Governor no one will doubt. Vote for Owen.

The opposition sheets, having diligently hunted all through the campaign to find something against candidate Owen, may, at the last moment, when too late to refute, spring some campaign lie. This should fool nobody into voting against the best interests of the people.

The Pioneer Press is filled with reports of trades and sales between alliance leaders and democrats, but then the Pioneer Press is doing all in its power to defeat the efforts of the farmers to secure a free and open wheat market and able-bodied lies seem to answer its purpose better than otherwise. Do not be fooled by such claptrap. Vote for Owen.

Of course the farmers might all vote for Merriam and elect him—but "would it be wise?" He has done absolutely nothing toward securing competition in the market for them, nothing toward squeezing the water out of railroad stock and nothing but to order cars for them now and then, and even that is his simple duty under the law! How about his watering the stock of his own road, the C. D. & N. $9,000 per mile or thereabouts?

The bosses are frantically beseeching the farmer to stand by what they call the republican party while they ENDORSE A DEMOCRAT for the legislature. Seems that they prefer a business man though a democrat, to an honest man if a farmer! And what has the poor farmer done? Why, simply asked for a fair show in the market, equal rights with other men. And for this the bosses malign and decry him.

It is a pitiable sight to see the depths of humility into which the Merriam managers, who call themselves the republican party in this district, ENDORSE A DEMOCRAT for the legislature. No plainer evidence could be given of their mortal fear of the honest farmer vote than this and they can but too plainly see the hand writing on the wall, when they have to depend on a democrat to rake their chestnuts out of the fire! Alas, poor Yorrick!

"Vote the straight ticket" has been the party war-cry for time immemorial but now the old parties are scared to death lest the honest granger will take them literally at their word. That's just what they don't want them to do at this time as it is liable to bust all of their fine-spun schemes. The farmers have learned their lesson so well that now the bosses are mortally afraid that they will vote the alliance ticket straight.

"Rally round the little schoolhouse" is the war-cry in Wisconsin, and "rally round the granary" should be that of Minnesota. For Wisconsin the little schoolhouse is in danger and in Minnesota the granary is in the grip of the elevator and railroad combine. "Rally round the little granary," farmers, vote to protect your own interests for once in your lives. Your candidate for Governor is a true man and if you are true you will elect him.

The Merriam crowd have laid great stress upon the principles of the republican party, (just as if they knew or cared anything about principle,) and have cried out in holy horror when any independent paper has advocated the election of a former democrat for poundmaster or some unimportant office like that, but now we find them in this district endorsing and supporting S. B. Cragin, the democratic nominee for the legislature. This action, taken simply to secure party success, shows plainly that they have no principles in the matter and that they are wholly unworthy to be trusted. They have pretended that it was "the principles of the republican party" for which they have been contending, and their action in this matter gives the lie direct to their claims. It is their own selfish plans they are after and no other purpose, and they are willing to support a democrat or any other man who will be their tool, to carry out their schemes. It is the action of these schemers that has driven every honest republican into rebellion and forced him to appeal to the ballot. Republican principles are all right, but the cabal now in power does not represent these principles and the people are beginning to find this out.

Of all the silly lies that are told in this campaign is the one that S. M. Owen receives $50 for every speech he makes. It is an insult, not only to Mr. Owen himself, but to the farmers themselves. It implies that they should be dependent upon kid glove orators who come around with brass bands and free railroad trains. Oh no, this kind do not demand $100 or $50 of the farmers at their meetings, but they and their backers steal more out of his granary to pay for their expensive blowouts than ten times $50. The lie about Mr. Owen is told under the impression that it injures him and the farmers' cause, but the farmers are not such a set of precious fools as the writers thereof think. Farmers would be totally devoid of sense to take any stock in such silly twaddle and the only attention they pay to it, is to laugh at the brainless fools who indulge in such lies. The farmers are paying only the expenses of their campaign, and that makes the boodlers tired as it shows too much independence to suit them.

John Locken, alliance candidate for register of deeds, is an honest farmer living near this city. He has had a sufficient experience in business to qualify him for the position to which he aspires, having been for some time engaged in mercantile pursuits, and for two terms city treasurer of Crookston. The Merriam crowd made strenuous efforts to proselyte him to their own use, but he remained firm to the trust reposed in him by the farmers and refused to betray their cause. Vote for honest John Locken.

The farmers have an idea that if they can elect their governor and legislature they can correct the evils that exist in the markets and thus have more money to buy the necessaries and comforts of home. They have nominated a superior man for governor to any other candidate in the field, and many business men will vote for Owen, knowing that if the farmers succeed it will be to the interest of business men, and if the farmers, after electing their men, do not succeed, they will then be satisfied that the evils that afflict them cannot be cured by legislation, and Owen is a safe man to tie to. Thus reason many business men in our city, and they are right. Owen will have thousands of votes outside of farmers themselves.

Before another issue of THE JOURNAL the important question: "who will be our Governor?" will have been answered at the polls, and upon the answer, depends, in a large degree, the welfare of the farmers of Minnesota. The Alliance has nominated a man of broad experience, one who understands the inequalities of the present system and who, if elected, will do all in his power to correct the evils of which they justly complain. We believe that, if the farmers are only true to their own interests, Mr. Owen will be elected by a grand majority for there are hundreds in our cities and villages, who are in full sympathy with the farmer in his effort to secure justice in the market and they will vote with him. The condition of the market last fall, and also to-day shows conclusively that no relief is to be expected from the present powers that be, and the only thing to do is to change the deal by electing a farmer Governor.

Governor Merriam is said to be a "business Governor," that is a governor in the interests of business men. Well, we have not heard that railroad men, elevator men, bankers and other business men were kicking—and they have no reason to. Agriculture, however, is suffering for attention which it does not get, and it is not so much a matter of wonder when we consider how little Governor Merriam knows about agriculture and its needs.

For once, if never before, the farmers are in earnest and will try the effect of united action on the situation. They will elect their own governor and legislature to make their laws and execute them. In Mr. Owen they have selected the best man for the business they could have found. And hundreds of business men will vote to help them in their honest endeavor to secure a free and open wheat market.

The Merriam crowd cannot find words in the English language venomous enough to express their opinions of papers that are trying to help the farmers to get a free and untrammeled wheat market, intimating that all the farmers are after is to elect some democrat to office, but here in this district we find these simon pure howlers endorsing a democrat for one of the most important offices in the gift of the people. "Oh, consistency thou art a jewel!"

Two important amendments to the constitution are to be voted upon next Tuesday. The one relating to trials by jury provides that in civil cases five-sixths of the jury is sufficient to render a verdict. We can see no good reason why this amendment should carry. Vote no upon it by marking out the "Yes." The other amendment relates to the taxation of railroads. Under this proposed amendment the roads would have the privilege of choosing the method of taxation, and it strikes us that this would be of no benefit to the people. This amendment, in our judgment, should be voted down.

That's pretty good for "the farmers friend," the business governor! Build a road for $7,000 per mile, bond it for $16,000 per mile and then ask the city of Crookston to put up $50,000 bonus! Let's see, the candidate for county attorney was in the deal, too, wasn't he? Now he asks you to vote for him and Merriam!! Well, you might do so, but "would it be wise!!"

Another Campaign Lie.

THE JOURNAL is informed that a story is in circulation affecting the honesty of E. M. Walsh and M. E. Kirsch, charging them with stealing county funds. The story, we are glad to say does not originate with the candidates themselves but seems to be the product of the fertile imagination of an old superannuated henhuzzy, who having a little smattering of education, seems to think he knows it all, but it is told in the hope of benefitting certain candidates. Wherever Walsh and Kirsch are known this silly attack needs no refutation as they are known to be honest and upright men, but Mr. Walsh does not intend to allow such stories affecting his honesty, to go abroad among strangers uncontradicted and proposes to make it exceedingly warm for the originator of the baseless slander. Such stories always injure the cause they are calculated to advance.

County Superintendent of Schools.

FISHER, Oct. 27, 1890.

ED. POLK COUNTY JOURNAL:—At this critical period allow us, Sir, if you please, a little of your space to bring under the notice of your numerous readers a few facts pertaining to the office of County Superintendent of Schools, as well as to the capabilities of its present incumbent. This office, as I presume all will allow, should be held by a man who is capable of instructing both teachers and scholars, as well as one who has proved by his examinations and his work, his claim to his statements. In a large county, like Polk County, the largest organized school district in our state, it behooves our voters to enquire carefully into the capabilities of the applicant for their votes, and not to accept the claptrap of political aspirants as the sum total of their abilities. In such an important office as the one I am writing about, the voter should carefully weigh in the balances the essentials of the office and then equally carefully calculate which of the candidates most fully conforms to the ideal standard. Doubtless any man would fail in reaching the highest mark on every point, but that should not deter us from giving the best man our vote. In order then that our voters may vote intelligently on this important office, allow me to put forward a few important points which I hope will lead them to continue their confidence in our present occupant.

First, then, as to the ability of Mr. Casey. This gentleman is an educated man—that no one will deny, for he has the papers to show it. He is an experienced man, and that I will show. Seven years ago Mr. Casey had charge of the Carman school, then he was employed as principal of the Fisher school which position he held for two years, then he took charge of the grammar department of the city school of Crookston, thence he proceeded to Grand Forks and took charge of the graded schools of that city. The Fisher folks, after trying a variety of teachers, found that they could not get such an one as Mr. Casey and so offered him $100 a month if he would come back, and when I say Fisher people I do not mean the trustees of the school, but I mean the people petitioned the trustees to get him back at almost any price. Here he stayed till called to the present high position he holds. That the people amongst whom he lived for so long should revere and like him is a pretty good testimony as to his ability and character. I know no better one.

Now, as to the way he has filled his office since he has been superintendent. The county commissioners, who should be judge, say the office has never been so well filled before. Dilligent and cautious, the schools have been well supplied with good teachers, and what is more, he has not been afraid to refuse to grant certificates where they had not been earned. When Mr. Casey came into office a year ago, everything was in a state of chaos, and through his representations to the proper authorities the school districts of the county have recovered $1,513.76 which was lost to it through the negligence or oversight of his predecessor. The vouchers for this can be seen at the office. Again the holder of a graded certificate is no longer a laughing stock to his or her incompetency, as one who holds such has now to earn it. Moreover, Mr. D. L. Kiehle, the State Superintendent, stated publicly that he saw a marked improvement on the thoroughness of the teachers, and asked the people to stand by the one who had brought about such salutary change. Now, the people of Polk County are asked to oust this tried and found capable servant out of office and put in—who? A person by the name of Grefthen—and why? Well, God only knows, for nobody else seems to. However, let us look at his qualifications and give the devil his due. Mr. Grefthen claims he is well qualified to fill this office. Let us see. If so, why did he not come out last spring to the examinations when every teacher in the county was called out? It does look very much like his owning up his incompetence. Again, Mr. Grefthen has the unspeakable credit of holding a second grade certificate, and that is the only certificate he ever held until the 11th day of last month when he journeyed all the way to Iowa to get what he calls a "first grade" certificate. This he DID NOT obtain in spite of his assertions. He did get what is called in Iowa a "first-class" certificate, but not a "first grade," and there is as much difference in the two, as there is in the "first reader" and the "first book of Euclid." The only thing alike being the "first." In fact, it is not quite equal to the Polk County third grade! I will prove what I say. He was not examined in any one of the higher branches, not even in algebra, geometry, philosophy, physical geography, nor any science. Yet he has a "first-class" certificate! Why did Mr. Grefthen have to go to Iowa to pass his examinations? The people here have an idea that a first grade certificate from Polk County is nearly good enough for them. It seems to me like buying a broncho when we can get a good American horse cheaper. Mr. Grefthen also holds a kind of credential, (?) a recommend which he obtained from a superintendent in Dakota. This person's name is Kennedy, and he was barely elected to office himself. Moreover, Mr. Grefthen informed a friend of the writer that it was through his influence (?) that the said Kennedy got there at all. Hence the recommend.

How is it that this shining light has been "wasting its fragrance on the desert air," all these years, instead of teaching the young ideas "how to shoot?" How is it that all at once he blossoms out as a "first-class" teacher with a second grade certificate? Of course it could not be for the purpose self aggrandisement. Sir, when you get right down to it and view the matter in all its lights, it is an insult to the intelligence of Polk County voters to think that they will support such a man for such an office.

Please excuse the length of this letter. The importance of the cause must plead for me. I care for no office in comparison with this. This should be free, above politics. In it only tried men should be put; men capable and educated, and not those who have to go to another state to obtain a third grade certificate. Respectfully,

FISHERITE.

Inventions of the Enemy.

St. Paul Daily News.

Almost the only rallying cry of the Merriam organs left is that the Alliance is going to pieces.

The days are too short and they are obliged to sit up during the nights to invent stories relative to the break in the Alliance ranks here, and the break in the Alliance ranks there; the consolidation of the Alliance and Democrats on this candidate and on that candidate, etc.

If they had not been absolutely stampeded by political fright, the Merriam gang would see that the iteration and reiteration of these falsehoods proves a complete give away.

The fact that they have withdrawn this man and that man from the Alliance ticket in favor of the Democrats, while atually there has been no such withdrawal, and the Alliance has pursued its aggressive course, as usual, shows the foolish falsity of the stories set afloat.

While it was, perhaps, hardly worthy of dignifying with a notice, nevertheless the official announcement of Secretary Warren of the Alliance State Committee, elsewhere published, should set at rest all those assertions.

The cause is gaining every day.

There is no such thing as looking backward.

A first campaign of a new movement never before had such favorable prospects as the present Alliance campaign.

It is only necessary for the Alliance and its sympathizers to stand unitedly to make the victory in November so complete that its echoes will reverberate from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

But whatever the result, the old parties need not lay the flattering unction to their souls that this is a campaign of a day.

The people are enlisted to right their wrongs.

They propose to resort to the peaceful means of the ballot box to remedy the existing evil, and they will not cease their efforts until right and justice has prevailed.

Alliance Prospects.

Minneapolis Times.

The election of S. M. Owens for Governor will not surprise some of the shrewdest politicians and the most astute observers of the trend of things in this campaign. The Alliance platform is the best embodiment of principles and doctrines that appeal to the practical intererests and the moral sense of the intelligent and patriotic citizens. Its candidate for Governor is a man fitted to stand upon such a platform—thoughtful, broad-minded, sincere. His election would give this state an Executive of whom all classes of the people would have reason to feel proud, and through whose administration our great industrial interests would receive just recognition and be lifted to their proper place in the economy of the State.

The Alliance today includes in its membership the best conscience and brains of both the old parties. It stands for the enfranchisement of labor, the elevation of the workingman, the recognition of his rights to an equitable share in the profits of his toil; it unites under its banners the toilers of all classes, and it moves steadily forward to the accomplishment of purposes that put it in the line of human progress toward great and beneficent ends. Nothing could more advantage the State of Minnesota than the success of the Alliance movement this year. It would be the breaking up of machine domination and the death-blow to party despotism. It would put heart and courage into the farmer, and the workingmen of every class. It would be an earthquake shock to the proud corporations and insolent monopolies which now purchase legislators like sheep in the shambles, dictate the policy of the state administration, defy the law and ride roughshod over the people. The election of S. M. Owen would mean a decided change of programme. It would mean rebuke, and repulse, and repudiation by the people of the rings and combinations and bosses. It would mean a new deal—a "full hand" for the workingman—the march of the people to the front, and the relegation of the corporations and Plutocrats to their proper places as the servants of the state, not its masters. The electors of Minnesota have an opportunity this year—the farmers and working classes especially—to prove the stuff they are made of and to demonstrate the sincerity of their professions of administrative reform. From present indications, and from authentic reports from all over the State, The Times is encouraged to hope for the triumph of the Alliance movement in the election of Mr. Owen for Governor. But whether Mr. Owen shall be elected or not a full showing of the real Alliance strength at the polls will have a most salutary effect upon the next Legislature, upon the State administration, and upon public sentiment.

Vote for Grefthen.

The temperance alliance of Polk County, Good Templar and Labor Organizations of this city, held a mass meeting at Montgomery Hall, Crookston, Minn. The object of this meeting was to consult with each other as to the position to be taken at the coming election relating to the election of Superintendent of Schools. They came to the following conclusion, after having mutually pronounced themselves concerning the qualifications and moral character, both in public and private life of the three candidates: Be it therefore

Resolved, As the incumbent of said office is connected with the education of our youth, we consider it to be against good morals, unchristian and unjust to give our vote to any candidate for said office that we know is a friend of the saloon and does himself use intoxicating liquor as a beverage.

After having carefully examined the moral character of Mr. Thos. Casey, the republican candidate for Superintendent of Schools, it was satisfactorily proved that he is a steady patron at the saloons, consequently he will receive his main support from the saloon element. Therefore we cannot by any means sacrifice our vote for him.

Strong evidence was given which proved that the democratic candidate for said office also is in the habit of using intoxicating liquor, and is a frequent patron at the saloons. Therefore we cannot support him.

As to the alliance candidate for Supt. of Schools, Mr. E. J. Grefthen, is a staunch temperance man, one who has from his infancy been of temperance habits and of unquestionable good moral character. We consider it to be our duty to give him our support and use all honorable means to have him elected.

Moreover, reports are circulating as to Mr. Grefthen's qualifications for said office, and particularly has been circulated by his republican opponent, Mr. Casey, that Mr. Grefthen does not possess ample education to enable him to perform the duties of this important office in a satisfactory manner. Be it therefore

Resolved, That in consideration of certificate, recommendations and endorsements forwarded us from Prof. Breckenridge, Decorah, Iowa, Supt. Kennedy, Traill Co., N. D. and other noted educators, we are fully convinced that Mr. Grefthen is well qualified for the office of Supt. of Schools.

As said office, more than any other in the county, is by far the most important for the numerous growing youth, and as said office more than any other requires a man with good moral character, and as to the three candidates above mentioned the saloon is represented on one side (by the two) and temperance and good moral character on the side (by the one.) Be it therefore

Resolved, That we regard it as the duty of every moral citizen, at the coming election, to vote for E. J. Grefthen for Supt. of Schools of Polk County, Minn.

We earnestly appeal to every qualified voter, both men and women, without regard to party complexion to vote for E. J. Grefthen.

Prof. J. Breckenridge writes to the Red River Dalen, the following:

I am informed that E. J. Grefthen, one of my former students, has received the nomination for superintendent of schools of Polk County. I am sure that the schools of Polk County will not suffer if he is elected superintendent of schools, because he is an active and vigorous worker. ED. JOURNAL:—In reply to an article in a recent issue of the Thirteen Towns, I will say: I went out to Martin Jensen, explained my business to him and Mrs. Jensen, served the papers, and levied upon the team at Jensen's farm, and not at Crookston, as stated in the Thirteen Towns.

That Mr. and Mrs. Jensen informed me that they had negotiated a loan with A. D. Stephens, and that Mrs. Jensen decided to come to town, get the money from Stephens, pay the execution and take the team home.

That Stephens, under some pretext unknown to me, refused to advance the money.

That Mrs. Jensen then requested me to get a team and take her home.

That I offered to take her home with the team I had levied upon, and that she objected to my driving the team out on the farm and back again, because the roads were bad.

That I refused to hire a team to take Mrs. Jenson home.

That the above statements are true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

While S. M. Owen was honorably fighting for his country on southern battle-fields, where was banker Merriam and railroad attorney Wilson? Not on the battle-field by a long chalk.

Because W. W. Erwin is telling some solid truths in behalf of the alliance, the cross-roads politician is just now trying to prejudice the farmers against Erwin, hoping thus to make them forget their own wrongs in the market and vote for those who will not try to correct the evils.

Oh yes! Watch my smoke; I am going to give the farmers cheap binding twine, says Billy. So Billy's committee, ignoring American manufacturers of serviceable machines goes to Europe and purchases a machine that the Deerings have tried and found impracticable. He is a healthy old "farmers friend" aint he? That's a "business governor,, for you with a vengance. But the farmers have determined to try Owen and no amount of sophistry will turn them from their purpose.

If Merriam had ever intended that the farmers of Minnesota should ever have cheap binding twine, how is it that his committee has selected a twine machine that has once been proved unfit for working American fibre? Mr. Todd offered to put in an American machine that can work American fibre at about $5,000 less than the European machine costs, and if on trial it was proved incapable of doing the business it should not cost the state a dollar. Does this look like an honest effort to obtain cheap binding twine?

And now the State Chemist condemns our wheat because there are "green kernels in it!" Wonder if he don't know that what few there are will come out of the bin all right in the spring? Anything to down the poor farmers seems to be the popular idea no matter how flimsy. There may be a few green kernels in the wheat, but there are not half so many GREEN VOTERS among the farmers as there once was and the schemers will find that out on Nov. 4th, 1890.

Do you believe you have been wronged in the wheat market? Then vote for S. M. Owen who will be elected on that issue. Have you not given Wm. R. Merriam a fair trial and has he not proved a failure to remedy existing evils? How can he remedy the evils when he fattens upon them, for it is currently reported that he owns thousands of railroad stocks. It is a patent fact that he is perfectly acceptable to railroads and the elevator system. Vote for your own friend, S. M. Owen.

Did you notice what a dust the stump speakers are kicking up on the tariff question? And did you ever stop to think that you have a system in your midst that costs you from three to ten cents per bushel at least to maintain? And did you even stop to think what an enormous drain the watered stock system of railroads is upon the resources of the country? Is not the living issue found in these evils? What then is the reason for kicking up such a dust over the tariff if not to try to hide the greater evils that afflict agriculture? That is just what it is for and no other reason. If the railroads and elevator systems can make you think that it is only the tariff that is taking the life out of you then they can keep right on with their nefarious traffic for they dont care a snap which party wins on the tariff issue they are safe in any event. With the alliance party it is different. That party is bound to down every evil that afflicts agriculture and if placed in power will squeeze the railroad watered stock, will regulate the market and pay enough attention to the tariff question. The alliance party is the only one that will pay any attention to watered stock and elevator exactions, therefore it is the plain duty of every man who believes in the upbuilding of the country to vote for S. M. Owen and the legislative ticket.

Democrats are loudly calling upon farmers who were democrats to vote the straight democratic ticket. But they fail to make it plain how that will help farmers get their rights in the market. Democratic and every other kind of farmer should vote for Owen and the alliance legislative ticket as this is the only party that makes any pretense of securing to the country a free and open market. Farmers vote for your OWN INTERESTS for once in your lives and see how that would seem.

"No man can serve two masters." If it is true that Merriam is the friend and ally of monopolists he cannot be such to the poor farmer and laboring man on whose vitals monopoly fattens. S. M. Owen is pre-eminently the poor man's friend, a man who has proved his friendship long before he was a candidate for your suffrage. Vote for S. M. Owen.

And now the Merriam managers are saying to the farmers: "Lo, this great man and that great man advises you to vote for Governor Merriam!" Go to! Are the farmers "voting cattle" that they have to be instructed how to vote? Do they not know that the present "business administration" costs them $5 to $10 per hundred on their wheat to sustain it? Let the great men keep right on advising the farmers, THEY DON'T HAVE TO FOOT THE BILL, but the farmer does, and he proposes to cast his ballot for himself this fall. He intends to vote in his own interests for once in his life, and not "as some big man tells him to!" That is the kind of independent voter the farmer is and the insinuation of the Merriam bosses that the farmer will vote as some big man tells him to is an insult to the average intelligence of the farmer.

From every county in the state comes the cheering intelligence that the farmers are getting in line for Owen, their candidate for Governor, and more than that, from the cities and villages the report comes that Owen will have lots of votes, and it is certain that if the farmers only stand true to their cause their candidate, S. M. Owen, will be the next Governor of Minnesota, but the Merriam party say that the farmers will not be true, that at the last moment they will cowardly surrender their cause and vote to defeat their own interests, but we do not think they will. It is just as true to-day as it was last winter that the farmer cannot get justice in the wheat market under the Merriam inspectors, and he will not be able to if Merriam is re-elected. We can see no reason why the farmers should desert their own leader, S. M. Owen, for a man who cannot or will not at least afford them any relief. Everywhere the people protest against the Merriam regime and the only way to end the farce is to elect S. M. Owen. We are confident if the farmers are true to their own interests this will be done.

Nelson For Comstock.

Hon. S. G. Comstock spoke at Glenwood, Pope County, on Thursday evening, Oct. 16th. Hon. Knute Nelson was present and also addressed the meeting. Speaking of Mr. Comstock, Mr. Nelson said:

"And now I wish to say a word in behalf of my old friend, Mr. Comstock. Upon retiring from congress, the highest pleasure I ever experienced in my life was that afforded me in introducing there to my associates my friend and successor, Hon. S. G. Comstock. He has ever been a friend to me. We were pioneers together, he coming with a shovel on his shoulder to Moorhead, and I locating in a claim shanty at Alexandria the same year. During the famous Nelson-Kindred campaign he was loyal and true to me, and at that memorable Detroit convention he withstood slungshot, billies and revolvers in defense of the "Little Norwegian." He has served you faithfully and well. He is a man, to use a Southern phrase, who always "totes fair," and my friends in Pope County cannot pay me a higher compliment than by giving him their hearty support."

Gov. Merriam and C. K. Davis go about the country on special trains, sometimes carrying a brass band, and yet despite all that parade the Merriam managers are beginning to tumble to the fact that their cause is in extreme danger. They begin to realize that the people are doing a wonderful amount of earnest thinking this year, the result of which will be disastrous to Merriamism.

Governor Merriam says that the things that the farmer asks for has already been done by the republican party. The farmer has asked for an equal share in the wheat market. That has not been given. He has asked to be relieved from the pernicious elevator system that has robbed him. That has not been given him and elevator stock is yet gilt edged. He has asked relief from watered stock of railroads; that has not been given him and when you pin the governor right down to facts the only thing he can say that the republican party (that is governor Merriam), has given the farmer when he asked for it was a car or two now and then and that the law gives him; a law passed by a farmers legislature. But just about this time of year politicians and office seekers are very solicitous about the welfare of the farmer—but it dont last very long after election. Oh yes, the republican party has done everything that the farmer has asked and yet he don't have his rights in the market, so it is about time to try S. M. Owen and a farmer legislature and we will do it.

Mat Cornelius, besides being a thoroughly educated man is also a farmer and a good one, too. He works his quarter section near the city, and, even under existing circumstances makes it pay. Here is a thoroughbred farmer for you and an A 1 business man, one, who if elected will be able to do the business properly. He is not and never has been identified with any ring or clique that may have existed nor could he be.

Watch your election precincts. Every kind of dodge known to tricky politicians will probably be tried, but in vain if you are alert to your own interests. Remember, "Eternal vigilance in the prise of liberty," and your liberty in a free and open wheat market depends on the election of S. M. Owen and a farmer legislature. See that no one tampers with your ballots and be sure that all of your friends are at the polls and vote. Look to your own interests.

Farmers, remember that your interests are at stake in this campaign. The ticket that represents your interests you have paid your good hard earned money to place in the field, and if you now neglect to elect your governor and your legislature you lose all you have invested. Not only so, but you still contribute from five to ten cents per bushel to the old system. Five or ten dollars per hundred on your wheat is worth saving. Vote for it on Nov. 4th next.

CROOKSTON BUSINESS COLLEGE AND INSTITUTE OF SHORTHAND.

TEACHING FOREIGNERS.

A Business College has great advantages over other schools for teaching Germans Scandinavians and other foreigners.

Of course, business is done in this country very differently from the way it is done in the old country, and a young man who has been in America only a few years cannot understand what is needed in business here, unless somebody teaches him. If he goes into a store, no one there has the time to teach him. So the best place to learn how business is done is in a college.

In our school he can learn how to read and write the English language correctly, and prepare himself to conduct his own business affairs successfully.

Our teachers will do all they can to help along those who do not know our language very well, and every student receives personal, and individual instruction.

Our foreign students generally make as good progress as our American students.

There is a great demand in business for young men who can speak the German or Scandinavian languages, so our foreign students have no trouble in getting work when they finish our course of study.

To The Farmer's Alliance of of Polk Co. Minn.

GENTLEMEN:—The farmers and workingmen of Minnesota in general and of Polk County in particular have arisen in their might to shake off the burdens that monopolists, usurers and corrupt machine politicians have placed upon them. As a first step to that end, the farmers and laborers have declared their independence of the democratic and republican parties both of which have deserted the principles of their founders and are now ruled, controlled and run by the monopolists and for the monopolists, while the interests, the wants and the needs of the people are neglected. A full Farmers Alliance State, Congressional, Legislative and County ticket, has been placed in the field and a victory for the Alliance means the control of the State and county affairs by the people. Besides and furthermore this movement is but the advance guard of a great reform party which, in 1892 will sweep the nation from Maine to California, and place in the Presidential chair a man of the people. Monopoly will be dethroned and the reign of the plutocrats will end, and again we will have restored to the masses a government of the people, by the people and for the people.

Your candidates are mostly poor men like yourselves; your leaders are without money or means and are now pitted against the hirelings of monopoly, and are fighting for your interests the most desperate political battle ever waged upon the soil of Minnesota. Defeat means ruin to your leaders, increased taxes to you and the filling of your offices with the tools of your oppressors. It means that interest, taxes, freight rates and tariff will be high and that your wheat will still pay tribute to the elevator pirates; success means the abolition of these iniquitous robberies now being so successfully practiced upon the farmers and in fact upon all the poor or middle-classes of whatsoever profession, calling or trade, for nearly all the poor people in the city who feel the sting of poverty and wear the yoke of monopoly more galling than the one which our lawmakers and office-holders have placed around the necks of the farmers. Your County Committee are willing to work, but to send our speakers and campaign literature requires money. "We must educate or must perish,"

Many towns and villages are without alliance organizations; these can and must be organized before the election if we would win. To organize means expense. Will the farmers furnish the money to fight their own battle? We do not want a corruption fund but we do want money for the purpose of paying the necessary expenses for organization, speaking and campaign documents. We have no candidate with a barrel; we cannot call upon the rich for contributions—their money is being spent by the enemy to defeat us and [illegible] the [illegible] of plutocracy. You farmers, you individually are the men to pay these campaign expenses. We want every farmer in Polk county to give something—a dollar or more. If you cannot [illegible] much give all you can. Let those better fixed give their dollars and the poorer their quarters. Remember every cent given will come back a hundred fold. Call an alliance meeting at once for the purpose. Give all that you can, personally or from the alliance funds, and have your secretary forward the amount to E. E. Lanigan, the chairman of the County Central Committee, Crookston, Minn. You will get a receipt for your money sent and the committee will account to your alliance for the manner in which every cent so contributed is spent. Do not delay but send in at once.

While S. M. Owen was honorably fighting for his country on southern battle-fields, where was banker Merriam and railroad attorney Wilson? Not on the battle field by a long chalk.

Because W. W. Erwin is telling some solid truths in behalf of the alliance, the cross-roads politician is just now trying to prejudice the farmers against Erwin, hoping thus to make them forget their own wrongs in the market and vote for those who will not try to correct the evils.

Oh yes! Watch my smoke; I am going to give the farmers cheap binding twine, says Billy. So Billy's committee, ignoring American manufacturers of serviceable machines goes to Europe and purchases a machine that the Deerings have tried and found impracticable. He is a healthy old "farmers friend" aint he? That's a "business governor,, for you with a vengance. But the farmers have determined to try Owen and no amount of sophistry will turn them from their purpose.

If Merriam had ever intended that the farmers of Minnesota should ever have cheap binding twine, how is it that his committee has selected a twine machine that has once been proved unfit for working American fibre? Mr. Todd offered to put in an American machine that can work American fibre at about $6,000 less than the European machine costs, and if on trial it was proved incapable of doing the business it should not cost the state a dollar. Does this look like an honest effort to obtain cheap binding twine?

And now the State Chemist condemns our wheat because there are "green kernels in it!" Wonder if he don't know that what few there are will come out of the bin all right in the spring? Anything to down the poor farmers seems to be the popular idea no matter how flimsy. There may be a few green kernels in the wheat, but there are not half so many GREEN VOTERS among the farmers as there once was and the schemers will find that out on Nov. 4th, 1890.

Do you believe you have been wronged in the wheat market? Then vote for S. M. Owen who will be elected on that issue. Have you not given Wm. R. Merriam a fair trial and has he not proved a failure to remedy existing evils? How can he remedy the evils when he fattens upon them, for it is currently reported that he owns thousands of railroad stocks. It is a patent fact that he is perfectly acceptable to railroads and the elevator system. Vote for your own friend, S. M. Owen.

Did you notice what a dust the stump speakers are kicking up on the tariff question? And did you ever stop to think that you have a system in your midst that costs you from three to ten cents per bushel at least to maintain. And did you even stop to think what an enormous drain the watered stock system of railroads is upon the resources of the country? Is not the living issue found in these evils? What then is the reason for kicking up such a dust over the tariff if not to try to hide the greater evils that afflict agriculture? That is just what it is for and no other reason. If the railroads and elevator systems can make you think that it is only the tariff that is taking the life out of you, then they can keep right on with their nefarious traffic for they dont care a snap which party wins on the tariff issue they are safe in any event. With the alliance party it is different. That party is bound to down every evil that afflicts agriculture and if placed in power will squeeze the railroad watered stock, will regulate the market and pay enough attention to the tariff question. The alliance party is the only one that will pay any attention to watered stock and elevator extortion, therefore it is the plain duty of every man who believes in the upbuilding of the country to vote for S. M. Owen and the legislative ticket.

Democrats are loudly calling upon [illegible] who were democrats to vote the straight democratic ticket. But they [illegible] will help farmers get their rights in the market. Democratic and every other kind of farmer should vote for Owen and the alliance legislative ticket, as this is the only party that makes any pretense of securing to the country a free and open market. Farmers vote for your own INTERESTS for once in your lives and see how that would seem.

"No man can serve two masters." If it is true that Merriam is the friend and ally of monopolists he cannot be such to the poor farmer and laboring man on whose vitals monopoly fattens. S. M. Owen is pre-eminently the poor man's friend, a man who has proved his friendship long before he was a candidate for your suffrage. Vote for S. M. Owen.

And now the Merriam managers are saying to the farmers: "Lo, this great man and that great man advises you to vote for Governor Merriam!" Go to! Are the farmers "voting cattle" that they have to be instructed how to vote? Do they not know that the present "business administration" costs them $5 to $10 per hundred on their wheat to sustain it? Let the great men keep right on advising the farmers, THEY DON'T HAVE TO FOOT THE BILL, but the farmer does, and he proposes to cast his ballot for himself this fall. He intends to vote in his own interests for once in his life, and not "as some big man tells him to!" That is the kind of independent voter the farmer is and the insinuation of the Merriam bosses that the farmer will vote as some big man tells him to is an insult to the average intelligence of the farmer.

From every county in the state comes the cheering intelligence that the farmers are getting in line for Owen, their candidate for Governor, and more than that, from the cities and villages the report comes that Owen will have lots of votes, and it is certain that if the farmers only stand true to their cause their candidate, S. M. Owen, will be the next Governor of Minnesota, but the Merriam party say that the farmers will not be true, that at the last moment they will cowardly surrender their cause and vote to defeat their own interests, but we do not think they will. It is just as true to-day as it was last winter that the farmer cannot get justice in the wheat market under the Merriam inspectors, and he will not be able to if Merriam is re-elected. We can see no reason why the farmers should desert their own leader, S. M. Owen, for a man who cannot or will not at least afford them any relief. Everywhere the people protest against the Merriam regime and the only way to end the farce is to elect S. M. Owen. We are confident if the farmers are true to their own interests this will be done.

Nelson For Comstock.

Hon. S. G. Comstock spoke at Glenwood, Pope County, on Thursday evening, Oct. 16th. Hon. Knute Nelson was present and also addressed the meeting. Speaking of Mr. Comstock, Mr. Nelson said:

"And now I wish to say a word in behalf of my old friend, Mr. Comstock. Upon retiring from congress, the highest pleasure I ever experienced in my life was that afforded me in introducing there to my associates my friend and successor, Hon. S. G. Comstock. He has ever been a friend to me. We were pioneers together, he coming with a shovel on his shoulder to Moorhead, and I locating in a claim shanty at Alexandria the same year. During the famous Nelson-Kindred campaign he was loyal and true to me, and at that memorable Detroit convention he withstood slungshot, billies and revolvers in defense of the "Little Norwegian." He has served you faithfully and well. He is a man, to use a Southern phrase, who always "totes fair," and my friends in Pope County cannot pay me a higher compliment than by giving him their hearty support."

Gov. Merriam and C. K. Davis go about the country on special trains, sometimes carrying a brass band, and yet despite all that parade the Merriam managers are beginning to tumble to the fact that their cause is in extreme danger. They begin to realize that the people are doing a wonderful amount of earnest thinking this year, the result of which will be disastrous to Merriamism.

Governor Merriam says that the things that the farmer asks for has already been done by the republican party. The farmer has asked for an equal share in the wheat market. That has not been given. He has asked to be relieved from the pernicious elevator system that has robbed him. That has not been given him and elevator stock is yet gilt edged. He has asked relief from watered stock of railroads that has not been given him and when you pin the governor right down to facts the only thing he can say that the republican party (that is governor Merriam) has given the farmer when he asked for it was a car or two now and then and that the law gives him, a law passed by a farmers legislature. But just about this time of year politicians and office seekers are very solicitous about the welfare of the farmer—but it dont last very long after election. Oh yes, the republican party has done everything that the farmer has asked and yet he don't have his rights in the market, so it is about time to try Sam Owen and a farmer legislature and we will do it.

Mr. Cornelius, besides being a thoroughly educated man, is also a farmer and a good one, too. He works his quarter section near the city and even under existing circumstances makes it pay. Here is a thoroughbred farmer for you and an A. 1 business man, one who if elected will be the [illegible] do the business properly. He is not and never has been identified with any ring or clique that may have existed nor could he be.

Watch your election precincts. Every kind of dodge known to tricky politicians will probably be tried, but in vain if you are alert to your own interests. Remember, "Eternal vigilance in the prise of liberty," and your liberty in a free and open wheat market depends on the election of S. M. Owen and a farmer legislature. See that no one tampers with your ballots and be sure that all of your friends are at the polls and vote. Look to your own interests.

Farmers, remember that your interests are at stake in this campaign. The ticket that represents your interests you have paid your good hard earned money to place in the field, and if you now neglect to elect your governor and your legislature you lose all you have invested. Not only so, but you still contribute from five to ten cents per bushel to the old system. Five or ten dollars per hundred on your wheat is worth saving. Vote for it on Nov. 4th next.

CROOKSTON BUSINESS COLLEGE AND INSTITUTE OF SHORTHAND. TEACHING FOREIGNERS.

A Business College has great advantages over other schools for teaching Germans, Scandinavians and other foreigners.

Of course, business is done in this country very differently from the way it is done in the old country, and a young man who has been in America only a few years cannot understand what is needed in business here, unless somebody teaches him. If he goes into a store, no one there has the time to teach him. So the best place to learn how business is done is in a college.

In our school he can learn how to read and write the English language correctly, and prepare himself to conduct his own business affairs successfully.

Our teachers will do all they can to help along those who do not know our language very well, and every student receives personal and individual instruction.

Our foreign students generally make as good progress as our American students.

There is a great demand in business for young men who can speak the German or Scandinavian languages, so our foreign students have no trouble in getting work when they finish our course of study.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF POLK—ss. In Probate Court, Special Term, Sept. 20th, 1890.

In the matter of the estate of Napoleon Doaye, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Millie Doaye, executrix of the estate of Napoleon Doaye, deceased, representing, among other things, that she has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining and allowing the final account of her administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law;

It is ordered, that said account be examined, and petition heard, by this Court, on Tuesday, the 11th day of November, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office in the city of Crookston, in said county.

And it is further ordered, that notice thereof be given to all persons interested by publishing a copy of this order once in each week, for three successive weeks, prior to said day of hearing, in THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston, in said county.

Dated at Crookston, the 20th day of September, A. D. 1890.

To The Farmer's Alliance of of Polk Co. Minn.

GENTLEMEN:—The farmers and workingmen of Minnesota in general and of Polk County in particular have arisen in their might to shake off the burdens that monopolists, usurers and corrupt machine politicians have placed upon them. As a first step to that end, the farmers and laborers have declared their independence of the democratic and republican parties both of which have deserted the principles of their founders and are now ruled, controlled and run by the monopolists and for the monopolists, while the interests, the wants and the needs of the people are neglected. A full Farmers Alliance State, Congressional, Legislative and County ticket has been placed in the field and a victory for the Alliance means the control of the State and county affairs by the people. Besides and furthermore this movement is but the advance guard of a great reform party which, in 1892 will sweep the nation from Maine to California, and place in the Presidential chair a man of the people. Monopoly will be dethroned and the reign of the plutocrats will end, and again we will have restored to the masses a government of the people, by the people and for the people.

Your candidates are mostly poor men like yourselves; your leaders are without money or means and are now pitted against the hirelings of monopoly, and are fighting for your interests the most desperate political battle ever waged upon the soil of Minnesota. Defeat means ruin to your leaders, increased taxes to you and the filling of your offices with the tools of your oppressors. It means that interest, taxes, freight rates and tariff will be high and that your wheat will still pay tribute to the elevator pirates; success means the abolition of these iniquitous robberies now being so successfully practiced upon the farmers and in fact upon all the poor or middle classes of whatsoever profession, calling or trade, for nearly all the poor people in the city who feel the sting of poverty, and wear the yoke of monopoly more galling than the one which our lawmakers and office holders have placed around the necks of the farmers. Your County Committee are willing to work, but to send our speakers and campaign literature requires money. We must educate or must perish.

Many towns and villages are without alliance organizations; these can and must be organized before the election if we would win. To organize means expense. Will the farmers furnish the money to fight their own battle? We do not want a corruption fund but we do want money for the purpose of paying the necessary expenses for organization, speaking and campaign documents. We have no candidate with a barrel; we cannot call upon the rich for contributions—their money is being spent by the enemy to defeat us and elect the hirelings of plutocracy. You farmers, you individually, are the men to pay these campaign expenses. We want every farmer in Polk county to give something—be it little or much. If you cannot contribute much give all you can. Let those better fixed give their dollars and the poorer their quarters. Remember every cent given will come back a hundred fold. Call an alliance meeting at once for the purpose. Give all that you can, personally or from the alliance funds, and have your secretary forward the amount to E. E. Lommen, the chairman of the County Central Committee, Crookston, Minn. You will get a receipt for your money sent and the committee will account to your alliance for the manner in which every cent so contributed is spent. Do not delay but send in at once.

Metropolitan Theatre.

Extraordinary Demand for Seats for the Abbott Opening.

The demand for seats for the opening night of the Metropolitan Theatre in Grand Forks has been simply unprecedented. Residents of that thriving city have been striving to see who should be most liberal in their recognition of the enterprise which places such a magnificent temple of amusement at their disposal. So far not a seat has been sold for less than twenty-five dollars and some have sold as high as three hundred dollars for two. In addition to this the demand for seats from neighboring towns has been very pressing, and wishing to give their out-of-town patrons just as good an opportunity of obtaining the best seats as is enjoyed by residents of Grand Forks, a night has been reserved for them, for which not a single ticket will be sold in Grand Forks until the demand from neighboring towns has been supplied. Tuesday, November 11th, has been selected and will be called "Visitors' Night."

On Visitors' Night the opera presented will be Balfe's "Rose of Castile" in which Miss Abbott and the full strength of the company will be in the cast. This opera was selected for various reasons, the principal ones being that it is entirely new, and that Miss Abbott has a role which gives ample scope for the display of her brilliant powers, both as a singer and as an actress, and which enables her as the Queen of Castile to display some of the most magnificent costumes ever seen on the stage. And it here may be mentioned that the costumes of the Abbott Co. are exciting the greatest admiration wherever the company appears. The critics of New York, Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis pronounce them the most elaborate ever seen on the stage and speak of the costumes worn by Miss Abbott and the entire company in their production of "Rose of Castile" as a revelation of the costumers art. It is safe to say that such an opera, presented by a company as complete in every respect as the Abbott company, in a theatre as beautiful and perfect as the Metropolitan, will not be seen in North Dakota in a quarter of a century.

The schedule of prices for Visitors' Night is extremely moderate considering the magnitude of the enterprise and is as follows:

Parquette and first two rows of parquette circle	$5.00
Balance of parquette circle	4.00
First row of balcony	4.00
Second row of balcony	3.00
Third and Fourth rows of balcony	2.00
Fifth and Sixth rows of balcony	1.50
Remaining five rows of balcony	1.00

Every seat in the house is reserved and aplications by mail to the Grand Forks Opera Company will receive prompt attention. To secure good seats, however, an early application will be necessary as orders are coming in very rapidly.

Body Snatched.

Grand Forks Herald:—During the afternoon of yesterday Coroner Shephard, of Crookston who arrived in East Grand Forks to hold an inquest on the remains of the child said to have been killed by its father Pullet Bushee, busied himself taking the testimony of neighbors of the prisoner. The coroner satisfied himself from evidence that the prisoner was culpable at any rate and preparations were made this forenoon to unearth the remains of the child and subject them to a medical examination to determine, if possible, the cause of death. The services of Undertaker M. T. Caswell who had interred the little one, were enlisted and Dr. Logan was in readiness to make the examination. The undertaker with the proper assistance repaired to the grave for the purpose of exhuming the body, but after a minute inspection, discovered that the remains were gone. Some one had already anticipated the results and had disinterred the little body. To say the surprise and indignation followed this discovery is but a mild way of expressing it. The news of this discovery spread with lightning rapidity throughout the city and conjectures by the score as to the perpetrator and his designs therefore were indulged in. A Herald scribe called on Undertaker Caswell, but the latter absolutely refused to say anything farther than that there were agencies at work which might be expected to unravel the mystery before long. The prisoner is still confined in the city lock-up at East Grand Forks and preserves the same stolid demeanor that has marked him since his incarceration a few days ago. It is asserted by those in a position to know that there will be a revelation in this case before long.

Unexecuted Laws.

Farm, Stock and Home.

There is one feature of existing conditions that is not given proper consideration by writers who discuss them, and that is the failure to execute laws after they have been enacted, even if they have been so constructed as to retain validity after having been subjected to the alchemy of the courts. There seems to be a growing disposition not to interfere with the enactment of laws that have for their purpose the regulation of monopolistic interests, or that are intended to directly benefit our industrial interests; and the reason for this seems to be the confidence that monopolists have in the lax, unfaithful execution of the laws. Enacting certain kinds of laws will appease the people, so it is believed, will also redound to the glory of the political party responsible for them; but if they are aimed to correct capitalistic abuses or wrongs the beneficiaries of those wrongs are not disturbed, for in nearly every case those charged with the execution of the laws are the creatures or tools of the beneficiaries themselves, and so no harm will come from their enactment, while as palliatives to the people they are great successes.

Laws are enacted against over-capitalizing corporate monopolies, but overcapitalization grows the faster the more it is legislated against. Laws to regulate rail rates are in a large majority of cases neutralized through unfaithful execution. A law was enacted by the last Congress to prohibit trusts and combines, but such institutions continue to multiply and flourish as if nothing had happened. Laws to prevent the exemption from taxation of the property of the rich are numerous, but every year such exemptions enormously increase. The list of unexecuted laws might be largely extended, but enough has been mentioned to clearly indicate the necessity of securing faithful executors of laws as well as faithful makers of laws.

If the mass of people are to be benefitted by laws, then the mass must see to it that they secure executive officers or commissions who will execute the laws in the interest of the mass. The mass is the boss if it so wills; and if unfaithful officers continue to be the rule, then the mass has only itself to blame.

The Life-Saving Task.

Northwestern Agriculturalist.

Few people realize how much their happiness is dependent upon their work—upon the fact that they are kept busy and not left to feed on themselves. Happiness comes most to people who seek her least and think least about her. How important to health is happiness, yet the best promoter of health is something to do. Blessed the man who has congenial work; occupation in which he can put his heart, and which affords an outlet to all the forces that are in him. A friend writes how well and happy he has been during the season—enjoyed existence. Then he told me, not by way of explanation, but as a matter of news, that his head man had been disabled two months before and the care of the farm devolved upon himself; more, that he was renovating a place that he had recently bought, remodeling the house, shaping the grounds etc. Then I knew why he had been so unusually well and happy. He had had something to do into which he could throw himself. A letter from another farmer friend told how busy he was; so many things pressing that there was need of his going two or more directions at once, not to get rich, but to make both ends meet. And yet he was so very happy! (Therefore he was so happy, say I.) Troubles and trials, he says, are few and are soon over with, while the pleasures are past all enumeration. "There is so much to be enjoyed that one never gets to the end of it."

The fruit of the tree of life of which we must eat very sparingly is leasure. Too much of it, and it will turn to gall on the tongue. A little to much of those things which we think will make us happy, and we are cloyed and miserable, indeed. Because money is good, do not, therefore, think riches an unmixed blessing; because leasure is sweet to you, do not, therefore, imagine you would be happy with nothing to do. I overheard an old man and a young man talking at the station. The young man was telling of an old uncle who sold his farm and and retired to the village, and now he thought he would take his fill of it. But it soon cloyed on him. He had nothing to do. Every night he would say with a sigh of relief, "Well another day is through," and each morning wonder how he could endure the day. In every village all up and down the older parts of the country are several such men; every day is a burden to them because they have nothing to do. When they were driven and oppressed with work they had thought, "What pleasure to be free from all this, to be at liberty to go and come as one liked, with no cows to milk or chores to do!" Now probably they have not a hen or a dog to comfort them. These men do not live out more than half their latter days. Nature has no use for them and they soon drop away; whereas their neighbors who stick to the farm and keep the current going reach a much more advanced period of life.

Farm, Stock and Home: Indications clearly point to the fact that capital is now engaged in the work of arbitrarily depressing the price of wheat for the special benefit of capital, and the chances strongly favor the success of the work. A few years ago no man or men would have dreamed of trying to corner or control the entire wheat crop of the United States: the mere thought of such an attempt would have been regarded as an evedence of insanity. But now conditions are different. The wealth of the nation has been so centralized in a few hands that it is not difficult for a few to control sufficient money to successfully manipulate the prices of the staple product of this great nation. The fact of the centralization of wealth makes it the more easy to manipulate the crop, for the crop raisers are weak and unable to resist the corner because of the centralization. If the law of supply and demand could be operative, and competition prevail in the buying of wheat, it is almost if not quite certain that its prices would be considerably higher than at present. This is an unpleasant fact to contemplate, but since we have allowed capital 'to so get start of this majestic country, as to bear the palm alone," we will have to suffer the consequences.

Farm, Srock and Home: Careful inquiry in nearly all sections of the state of Minnesota, particularly the older settled portions, reveal the fact that farm lands could not now be sold for more than from 70 to 90 per cent of the prices easily obtained ten years ago. A statement of this kind is called disloyalty to the state; but the truth is not disloyalty, and if the statement is not true this journal is not responsible for it; it cannot see, however, what object the farmers inquired of could have in making such a statement if it is false. The occasion for this shrinkage in farm values is unquestionably the unprofitableness of farming in the aggregate, and that unprofitableness is the result of vicious systems and artificial forces that are unjustly depriving farmers of a fair share of their toil. This condition is not confined to Minnesota, but is universal; still, some people can wonder what farmers have to complain of!

The Sugar Tariff.

Farm, Stock and Home.

It is claimed that putting sugar on the free list will reduce the national revenues $40,000,000 annually. This may be true, but it is more than likely that at least half of that decrease will inure to the benefit of the sugar trust and not to the people. Raw sugars are put on the free list, but a duty is imposed on refined sugars—on the kind of sugars the people use. In no other country is sugar refined more extensively or cheaply than in this one; and now that refiners are given raw material duty free they should be granted no further protection than that afforded by the transportation and other expenses incident to importing from foreign countries.

There is a nominal duty half a cent a pound on refined sugar, except that imported from countries that have a bounty on sugar making, when the tariff is nine-tenths of a cent. But it so happens that all countries that export refined pay bounties on sugar-making, so that the protection to our sugar refiners is the latter sum, and that is increased by imposing duties on the weight of packages, making the total duty about one cent a pound, which is positively prohibitory, and is absolutely unnecessary and unjustified, except as a means of enriching the sugar trust at the expense of the people.

The sugar trust is composed of plants that represented an investment of $17,000,000. The Trust was capitalized at $50,000,000, and on that sum made 23 per cent last year. It is believed that its profits will be increased $20,000,000 a year by reason of the new sugar tariff. At all events, its stocks have rapidly and substantially advanced since it became certain that the tariff proposed by the McKinley bill would become operative.

The darkest iniquity of this scheme is its concoction in the sacred name of devotion to labor. Labor will get no benefit, except the glorious privilege of paying the trust's price for sugar; this we know from past experience; and that experience teaches us that the farmer's benefit will be the counterpart of that of the laborer. This is a part of that patentable device for reducing the revenues by increasing the people's burdens. Sugar may be a little cheaper, just to appease the people; but that it will be higher than it should be will be eloquently told by the increasing profits of the sugar trust.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF POLK—ss. In Probate Court, Special Term, Sept. 30th, 1890.

In the matter of the estate of Napoleon Doaye, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Millie Doaye, executrix of the estate of Napoleon Doaye, deceased, representing, among other things, that she has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining and allowing the final account of her administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law.

It is ordered, that said account be examined, and petition heard, by this Court, on Tuesday, the 11th day of November, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office in the city of Crookston, in said county.

And it is further ordered, that notice thereof be given to all persons interested by publishing a copy of this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston, in said county.

Dated at Crookston, the 30th day of September, A. D. 1890.

By the Court:

C. O. CHRISTIANSON,
Judge of Probate.

[26-28]

Polk County Journal.

CROOKSTON, MINN., NOV. 6, 1890.

'Round Home.

Wheat—1 Hard 86.
1 Northern 81.
2 Northern 76.
3 Northern 70.

Mr. O. D. Rood is convalescing.

Lots of wheat rolling in these days.

Wheat has an upward tendency.

Now is the time to pay those election bets.

Miss Hattie Bivens is slowly recovering health.

Gervais, the hustler, will have the dandy store.

W. G. Cooke rode over from the farm on Saturday last. He is gaining very encouragingly.

I. U. Jennings went down to Onstad last Saturday evening to speak at a big alliance rally in that town.

Apples are going to be high and scarce in the market. They are now quite reasonable $4.50 per barrel.

Adolph Biermann was in the city last week looking after his fences. He seemed pretty confident of election.

O. Snyder is hauling in his crop of No. 1 Hard wheat to the Valley Roller mills. Snyder has a good crop this year.

John Wyatt informs THE JOURNAL that he is alone in business again. Mr. Zeigler has gone to Grand Forks to work at his trade.

We would like a few bushels of potatoes and a few cords of wood on subscription and would like it right now while we need it most.

The funeral of Ole E. Rude's little boy took place on Friday last. It was largely attended by the neighbors and friends of the family.

Quite a goodly number of ladies exercised their right to vote for Supt. of schools on Tuesday. Supt. Casey seemed to be the favorite.

Lovely weather still continues. There is time, however, for old winter to get in his work yet. The Indians and other ancient landmarks predict a severe winter.

Frank Haseltine reports a good season's work and good collections this fall. Frank is a hustler from way back and amply deserves the success he has attained.

The Times man seems to have made a pretty good thing advocating the cause of railroad attorney Wilson, as they say he has bought the Stuart house on the hill.

J. R. Clements intends to add to the Commercial house a large four story addition next spring and will raise the main part one story. This will greatly improve that famous hostelry.

If you have not the ready money but have wood or potatoes, come and see us. We can use a limited amount of each in our business, and will pay the market price for what we require.

H. F. Brown has moved his cigar store into the store recently occupied by Fred Durand and is getting fixed in nice shape. He proposes to have the neatest store in that line in the city.

Very evidently the farmers of Minnesota were not satisfied with the way things have been run of late. They prefer hereafter to take a lively hand in matters that affect their own interests.

The liberal advertiser is a liberal man to deal with. Go and see Gervais, the Hustler, when you are in need of dry goods. See his invitation elsewhere. The biggest store and the biggest ad in the city.

Judge C. O. Christianson and Mat Cornelius took a trip through the towns along the east side last week, returning last Saturday night. They report they found the alliance strength almost solid in most towns.

Mrs. E. E. Bangs informs our reporter that her business has been very good this fall. This is as it should be, as she has the latest styles and her prices are extremely moderate, all of which the ladies appreciate highly.

The firm of Barnes & Slocum has been dissolved and O. J. Barnes will hereafter go it alone on the cash principle. We have not learned what line Mr. Slocum will engage in but are told that he will remain in Crookston.

It looks as though the N. P. would not put on that day train you have heard so much about. It dont materialize as yet anyhow and business is generally lighter in the winter than in the summer with not so much call for it.

More wheat was brought into market on Monday last than any day so far this fall. The teams came in squads of from six to a dozen all day long. Most of the wheat is of excellent quality—good enough to garde 1 Hard whether it does or not.

The firemen's ball last week was well attended and a success in every particular. One unique feature was the drill of the young fire company—youths from 5 to 12 years old, conducted by Jack McLaren. Everybody said they made a fine display.

Andrew Skog leaves for Tacoma this week on a prospecting tour. He may conclude to locate there should he be suited. He remarked to us last week that he could not think of leaving until he had cast a solid vote for S. M. Owen and a farmer legislature.

Up to the time of going to press the election returns are very slow in coming in. We have secured the following estimate in the city:

	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th
Merriam	26	36	17	82	1
Wilson	35	73	81	91	12
Owen	82	57	24	92	27
Comstock	33	39	21	87	5
Whiteman	89	79	33	92	16
Halvorson	68	49	20	80	17
Biermann	97	85	32	152	23
McGuire	45	81	42	122	12
Cornelius	67	88	38	188	9
Gilley	28	87	17	56	10
Webster	47	42	18	67	17
Locken	95	61	28	100	16

The following towns report as follows:

Lowell, 75 votes cast. Owen 78.

Liberty, 60 vote cast. Owen 60.

Garfield, Owen 135, Merriam 26, Wilson 19.

Godfrey, Owen 62, Merriam 17.

Garden, 140 votes cast. Owen 140.

Red Lake Falls, total vote 57. Owen 54.

Bygland, Owen 70, Merriam 8.

Angus, Owen 23, Merriam 5. Wilson 13.

Fairfax, Owen 45, Merriam 2, Wilson 3, Chesley 45, Thompson 42, Carlton 43, Lonimen 26, Cromb 7, McKinnon 17, Webster 20, Cornelius 8, Gilley 4, Biermann 43, McGuire 7.

Gentilly, Owen 80, Merriam 2, Wilson 4, McKinnon 67, Cromb 17.

Kertsonville solid for Owen, 44 votes.

Roome, Owen 31, Merriam 1, Pinkham 2, Lommen 91, Locken 88, Mius 91, Grundyson 82, Grefthen 100, Casey 15.

Russia, Owen 21, Wilson 8.

Crookston, Owen 37, Merriam 6, Wilson 8.

Euclid, Owen 34, Merriam 7, Wilson 7.

Reis, Owen 23, Merriam 19.

Hubbard, Owen 78, Merriam 1, Wilson 1.

No reliable estimate can, at this writing, be given, but enough is known to show that Owen's vote has been largely underestimated so far and he has carried Polk County by the largest vote ever given a candidate. This shows conclusively that we were right when we said that Polk County was not in favor of Merriam for re-election. It is probable that the entire alliance ticket is elected, with possibly one or two exceptions. Sometimes it is well enough to heed public sentiment when it is as plainly expressed as was the antipathy to Merriam in Polk County.

Lee & Herrick are selling flour down to hard pan, see them befor laying in your supply they will save you money, quality guaranteed first class.

LEE & HERRICK.

Have you paid your bets?

Lovely Indian summer days.

Bert Duntley connects with the sewer.

Gautier de St. Croix was in the city on Tuesday.

The Commercial hotel is being connected with the sewer.

How did you vote? If you voted for an open wheat market you need not be ashamed of it.

Mayor McKinnon's vote for senator proved a surprise party to some who did not know his hustling capacity.

Wait for Gervais grand opening. Gervais the Hustler.

Wheat has an upward tendency this week. It should reach the dollar mark soon.

The carpenter work on the new Opera block is being pushed these bright days. The block will soon be ready for business.

Henry Steege has decided to go into business in Crookston again and will open a meat-market in the room now occupied by Gervais, the Hustler, just as soon as it is vacated. Henry finds that, after all, there is no better place for business than Crookston.

All Hallowe'en seems to have been duly observed by the ubiquitous small boy this year. Their attacks seem to have been confined to a certain line of goods which seem to indicate depraved tastes rather than otherwise. No serious damage was done, however.

Farmers who have wood and hay to sell will do wellto improve the pressent good market. Hay finds a ready market at from $8 to $10 per ton and but very little wood is being brought in by farmers. A car load now and then finds its way in from the Maple Lake country.

Ole Bang was up from the west side last week, looking fat, healthy and hearty. Ole has developed into a boss granger, raising 20 bushels per acre of No. 1 Hard wheat. He is able to hold it until he can get a big price for it. Ole said his town is solid for Owen and a farmer legislature and the returns back his judgment.

A runaway on Saturday morning caused a ripple of excitement on the usual calm surface. A farmer's team, consisting of four horses attached to a lumber wagon, got frightened at the depot and took a whirl up Robert to Main and down Main, colliding with several vehicles. The driver and team escaped uninjured.

Just gaze upon the new announcement of Gervais, the hustler, on the outside page of this issue, and when you need anything in that line go and see what he can do for you. The man who is not afraid of a little expense in letting the people know what he has for sale is liberal enough to give good bargains every time. Go and see Gervais, the Hustler, when he gets into his new quarters in the McKinnon block.

A Woman Farmer.

P. W. Johnson, who was up from Garden last week informs us that Mrs. Henry Witty raised 20 bushels of wheat per acre this year, wheat, that if she can get justice in the market is No 1 hard. Mrs. Witty has managed her farm alone ever since the death of her husband several years since, and has always raised a good crop.

Attention Comrades.

The Senior Vice Commander will be at G. A. R. Hall on Friday evening. Turn out for inspection.

Bad For Merriam

A dispatch to the Grand Forks Plaindealer says: St. Paul, Nov. 4.—The vote of Minneapolis seems likely to settle the election, that city having already given a sufficient vote against Merriam to nearly defeat him. Two years ago he left Hennepin county with a plurality of nearly four thousand, but if the figures thus far reported are continued he will leave that county this year with nearly that much against him. This fact, together with the great losses elsewhere, indicate at least a very much reduced plurality. Nothing yet on congressessional.

Strangers And Citizens Alike.

In the city next Sunday are cordially invited to hear Rev. R. H. Battey at the Congregational Church. Subjects. 11 a. m. "Bitter Waters Healed." 7:30 p. m. "A Young Man Elected" Seats free. Sunday School at noon. Young People's meeting 6:45 p. m. 30 new hymn books, presented to the congregation by the Ladies Society next Sunday. 30 new lesson leaves for the S. S. Everybody invited.

Lee & Herrick are selling flour down to hard pan, see them before laying in your supply they will save you money, quality guaranteed first class.

LEE & HERRICK.

Election day was very quiet but a great deal of solid work was done nevertheless, the results of which will appear later.

P. W. Johnson was up from Garden last Friday and dropped in to chat with THE JOURNAL man. He raised 21 bushels of wheat per acre—wheat good enough for 1 Hard but he was only allowed 1 Northern for a portion of it and 2 Northern for the balance. P. W. has rented his farm for a term of years and opened a restaurant in Fertile. If he makes as great a success in this line as he did at farming he will do exceedingly well.

The experience of the two years past demonstrates the capacity of the Red River Valley for wheat, if it never was before. Notwithstanding unfavorable weather at the critical period and excessive drouths, our wheat has been of a uniformly good quality and yielded well. With a fair show in the markets our farmers would have been making big money and this fact would have brought in hundreds of farmers anxious to buy lands. The country is all right enough, anyhow.

Some good friend at Edna wrote THE JOURNAL a letter upon political topics this week but fails to date or sign the communication so we do not know to whom we are indebted. We would like to know for the letter is well written, showing that the writer is a thinking man and would like to have the pleasure of an hour's talk with him feeling assured that we could give him some valuable pointers that he seems to have overlooked entirely.

Subscriptions begin to come in encouragingly. Every day for the past week, except Sunday, from six to a dozen have dropped in to square up, and many names have been added to our list. Such substantial encouragment is what puts life in a paper and encourages the publisher to greater activity. In this year of good crops and good prices there should be no excuse for anybody allowing his subscription to run over, and we hope no one will do so.

The long illness of THE JOURNAL publisher, Mr. W. G. Cooke, has been a very expensive one, and while he is gaining encouragingly, the expenses must continue until his complete recovery. We trust that all of our friends will make a greater effort than ever to help us this fall while we are in such need of their aid by renewing their subscriptions and suggesting to their neighbors that now would be a good time for them to subscribe. Remember, that THE JOURNAL is with the farmers until a free and open wheat market is obtained, and will sustain you as long as do you it. We have so far this fall been too busy to make out and send subscription accounts, but most of our friends have business in town often and could drop in and see us.

Nels Highberg was down from Black River last week and reports a sad accident that befell Oscar Peterson, a fifteen year old boy, on Wednesday, Oct. 29th. Mr. Highberg was moving his traction engine from one job of threshing to another and young Peterson climbed upon the engine while in motion, and his coat got entangled in the cogs drawing him in and injuring his shoulder and back so severely that his life was despaired of. A doctor was summoned from Red Lake Falls at once to attend to the injured boy. The engine was damaged to such an extent that Mr. H. had to come to Crookston for repairs for it. The boy was alive when Mr. H. left on Thursday morning, but the doctor gave small hopes for his recovery.

The object the farmers sought was simply the benefit of the country and yet machine politicians would like to crucify the farmers and every man who sought to aid them. In the next campaign both of the old parties will pay more attention to the demands of the farmers who have proved that they are more than simply voting cattle. If you want farmers' votes hereafter you must pay some attention to the requirements of agriculture.

Two Merriam votes lost. D. Jacobus and Herb Mason went to St. Paul this week and did not return it time to vote for Merriam.

John McKinnon's boy, Archie was hurt last week by a pebble from a sling shot and for a time it was feared that he would loose the sight of one eye. He is doing nicely now, however.

Election day was mild and pleasant which means a big vote for the farmers' cause in the county and state. It it should result in the election of S. M. Owen for governor it would be a day well spent.

One of Shaegreen's horses was taken very sick on election day and the foreman came over in great haste after Mike LeGues who soon remedied the difficulty and sent a well horse back to the stable.

I. E. Glidden, the big Kittson county farmer, came down on Monday night. Said Owen would have a big vote in Kittson county. Mr. G. is looking for some man who has a number of good sheep for sale.

The opposition to the farmers' cause were driven into the last ditch when the only thing they could bring against E. E. Lommen was to call him a "dude." But the farmers did not scare worth a cent at that kind of a dude. They all do-ed their duty by voting for him.

M. E. Bartlett met with a severe injury a few days since which laid him up a while. He was doctoring a sick horse and in attmepting to lead him out of the stable the animal crowded him against a post injuring him severely internally. He is able to be around a little.

East Grand Forks Court r.

During the teachers' institute at Crookston, some few days since, Prof. Rocheleau, of the normal school at Moorhead, assisted Prof. Casey, and in many ways helped to make light the hearts of the school marms in attendace. One afternoon during the institue Prof. Rocheleau requested all the teachers present to stand up who could tell him the name of the present secretary of state in Harrison's cabinet. Quite a few stood up. Other questions of a like nature were asked, and answered in the same way. The professor wasn't satisfied. He wished to see all the teachers present stand up, so he ventured an easy one by asking how many teachers present could name the judges of the supreme court. Ten stood up. The professor rubbed his brow thoughtfully for a moment, when suddenly looking up he asked: "How many here have heard of John L. Sullivan?" Instantly everybody stood up, and the professor seemed pleased. The day following, just previous to commencing the exercises for the day, he wanted to know what man in public life was best known to the teachers. The answer went up from all parts of the hall—"Superintendent Casey." Professor Rocheleau differed, however, with the teachers, claiming that the honor belonged to John L. Sullivan—exit Supt. Casey.

CROOKSTON BUSINESS COLLEGE AND INSTITUTE OF SHORTHAND.

TEACHING FOREIGNERS.

A Business College has great advantages over other schools for teaching Germans Scandinavians and other foreigners.

Of course, business is done in this country very differently from the way it is done in the old country, and a young man who has been in America only a few years cannot understand what is needed in business here, unless somebody teaches him. If he goes into a store, no one there has the time to teach him. So the best place to learn how business is done is in a college.

In our school he can learn how to read and write the English language correctly, and prepare himself to conduct his own business affairs successfully.

Our teachers will do all they can to help along those who do not know our language very well, and every student receives personal, and individual instruction.

Our foreign students generally make as good progress as our American students.

There is a great demand in business for young men who can speak the German or Scandinavian languages, so our foreign students have no trouble in getting work when they finish our course of study.

The Habit of Industry.

Western Rural:—Don't think the boys too young. As soon as they can understand and perform some slight task insist upon their doing them. Have some daily task suitable to the age of the child, and see that they are performed. It sometimes becomes monotonous and requires time and patience, but it begets habits of industry and self-reliance. I once heard a Christian minister state that he owed his success in life to his mother, who taught him when a child habits of industry. Among other things he was required every night to pickup a basket of chips. His mother reminded him of it for several nights, when she left it for him to recollect himself, which he did for some time. But one night getting very much interested in play, he forgot it until after dark. Beginning to prepare for bed his mother remarked: "Willie, you will have to pick up your chips." "But it's dark, mother," he replied. "You must pick up your chips' my son'„ was the rejoinder in such a tone that he knew resistance to be useless. He went out and picked the chips and "never after that," said he, "did Willie forget his chips. To carry out the rules as this mother did made a self-reliant, industrious man. Many of us are too indulgent and our children suffer thereby. I have in mind a mother, who thought her boy too young to work until almost in his teens, when she found, to her astonishment, that it was impossible to set him at any thing and keep him at it. He hadn't the habit of working and hasn't to this day acquired it, though he has arrived at manhood. An idle boy will make a shiftless man.

Miss Hattie Bivens is slowly recovering health.

Gervais, the hustler, will have the dandy store.

W. G. Cooke rode over from the farm on Saturday last. He is gaining very encouragingly.

J. U. Jennings went down to Onstad last Saturday evening to speak at a big alliance rally in that town.

Apples are going to be high and scarce in the market. They are now quite reasonable $4.50 per barrel.

Adolph Biermann was in the city last week looking after his fences. He seemed pretty confident of election.

C. Snyder is hauling in his crop of No. 1 Hard wheat to the Valley Roller mills. Snyder has a good crop this year.

John Wyatt informs THE JOURNAL that he is alone in business again. Mr. Zeigler has gone to Grand Forks to work at his trade.

We would like a few bushels of potatoes and a few cords of wood on subscription and would like it right now while we need it most.

The funeral of Ole E. Rude's little boy took place on Friday last. It was largely attended by the neighbors and friends of the family.

Quite a goodly number of ladies exercised their right to vote for Supt. of schools on Tuesday. Supt. Casey seemed to be the favorite.

Lovely weather still continues. There is time, however, for old winter to get in his work yet. The Indians and other ancient landmarks predict a severe winter.

Frank Haseltine reports a good season's work and good collections this fall. Frank is a hustler from way back and amply deserves the success he has attained.

The Times man seems to have made a pretty good thing advocating the cause of railroad attorney Wilson, as they say he has bought the Stuart house on the hill.

J. R. Clements intends to add to the Commercial house a large four story addition next spring and will raise the main part one story. This will greatly improve that famous hostelry.

If you have not the ready money but have wood or potatoes, come and see us. We can use a limited amount of each in our business, and will pay the market price for what we require.

H. F. Brown has moved his cigar store into the store recently occupied by Fred Durand and is getting fixed in nice shape. He proposes to have the neatest store in that line in the city.

Very evidently the farmers of Minnesota were not satisfied with the way things have been run of late. They prefer hereafter to take a lively hand in matters that affect their own interests.

The liberal advertiser is a liberal man to deal with. Go and see Gervais, the Hustler, when you are in need of dry goods. See his invitation elsewhere. The biggest store and the biggest ad in the city.

Judge C. O. Christianson and Mat Cornelius took a trip through the towns along the east side last week, returning last Saturday night. They report they found the alliance strength almost solid in most towns.

Mrs. E. E. Bangs informs our reporter that her business has been very good this fall. This is as it should be, as she has the latest styles and her prices are extremely moderate, all of which the ladies appreciate highly.

The firm of Barnes & Slocum has been dissolved, and O. J. Barnes will hereafter go it alone on the cash principle. We have not learned what line Mr. Slocum will engage in but are told that he will remain in Crookston.

It looks as though the N. P. would not put on that day train you have heard so much about. It dont materialize as yet anyhow, and business is generally lighter in the winter than in the summer with not so much call for it.

More wheat was brought into market on Monday last than any day so far this fall. The teams came in squads of from six to a dozen all day long. Most of the wheat is of excellent quality—good enough to grade 1 Hard whether it does or not.

The firemen's ball last week was well attended and a success in every particular. One unique feature was the drill of the young fire company—youths from 6 to 12 years old—conducted by Jack McLaren. Everybody said they made a fine display.

Andrew Skog leaves for Tacoma this week on a prospecting tour. He may conclude to locate there should he be suited. He remarked to us last week that he could not think of leaving until he had cast a solid vote for S. M. Owen and a farmer legislature.

Up to the time of going to press the election returns are very slow in coming in. We have secured the following estimate in the city:

	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th
Merriam	26	86	17	82	21
Wilson	85	78	81	91	12
Owen	82	57	24	92	27
Comstock	88	89	21	87	6
Whiteman	89	79	88	92	16
Halvorson	68	49	20	80	17
Biermann	97	85	82	152	23
McGuire	45	81	42	122	12
Cornelius	07	88	88	188	0
Gilley	28	87	17	56	10
Webster	47	42	18	67	17
Locken	95	61	28	100	16

The following towns report as follows:

Lowell, 78 votes cast. Owen 78.

Liberty, 60 vote cast. Owen 60.

Garfield, Owen 135, Merriam 26, Wilson 10.

Godfrey, Owen 62, Merriam 17.

Garden, 140 votes cast. Owen 140.

Red Lake Falls, total vote 57. Owen 54.

Bygland, Owen 70, Merriam 8.

Angus, Owen 28, Merriam 5, Wilson 13.

Fairfax, Owen 45, Merriam 2, Wilson 3, Chesley 45, Thompson 42, Carlton 48, Lommen 26, Cromb 7, McKinnon 17, Webster 20, Cornelius 8, Gilley 4, Biermann 48, McGuire 7.

Gentilly, Owen 80, Merriam 2, Wilson 4, McKinnon 67, Cromb 17.

Kertsonville solid for Owen, 44 votes.

Roome, Owen 81, Merriam 1, Pinkham 2, Lommen 91, Locken 88, Muus 91, Grundyson 82, Grefthen 100, Casey 15.

Russia, Owen 21, Wilson 8.

Crookston, Owen 37, Merriam 6, Wilson 8.

Euclid, Owen 34, Merriam 7, Wilson 7.

Reis, Owen 23, Merriam 19.

Hubbard, Owen 78, Merriam 1, Wilson 1.

No reliable estimate can, at this writing, be given, but enough is known to show that Owen's vote has been largely underestimated so far and he has carried Polk County by the largest vote ever given a candidate. This shows conclusively that we were right when we said that Polk County was not in favor of Merriam for re-election. It is probable that the entire alliance ticket is elected, with possibly one or two exceptions. Sometimes it is well enough to heed public sentiment when it is as plainly expressed as was the antipathy to Merriam in Polk County.

Have you paid your bets?

Lovely Indian summer days.

Bert Duntley connects with the sewer.

Gautier de St. Croix was in the city on Tuesday.

The Commercial hotel is being connected with the sewer.

How did you vote? If you voted for an open wheat market you need not be ashamed of it.

Mayor McKinnon's vote for senator proved a surprise party to some who did not know his hustling capacity.

Wait for Gervais grand opening. Gervais the Hustler.

Wheat has an upward tendency this week. It should reach the dollar mark soon.

The carpenter work on the new Opera block is being pushed these bright days. The block will soon be ready for business.

Henry Steege has decided to go into business in Crookston again and will open a meat-market in the room now occupied by Gervais, the Hustler, just as soon as it is vacated. Henry finds that, after all, there is no better place for business than Crookston.

All Hallowe'en seems to have been duly observed by the ubiquitous small boy this year. Their attacks seem to have been confined to a certain line of goods which seem to indicate depraved tastes rather than otherwise. No serious damage was done, however.

Farmers who have wood and hay to sell will do well to improve the present good market. Hay finds a ready market at from $8 to $10 per ton and but very little wood is being brought in by farmers. A car load now and then finds its way in from the Maple Lake country.

Ole Bang was up from the west side last week, looking fat, healthy and hearty. Ole has developed into a boss granger, raising 20 bushels per acre of No. 1 Hard wheat. He is able to hold it until he can get a big price for it. Ole said his town is solid for Owen and a farmer legislature and the returns back his judgment.

A runaway on Saturday morning caused a ripple of excitement on the usual calm surface. A farmer's team consisting of four horses attached to a lumber wagon got frightened at the depot and took a whirl up Robert to Main and down Main colliding with several vehicles. The driver and team escaped uninjured.

Just gaze upon the new announcement of Gervais the hustler on the outside page of this issue, and when you need anything in that line go and see what he can do for you. This man who is not afraid of a little expense in letting the people know what he has for sale is liberal enough to give good bargains every time. Go and see Gervais, the Hustler, when he gets into his new quarters in [illegible].

A Woman Farmer.

P. W. Johnson, who was up from Garden last week, informs us that Mrs. Henry Willy raised 20 bushels of wheat per acre this year, wheat that if she can get justice in the market is No. 1 hard. Mrs. Willy has managed her farm alone ever since the death of her husband several years since, and has always raised a good crop.

Attention Comrades.

The Senior Vice Commander will be at G. A. R. Hall on Friday evening. Turn out for inspection.

Bad For Merriam.

A dispatch to the Grand Forks Plaindealer says: St. Paul, Nov. 4.—The vote of Minneapolis seems likely to settle the election, that city having already given a sufficient vote against Merriam to nearly defeat him. Two years ago he left Hennepin county with a plurality of nearly four thousand but if the figures thus far reported are continued he will leave that county this year with nearly that much against him. This fact, together with the great losses elsewhere, indicate at least a very much reduced plurality. Nothing yet on congressional.

Strangers And Citizens Alike.

In the city next Sunday are cordially invited to hear Rev. R. H. Battey at the Congregational Church. Subjects, 11 a. m. "Bitter Waters Healed." 7:30 p. m. "A Young Man Elected." Seats free. Sunday School at noon. Young People's meeting 6:45 p. m. 80 new hymn books, presented to the congregation by the Ladies Society next Sunday. 30 new lesson leaves for the S. S. Everybody invited.

Election day was very quiet, but a great deal of solid work was done nevertheless, the results of which will appear later.

P. W. Johnson was up from Garden last Friday and dropped in to chat with THE JOURNAL man. He raised 21 bushels of wheat per acre—wheat good enough for 1 Hard, but he was only allowed 1 Northern for a portion of it and 2 Northern for the balance. P. W. has rented his farm for a term of years and opened a restaurant in Fertile. If he makes as great a success in this line as he did at farming he will do exceedingly well.

The experience of the two years past demonstrates the capacity of the Red River Valley for wheat, if it never was before. Notwithstanding unfavorable weather at the critical period and excessive drouths, our wheat has been of a uniformly good quality and yielded well. With a fair show in the markets our farmers would have been making big money and this fact would have brought in hundreds of farmers anxious to buy lands. The country is all right enough, anyhow.

Some good friend at Edna wrote THE JOURNAL a letter upon political topics this week but fails to date or sign the communication so we do not know to whom we are indebted. We would like to know for the letter is well written, showing that the writer is a thinking man and would like to have the pleasure of an hour's talk with him feeling assured that we could give him some valuable pointers that he seems to have overlooked entirely.

Subscriptions begin to come in encouragingly. Every day for the past week, except Sunday, from six to a dozen have dropped in to square up, and many names have been added to our list. Such substantial encouragement is what puts life in a paper and encourages the publisher to greater activity. In this year of good crops and good prices there should be no excuse for anybody allowing his subscription to run over, and we hope no one will do so.

The long illness of THE JOURNAL publisher, Mr. W. G. Cooke, has been a very expensive one, and while he is gaining encouragingly, the expenses must continue until his complete recovery. We trust that all of our friends will make a greater effort than ever to help us this fall while we are in such need of their aid by renewing their subscriptions and suggesting to their neighbors that now would be a good time for them to subscribe. Remember, that THE JOURNAL is with the farmers until a free and open wheat market is obtained, and will sustain you as long as you do so. We have so far this fall been too busy to make out and send subscription accounts, but most of our friends have business in town often and could drop in and see us.

Nels Highberg was down from Black River last week and reports a sad accident that befell Oscar Peterson, a fifteen year old boy, on Wednesday, Oct. 29th. Mr. Highberg was moving his traction engine from one job of threshing to another and young Peterson climbed upon the engine while in motion and his coat got entangled in the cogs drawing him in and injuring his shoulder and back so severely that his life was despaired of. A doctor was summoned from Red Lake Falls at once to attend to the injured boy. The engine was damaged to such an extent that Mr. H. had to come to Crookston for repairs for it. The boy was alive when Mr. H. left on Thursday morning, but the doctor gave small hopes for his recovery.

The object the farmers sought was simply the benefit of the country and yet machine politicians would like to crucify the farmers and every man who sought to aid them. In the next campaign both of the old parties will pay more attention to the demands of the farmers who have proved that they are more than simply voting cattle. If you want farmers votes hereafter you must pay some attention to the requirements of agriculture.

Two Merriam votes lost. D. Jacobus and Herb Mason went to St. Paul this week and did not return it time to vote for Merriam.

John McKinnon's boy, Archie was hurt last week by a pebble from a sling shot and for a time it was feared that he would loose the sight of one eye. He is doing nicely now, however.

Election day was mild and pleasant which means a big vote for the farmers' cause in the county and state. If it should result in the election of S. M. Owen for governor it would be a day well spent.

One of Shaesgreen's horses was taken very sick on election day and the foreman came over in great haste after Mike LeGuee who soon remedied the difficulty and sent a well horse back to the stable.

I. E. Glidden, the big Kittson county farmer, came down on Monday night. Said Owen would have a big vote in Kittson county. Mr. G. is looking for some man who has a number of good sheep for sale.

The opposition to the farmers' cause were driven into the last ditch when the only thing they could bring against E. E. Lommen was to call him a "dude." But the farmers did not scare worth a cent at that kind of a dude. They all do-ed their duty by voting for him.

M. E. Bartlett met with a severe injury a few days since which laid him up a while. He was doctoring a sick horse and in attempting to lead him out of the stable the animal crowded him against a post injuring him severely internally. He is able to be around a little.

East Grand Forks Court [illegible].

During the teachers' institute at Crookston, some few days since, Prof. Rocheleau, of the normal school at Moorhead, assisted Prof. Casey, and in many ways helped to make light the hearts of the school marms in attendance. One afternoon during the institue Prof. Rocheleau requested all the teachers present to stand up who could tell him the name of the present secretary of state in Harrison's cabinet. Quite a few stood up. Other questions of a like nature were asked, and answered in the same way. The professor wasn't satisfied. He wished to see all the teachers present stand up, so he ventured an easy one by asking how many teachers present could name the judges of the supreme court. Ten stood up. The professor rubbed his brow thoughtfully for a moment, when suddenly looking up he asked: "How many here have heard of John L. Sullivan?" Instantly everybody stood up, and the professor seemed pleased. The day following, just previous to commencing the exercises for the day, he wanted to know what man in public life was best known to the teachers. The answer went up from all parts of the hall—"Superintendent Casey." Professor Rocheleau differed, however, with the teachers, claiming that the honor belonged to John L. Sullivan—exit Supt. Casey.

CROOKSTON BUSINESS COLLEGE AND INSTITUTE OF SHORTHAND.

TEACHING FOREIGNERS.

A Business College has great advantages over other schools for teaching Germans Scandinavians and other foreigners.

Of course, business is done in this country very differently from the way it is done in the old country, and a young man who has been in America only a few years cannot understand what is needed in business here, unless somebody teaches him. If he goes into a store, no one there has the time to teach him. So the best place to learn how business is done is in a college.

In our school he can learn how to read and write the English language correctly, and prepare himself to conduct his own business affairs successfully.

Our teachers will do all they can to help along those who do not know our language very well, and every student receives personal, and individual instruction.

Our foreign students generally make as good progress as our American students.

There is a great demand in business for young men who can speak the German or Scandinavian languages, so our foreign students have no trouble in getting work when they finish our course of study.

The Habit of Industry.

Western Rural:—Don't think the boys too young. As soon as they can understand and perform some slight task insist upon their doing them. Have some daily task suitable to the age of the child, and see that they are performed. It sometimes becomes monotonous and requires time and patience, but it begets habits of industry and self-reliance. I once heard a Christian minister state that he owed his success in life to his mother, who taught him when a child habits of industry. Among other things he was required every night to pick up a basket of chips. His mother reminded him of it for several nights, when she left it for him to recollect himself, which he did for some time. But one night getting very much interested in play, he forgot it until after dark. Beginning to prepare for bed his mother remarked: "Willie, you will have to pick up your chips." "But it's dark, mother," he replied. "You must pick up your chips' my son'," was the rejoinder in such a tone that he knew resistance to be useless. He went out and picked the chips and "never after that," said he, "did Willie forget his chips. To carry out the rules as this mother did made a self-reliant, industrious man. Many of us are too indulgent and our children suffer thereby. I have in mind a mother, who thought her boy too young to work until almost in his teens, when she found, to her astonishment, that it was impossible to set him at any thing and keep him at it. He hadn't the habit of working and hasn't to this day acquired it, though he has arrived at manhood. An idle boy will make a shiftless man.

CROOKSTON, MINN.

The three State central committees on Monday figured out a majority for their candidates for governor. They all conceded that it would be a close thing. Owen seemed to be in the lead.

On Tuesday every man was a sovereign—a king, and right royally did the farmers of Polk County manifest their sovereignty. They had a principle in this fight and right royally did they stand by it. They deserve to win an open and unrestricted wheat market and they will win it.

Oh, no! The farmers of Polk County didn't mean anything when they said they wanted a free and open wheat market. Well, go to work and count their votes and see whether they did or not.

The Chronicle has been whacking away at us because it assumed that we were supporting a democrat for "poundmaster," or some such unimportant office, but not a word has it had to say about the spectacle of the Merriam party in this district endorsing a democrat for the important office of legislator. In our case the candidate referred to is an alliance man, but the candidate that the Merriam party endorsed was a simon pure democrat, dyed in the wool. "Oh, consistency, thou art a jewel!"

If you voted to keep an undue proportion of our wheat from falling into the maw of the voracious wheat gambler, you have the consciousness of a duty well performed. There are some who were honestly deceived—and others who know better, but still voted against the best interests of the country.

Brainerd Dispatch:—Hon. Knute Nelson is making some fine speeches for the republican cause in Minnesota. Among other things he said in a speech in his own district the other day was: "I have still faith in the democratic party, and believe that any wrongs will come nearer being righted within the ranks, than in any other party." The history of the republican party is a history of patriotism and progressive ideas. She has been tried and found to be abreast of the times, therefore can be trusted.

Didn't you get that speech a little mixed, Bro. Ingersoll? Or is Nelson himself a little bit mixed as to parties? How is that anyhow?

In its issue of Nov. 3d, the Chronicle congratulated itself that it has so far refrained from mud-throwing in this campaign, and in the same issue accused THE JOURNAL of advocating the farmers cause for boodle. During the campaign THE JOURNAL has refrained from noticing such attacks upon itself, having more important matters to discuss in its fight for an open market, but as the campaign is now over, we will make this offer to Mr. Palmer. If he will show one single instance where we have received one cent of "boodle" in this campaign, we will make him a present of a deed, free and clear, to THE JOURNAL property. Now put up or shut up. Of course it is well known that every farmer has it in his power, if he so chose, to put up a thousand or so for the support of a paper, and that every farmers' candidate is just lousy with "boodle," and of course THE JOURNAL got as much of it as any paper that has been fighting for a free and open wheat market! One feature of this campaign has struck us as very peculiar and that is that almost every Merriam paper has deemed it necessary to try to make out that every paper supporting Owen and the farmers cause has been influenced thereto by "boodle," and they have belittled the farmers' cause all they have dared, all the while they depend upon the farmer for their support. THE JOURNAL has fought for freedom in our wheat market because it is convinced that that is for the interest of all of the people of the county. In the start, it urged the farmers to insist upon electing their governor and legislature, and urged them to seek to do this through the republican party. So far as we were able we sought to have the republican party make the farmers' cause their own, but when that party, by its nominations, utterly refused to do so, we then urged the farmers to appeal from the decision of that party to the ballot. In this matter we have been consistent, and we do not regret it, for we know that it was for the interest of the country. If temporary gain had been our object, we well knew where the money was and could have had it, had we so willed. Certainly the farmers did not have it and never will until they can have justice in the markets. If they have been true to their own interests they have elected their governor and legislature and will be in shape to do something for themselves.

Sidney M. Owen.

Minneapolis Times.

The Times is very proud of the record made by Mr. Owen, the alliance candidate for governor. The chief figure in the greatest political revolution ever known in the history of the state, he has passed through a brutal campaign, absolutely unscathed and untouched by the missles of his enemies. It is possible Mr. Owen may not be elected governor of Minnesota next Tuesday, but if he should not, he will return to the walks of private life with the perfect respect and entire esteem of every man—friend and enemy alike—who has made his acquaintance during the canvass.

In this fight Mr. Owen has stood for principle, and has so borne himself that the political mud thrown in his direction has not defiled him. He entered the campaign a gentleman. For three months he has stood before the people of the state in the broad sunlight of perfect publicity, and remains a gentleman. He has uttered no campaign slander. He has not defiled his conscience with a lie. He has fought the fight of the down trodden and oppressed. He has arraigned a depraved plutocracy at the righteous bar of public opinion. He has been the shining mark for every shaft of political scandal and slander, and yet, withal, he has never for one moment sacrificed his self respect.

It is not to the shame of Mr. Owen if he is not chosen governor of Minnesota, but some time in the near future the people of the North Star state will confess that it was their shame, and the disgrace of the commonwealth that so good a man, and so upright a citizen could not be chosen as the state's chief executive. At any rate, it is more than merely complimentary to Mr. Owen that he has polled the largest vote ever given in the state to any man not nominated by one of the great political organizations.

Merriam's Tax List.

From the Stillwater Democrat.

Some citizen with a head for statistics has been consulting the records and has discovered that the supposed luxurious surroundings of the governor are "all in your eye," if the governor's oath counts for anything in an assessment of value. The much talked of princely stud of horses is only a few common old hacks, the whole herd of which only foots up $2,500, when the governor has been credited by his sporting friends with owning $40,000 worth of blooded stock. The modest sum of $300 represents the value of the watches, clocks and jewelry which the family of his excellency is supposed (by the tax gatherer) to own while the governor's personal friends have been admiring "the time o' day" which he carries in his own pocket and believing it to represent in the neighborhood of a thousand dollars. If the governor's oath counts for anything he is carrying a mighty shoddy kind of an establishment. The diamonds and elegant silverware which dazzle the eyes of the guests at the tony Merriam receptions must be borrowed for the occasion, for the tax list doesn't show anything of the kind. We would not be guilty of insinuating that the governor of this great state had been guilty of committing perjury for the sake of a few dollars tax. O, No! One who is so firmly "wedded to the doctrine of protection to American Industry" could hardly fail to pay just tribute to Cæsar for the good things he enjoys, but there's a screw loose somewhere. The governor must "fix" the reporters who "do" the Merriam receptions and describe in detail the magnificent things they see, or else he must fix the list to correspond with the facts that stick out all over the Merriam domicile and in a loud voice proclaim opulence and splendor. No one seems to have any disposition to regulate his excellency's domestic affairs; and if he is able to own $20,000 worth of jewelry and diamonds it is his own affair unless he swears to the assessor that they are only worth $300. Then it becomes the public's affair, and Mr. Merriam cannot be surprised if the public demands a fair division of taxation. If Mr. Merriam has not falsified his statement for assessment he owes it to himself and his party to say so; if he has done so his party owes it to him to "fire" him, and the public should see that the party pays its debt.

Extracts.

From Northwestern Farmer and Breeder.

In the Red River valley, wheat threshed out much better then was expected. This together with the high price of wheat, has enabled many farmers to pay of the mortgage, while the general feeling throughout the Valley is better then for some years past.

There seems to be a general upward turned in prices of farming lands all through Minnesota and portions of the Dakota counties of course will set them on the back seat for a time, but there is every reason to look for higher prices for choice farm lands all over the northwest.

The Possibilities of Wheat Culture.

A French paper says: Some thirty years ago the French considered a wheat crop quite good when it yielded 22 bushels to the acre, but with the same soil the present requirement is at least 33 bushels, while in the best soils the crop is good only when it yields from 43 to 48 bushels, and occasionally the product is 55 bushels to the acre. There are whole countries—Hess for example which are satisfied only when the average crop attains 37 bushels, while the experimental farms of central France produce from year to year over large areas 41 bushels to the acre, and a number of farms in northern France regularly yield year after year from 55 to 68 bushels to the acre. Occasionally even as much as 80 bushels have been obtained upon limited area under special care. In fact it is now proved that by combining a series of such simple operations as the selection of seeds, sowing in rows and proper manuring the crop can be increased by at least 75 per cent over the best present average, while the cost of production can be reduced by 50 per cent by the use of some inexpensive machines like steam digger or the pulverizer which make the soil required for each special culture. They are now occasionally [illegible]ed to, here and there, but they will come into general use as soon as humanity feels the need of increasing the agricultural product tenfold.

The Better Days.

Northwestern Agriculturist.—No one who has traveled much in Minnesota will question the statement that farmers in the southern and central portions of the State are making every rapid progress towards independence. They have seen hard times and know what it is to face misfortune and disaster. They know how hard it has been to carry the burden of debt, and what a long line of hard day's works it has taken and, in some cases will yet take to pay them, but they see the beginning of the end. This is evident in better homes, better barns, better stock, more conveniences and comforts, and better kept farms and fields. The farmers of the State are fortunate, as compared with those of any other portion of the country. Their lands are now advancing in value. The fever to go to the Pacific coast has cooled and people who are now here, and thousands who have gone further from market, are ready to say Minnesota is good enough for them and their children. It looks very much as if a better era was beginning, in which farmers generally, and especially those of the Northwest, would thrive and prosper. If farmers anywhere can live and thrive those of the Northwest will surely not have any reason to complain.

Gen'l Passenger Agent, St. Paul

The three State central committees on Monday figured out a majority for their candidates for governor. They all conceded that it would be a close thing. Owen seemed to be in the lead.

On Tuesday every man was a sovereign—a king, and right royally did the farmers of Polk County manifest their sovereignty. They had a principle in this fight and right royally did they stand by it. They deserve to win an open and unrestricted wheat market and they will win it.

Oh, no! The farmers of Polk County didn't mean anything when they said they wanted a free and open wheat market. Well, go to work and count their votes and see whether they did or not.

The Chronicle has been whacking away at us because it assumed that we were supporting a democrat for "poundmaster," or some such unimportant office, but not a word has it had to say about the spectacle of the Merriam party in this district endorsing a democrat for the important office of legislator. In our case the candidate referred to is an alliance man, but the candidate that the Merriam party endorsed was a simon pure democrat, dyed in the wool. "Oh, consistency, thou art a jewel!"

If you voted to keep an undue proportion of our wheat from falling into the maw of the voracious wheat gambler you have the consciousness of a duty well performed. There are some who were honestly deceived—and others who knew better, but still voted against the best interests of the country.

Brainerd Dispatch:—Hon. Knute Nelson is making some fine speeches for the republican cause in Minnesota. Among other things he said in a speech in his own district the other day was: "I have still faith in the democratic party, and believe that any wrongs will come nearer being righted within the ranks, than in any other party." The history of the republican party is a history of patriotism and progressive ideas. She has been tried and found to be abreast of the times, therefore can be trusted.

Didn't you get that speech a little mixed, Bro. Ingersoll? Or is Nelson himself a little bit mixed as to parties? How is that anyhow?

In its issue of Nov. 3d, the Chronicle congratulated itself that it has so far refrained from mud-throwing in this campaign, and in the same issue accused THE JOURNAL of advocating the farmers cause for boodle. During the campaign THE JOURNAL has refrained from noticing such attacks upon itself, having more important matters to discuss in its fight for an open market, but as the campaign is now over, we will make this offer to Mr. Palmer. If he will show one single instance where we have received one cent of "boodle" in this campaign, we will make him a present of a deed, free and clear, to THE JOURNAL property. Now put up or shut up. Of course it is well known that every farmer has it in his power, if he so chose, to put up a thousand or so for the support of a paper, and that every farmers' candidate is just lousy with "boodle," and of course THE JOURNAL got as much of it as any paper that has been fighting for a free and open wheat market! One feature of this campaign has struck us as very peculiar and that is that almost every Merriam paper has deemed it necessary to try to make out that every paper supporting Owen and the farmers cause has been influenced thereto by "boodle," and they have belittled the farmers' cause all they have dared, all the while they depend upon the farmer for their support. THE JOURNAL has fought for freedom in our wheat market because it is convinced that that is for the interest of all of the people of the county. In the start, it urged the farmers to insist upon electing their governor and legislature, and urged them to seek to do this through the republican party. So far as we were able we sought to have the republican party make the farmers' cause their own, but when that party, by its nominations, utterly refused to do so, we then urged the farmers to appeal from the decision of that party to the ballot. In this matter we have been consistent, and we do not regret it, for we know that it was for the interest of the country. If temporary gain had been our object, we well knew where the money was and could have had it, had we so willed. Certainly the farmers did not have it and never will until they can have justice in the markets. If they have been true to their own interests they have elected their governor and legislature and will be in shape to do something for themselves.

Sidney M. Owen.

Minneapolis Times.

The Times is very proud of the record made by Mr. Owen, the alliance candidate for governor. The chief figure in the greatest political revolution ever known in the history of the state, he has passed through a brutal campaign, absolutely unscathed and untouched by the missles of his enemies. It is possible Mr. Owen may not be elected governor of Minnesota next Tuesday, but if he should not, he will return to the walks of private life with the perfect respect and entire esteem of every man—friend and enemy alike—who has made his acquaintance during the canvass.

In this fight Mr. Owen has stood for principle, and has so borne himself that the political mud thrown in his direction has not defiled him. He entered the campaign a gentleman. For three months he has stood before the people of the state in the broad sunlight of perfect publicity, and remains a gentleman. He has uttered no campaign slander. He has not defiled his conscience with a lie. He has fought the fight of the down-trodden and oppressed. He has arraigned a depraved plutocracy at the righteous bar of public opinion. He has been the shining mark for every shaft of political scandal and slander; and yet, withal, he has never for one moment sacrificed his self-respect.

It is not to the shame of Mr. Owen if he is not chosen governor of Minnesota; but some time in the near future the people of the North Star state will confess that it was their shame, and the disgrace of the commonwealth that so good a man, and so upright a citizen could not be chosen as the state's chief executive. At any rate, it is more than merely complimentary to Mr. Owen that he has polled the largest vote ever given in the state to any man not nominated by one of the great political organizations.

Merriam's Tax List.

Some citizen with a head for statistics has been consulting the records and has discovered that the supposed luxurious surroundings of the governor are "all in your eye," if the governor's oath counts for anything in an assessment of value. If the governor's oath counts for anything he is carrying a mighty shoddy kind of an establishment. The diamonds and elegant silverware which dazzle the eyes of the guests at the tony Merriam receptions must be borrowed for the occasion, for the tax list doesn't show anything of the kind. WHAT IT MEANS.

Pioneer Press.

The central fact of the election returns is the loss of congress by the republican party. It has gone out of power in the lower house by a majority which it will not be possible to estimate closely for some days or weeks, but which is probably about 125 votes. It is a result which calls for explanation. It was not wholly unexpected; and, if its proportions were smaller, it would be easily accounted for. The democrats were expected to gain about fifteen seats in the gerrymandered states and in the South; had they gained no more, it would have indicated a defeat produced solely by the exercise of unfair means. But they have gained more. They have made inroads on the republican strength in sure as well as in doubtful states. They have secured seats in New England, in the Middle states and in the West, which they could win only by a change in public opinion. The party would be more than foolish if it were to shut its eyes to the fact. Why should it have been possible, in face of the miserable record of obstruction which is all the democratic party had to offer, to accomplish a revolution like this? The change is too swift, too startling, too abrupt, not to have a definite cause.

It is fortunate for the cause of political education that we are not left in doubt. We do not have to go hunting among conflicting theories for an explanation of the republican defeat. For that defeat is no more pronounced than is the issue upon which it was accomplished. The republicans who assumed leadership in congress assumed leadership also on the field. They made up the issue, and they refused to so much as consider any other. The campaign which ended last Tuesday was fought, as far as the leaders could compel it, upon the sole issue of the McKinley bill. Many things were done at the last session of congress besides passing the McKinley bill. The majority has a long list of measures to its credit, upon which it might have made an appeal to the voter. And the wiser heads of the party were in favor of giving them at least their due prominence. But McKinleyism seemed to have bewitched everybody who came within its influence. Mr. Reed and Mr. McKinley declared that this must be an "aggressive" campaign; and that its aggressiveness must consist in challenging the opinion of the country on this one particular measure of raising duties which the people wanted reduced. They carried their fanatical devotion to the prohibitory tariff idea from congress to the stump. They dragooned the party in the field to support them, just as they had dragooned the party in congress in voting for their bill. They made the McKinley bill the heart and soul of the campaign. And if we could collect in a volume all the speeches made by them in the last four weeks, we should find ten times as much space devoted to eulogy of the McKinley bill as to all other questions combined. They were determined that the nation should vote on this issue of theirs, and they have had their will. We trust that they are satisfied with themselves and with the destruction which they have wrought.

At any rate, there is this much satisfaction to be had out of it: We know just what the country thinks of the McKinley programme. This defeat is not the result of apathy. It was not caused by the stay-at-home vote. It is a deliberate rebuke from the people, who believe in protection, but not in protection run mad. The republicans won on a protective platform in 1888. But there was not a word or a sylable in that platform which breathed a hint of higher duties. Such a thing the country never dreamed of until the bill now a law was proposed for passage. And the country repudiates it root and branch. This is a chastisement by republicans hands. It is a flagellation by men whose belief in the protective system is as strong as it ever was. But they will not permit unrebuked a wanton increase of taxes and of prices, not for protection, but for the purpose of destroying foreign trade. Doubtfully, reluctantly, almost despairingly, they have chosen rather to send a majority of democrats to Washington than to ratify the suicidal work which Reed and McKinley accomplished. Will the party heed the lesson?

This election decides nothing for 1892. The republican party has it in its power to win back all and more than it has lost. The nation believes in protection, and it will support a reasonable protective policy against Democratic free trade. But we must have an end of the present leadership. The party must prepare to fullfill its long-standing promise, to revise and reduce the tariff in the interest of reform. It must put aside the odious thing known as McKinleyism; which was never a truly Republican policy, and which is hostile to the traditions of the party and to the utterances of its most distinguished men. It must get rid of the Quays who have cast it into bad odor. It need sacrifice nothing of boldness in gaining discretion. The McKinley bill has cost us a majority in congress. The Lodge elections bill, if its passage is insisted upon, is more than likely to cost us the presidency. There is plenty of time to repair what damage has been done. But the party need to take heed to its bearings, and to refuse to follow two or three ambitious and reckless men into new and unpalatable policies. The Republican protest against the McKinley bill before its passage was loud and earnest. If that protest had been heeded, we should not have the great reverse of Tuesday. The question now is, will the party leaders take to heart this painful and costly lesson, and bring the party policy into harmony with its past, before a worse thing comes upon them and upon the mighty organization whose fortunes they have so wofully mismanaged?

Holding on to Wheat.

Country Gentleman.

Why are millers so anxious to fill their elevators to the utmost during the threshing season if wheat undergoes the enormous shrinkage that many agricultural editors would have us believe? I have often marketed wheat just before the new crop was harvested and it tested practically the same number of pounds per bushel as it did when threshed and the whole number of bushels had not fallen below machine measure. Holding the crop of 1889 till May, 1890, made an increase of 20 cents per bushel in price. This was better than it was two years previous, but even in the worst years we were repaid for holding, for this reason: There is a strong local demand for wheat here by millers during the months preceding the arrival of the new crop. The mills are empty at this time and frequently it is difficult to secure sufficient wheat to meet the demand. Also, most millers find it advantageous to mix some old wheat with the first batch of the new. Consequently they offer more than the market price at the time. This has been my usual time for marketing for more than ten years. This is undoubtedly a good time to sell, as I have noticed that they received without complaint quite inferior wheat, such as they would scarcely handle at other times. Nevertheless, I have found that really good wheat will scarcely demand a better price than at this time, and it certainly pays to build up a reputation for raising good clean wheat, and this alone will be worth five cents per bushel additional.

Wheat cannot be properly kept without a dry and vermin-proof granary, and the average farmer needs such an apartment for various purposes. During the winter we find it convenient to pass the entire crop through the fanning mill (which we now run with horse power, and it does the work better and more expeditiously than when turned by hand). It is then stored in the granary, from whence it is drawn out below when marketed. The wheat in this granary is kept as dry as in an elevator, and its good condition when sold and freedom from impurities are doubtless the reasons why we made it pay to keep the wheat even during those years when the prices ruled so low. Farmers would be less at the mercy of buyers if they had facilities for keeping wheat till they were warranted in disposing of it. There is an advance of fifteen cents per bushel in the price since threshing began last July. We shall not dispose of our present crop until the market begins to weaken, as we believe the advantage from storage is as patent to us as to the millers. If one has facilities for storage, he can haul grain to market during a season of leisure—an important matter when the market is distant.

Marketing Turkeys.

Farm, Stock and Home.

At this season the question that agitates the minds of many breeders is how to get as many pounds as possible onto the frame of all his marketable turkeys. The writer has always practiced the following plan (being born and raised upon a farm), and has always found it to be successful:

Where you desire to sell turkeys by the pound, dressed, confine them—about three weeks before market time—in a rather small, low coop with a dry floor. Feed them in the morning a soft hot mash of corn meal, or middlings and cracked corn, or some similar easily digested food. At noon feed them beef scraps if handy; if not, feed wheat, oats or screenings. In the evening give them a solid hearty meal of corn. At any meal give them all they will eat. If they show a preference for corn give it to them in quantities, that they will eat up clean. Two or two and one-half weeks of this kind of feeding will put all the fat onto a turkey that will be paltable at the table. Potato parings or small potatoes, or turnips, boiled, make an excellent morning mash.

It is best to allow your market turkeys all the range possible up to fattening time. The flesh will then have attained a nice degree of firmness which the fat induced by confinement will only improve, while the exercise thus obtained will nearly always produce a large frame, upon which no inconsiderable amount of meat may be placed by judicious feeding.

A little green food, such as chopped turnips or cabbage, will be appreciated by the confined birds, but do not feed onions—especially during the last week previous to killing. Although the birds will devour onions with avidity, this vegetable will give the flesh a faint, though distinguishable rank odor.

If your fowls are of a late hatch the fattening process should commence a couple of weeks earlier than otherwise, in order that the heat germinated by the fat from feeding may hasten the growth of new feathers. A comparatively young bird is always "full of pin feathers," and when a good start is had these troublesome adjuncts to the business may be gotten rid of.

The Aftermath.

Minneapolis Journal.

The Republican party has been badly wounded. Not wounded unto death, for its vitality is rooted in eternal principles of right. But Tuesday's sun went down on many stranded hopes and proud assumptions. There has been downright disaster along the whole line. The states, counted without a question within the Republican lines, have either been captured by the power of the independent movement or through its disintergrating force, or have been half wrested from the Republican grasp and made doubtful. The national house is aparently lost to the Republican party and, in our own state, all confident estimates and calculations have been shattered.

What is the cause of this? What is the matter?

There is one dominant reason. That is, the Republican party permitted the two men, Reed and McKinley, to originate shape and direct its policies. And the new policies were forced upon the party in the face of the palpable aversion of the country to these effectuations. The tariff policy, associated with the names of these two men, was a leading procuring cause of the current reverse. It was lashed through the house, against the conviction of scores of Republican members, that the party went into power in 1888 on the pledge of an entirely different traffic policy. It has made the campaign, on the part of the Republicans, one of apology and evasion. It has handicapped every Republican orator.

It was a mistake.

The federal election act was another measure which wrought adversely to the party. Had the senate passed it, the party would have suffered more than it has. The country wants neither the McKinley tariff policy nor the election bill.

Let the Republican party take warning. Let it set itself aright before the country and it will yet rule the country.

Railroad Rumors.

Grain Men Say The Eastern is Up to Its Old Tricks. Other News.

Duluth Evening Herald.

Grain men are still kicking over the way the Great northern handles Duluth grain. The Imperial mill men are the most agrieved parties at present. The Eastern Minnesota road, it is said, was asked to deliver some grain to the Imperial mill, wheat that had been inspected at West Superior. The company refused to deliver the wheat unless a shipping bill was made out similar to the bills used in moving grain from original points. Grain men also claim that the road changes its methods of dealing with Duluth shipments so often that local men can not depend upon any one plan as the only one in use.

"The Fon du Lac-South Superior branch of the St. Louis & Superior Terminal Railway company's tracks," said a well known railroad man this morning, "is to be built in the interest of the Duluth South Shore & Atlantic road. The road now has a terminal track near Superior, where the St. Louis company's track will join it. The South Shore road needs, therefore, to build only a comparatively short distance in order to reach South Superior. And in getting into Duluth the distance via St. Louis and New Duluth is but little greater than the mileage from South Superior to Duluth via West Superior and the Northern Pacific bridge to Rices Point."

Cheap Money.

The National Economist.

During the entire recent discussion of the tariff in congress one very essential point was entirely omitted—the effect of cheap money on productive industry. Neither of the parties deemed it safe to bring it up for discussion. In this they acted wisely, as the mere mention would have opened a train of ideas for consideration that would have been alike unpleasant and, perhaps, unfortunate to both. It would have shown the hollow mockery of the McKinley bill so far as the farmer is concerned, the utter inadequacy of many of its provisions, and demonstrated much too plainly for partisan purposes the extent to which the Republican party is dominated by New England. It would also have laid bare the fallacy of free imports without cheaper money, and have disclosed the fact that Democracy is ever slow to run counter to the interests of Wall street. The factories of New England and the money owners of New York were contending for the same principle, but for different objects. New England labored to keep out cheaper foreign products, and Wall street assisted to preclude cheaper money—not foreign money, but lower rates of interest on domestic capital. This of course would be very unsatisfactory to that class whose income depended upon the high rate of interest. With money at 2 per cent, American industry could defy the world; but with money loaning at 7 per cent, productive labor, unprotected, would be wiped out in many instances. It is but fair to assume, then, that the McKinley bill, to a considerble extent, does not protect the manufacturer, but the usurer; that it does not bring better wages to the laborer, but does bring higher interest to the money lender. When examined in that light it is not difficult to perceive how New England and Wall street are a unit in an effort to continue indirect taxation. In the United States it is quite safe to presume that $6,000,000,000 is required in the manufacturing industries. At an average of 7 per cent the interest upon this amount becomes a tax of $420,000,000 on those industries. In England the rate of interest would not exceed 3 per cent, or $180,000,000, making a difference of $240,000,000 in favor of England on the interest tax alone. If the American and English manufacturers were competing on similar lines of production, other things being equal, the English manufacturer would have $240,000,000 the advantage in the one item of interest charges. When it is understood that the entire revenue from customs amounts to less than $224,000,000, this advantage can be approximated. In view of this, would it not be well for the friends of tariff reform to begin at the next session of Congress with a bill to reform the currency and give the people cheaper money? With this reform first, tariff reform would follow as surely as night follows day. Without it a change in this direction will be almost impossible.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF POLK—ss. In Probate Court, Special Term, Sept. 30th, 1890.

In the matter of the estate of Napoleon Doaye, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Millie Doaye, executrix of the estate of Napoleon Doaye, deceased, representing, among other things, that she has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining and allowing the final account of her administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law.

It is ordered, that said account be examined, and petition heard, by this Court, on Tuesday, the 11th day of November, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the Probate Office in the city of Crookston, in said county.

And it is further ordered, that notice thereof be given to all persons interested by publishing a copy of this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston, in said county.

Dated at Crookston, the 30th day of September, A. D. 1890.

By the Court:
O. O. [illegible],
[26-28] Judge of Probate.

The first snow of the season on Saturday evening.

It seems as though Merriam was reelected by a scratch.

Fred Rauch has put in a new ice chest and slicked up a little.

If you have wood or potatoes to swap for subscription call and see us.

W. E. Slocum is helping Gervais, the hustler, in the new store awhile.

Farmers, if you want bargains, call and see Sture before you purchase.

See Mrs. E. E. Bangs' elegant fall and winter millinery. Prices to suit all.

The bit of snow makes pretty slippery going. Fine thing for blacksmiths.

Miss Jennie Newland is visiting Mrs. Frankie Dickenson this week at Stephen.

The president has appointed Thursday, November 27th, as Thanksgiving Day.

Fontaine & Anglim invite a call from all who are looking for bargains in groceries.

Have you seen Gervais' show windows? They are worth a long journey to see.

Farmers and everybody cordially invited to call at Sture's store for supplies of all kinds.

Fontaine & Anglim are selling groceries cheaper than the cheapest. Give them a call.

Lee & Herrick are now selling their best patent flour for $2.25. Catch on while yet you may.

L. K. Aker was up from the west side on Monday to learn the result of the official count.

Sture has a choice lot of fine winter apples for sale cheap. Call before they are all gobbled up.

Miss Susie A. Schouwieler, of Wabasha, will shortly arrive for a visit with her sister during the winter.

Our former fellow-townsman, John N. Ives, was elected attorney general of Kansas, at the last election.

A great many good men went down on November 4th, owing to a misapprehension of the wishes of the people.

Bargain week at Fontaine & Anglim's. Before you purchase groceries call and see what they can do for you.

Rev. Battey has accepted the call to the Congregational church in this city. Communion service next Sabbath morning.

C. T. Lanman was down from McIntosh on Thursday to help rejoice in the great alliance victory which he helped to win.

A. Sture will pay the highest price for eggs, oats and potatoes. Call and see him if you have a surplus of these articles.

A. Grindeland was down from Warren this week greeting old friends and explaining the cause of the great avalanche.

Wheat went crazy right after election—it seemed to share the general depression at Owen's defeat and slumped off to 79 cents.

Duluth Tribune: Mr. and Mrs. Fred Reynolds are enjoying a visit from Mr. Reynold's mother, who arrived Tuesday from California.

John Lathrop has brought action against The Great West for criminal libel. If ever brought to trial this case will develope some things.

Go and secure your winter flour while Lee & Herrick are selling their best patent for $2.25. Probably it will not remain at that figure long.

We want a few loads of wood and a few bushels of potatoes on subscription. We will pay the highest market price therefor. Call and see us.

If the farmers in the south part of the state had done their duty, Owen would have been triumphantly elected; but they failed at the critical moment.

Mrs. E. E. Bangs will not be undersold in millinery goods. Remember that and call at her store on Second street, when you want a bargain in that line.

The canvassing board, consisting of Auditor, P. J. McGuire, Hugh Thompson and Judge Spendley, met in the Court House on Monday to canvass the votes.

Henry Steege is fixing up the store recently vacated by Gervais, the hustler, and will soon open out a fine meat market. Henry knows how to keep a meat shop.

Every man on the alliance county ticket was elected and now the other fellows are trying to figure out how it was done. Simple enough. They got all the votes.

Mike Leguee is kept busy attending to the ailments of the equine family, all the same he keeps his weather eye on the election returns to see who is elected governor.

Landlord Sundit seems to be doing a big hotel business these days. Scores of farmers daily put up there, showing that the average farmer knows a good hotel when he sees it.

Iver Krohn starts this week for a visit to Norway. Expects to be gone until spring.

Special bargains for the next 30 days at Sture's. Call in and see what he can do for you.

Hans Sampson came down from the Thirteen last week to tell us how the boys stood by their guns in that country. "The Old Guards" furnish the only other instance of the kind on record.

A. Sture says he wants to shake hands with every one of the Owen voters in Polk County, and if they will call at his store he will give each one a good bargain in groceries and general merchandise.

Gervais, the Hustler, will offer special sales in hosiery and underwear. A good all wool ladies' hose for 20 cents.

Mrs. E. E. Bangs desires her lady friends to know that she is better than ever prepared to attend to their wants in millinery and invites their attention to her fine stock. Call at her store on Second street.

Hon. Wm. Carlton and wife came down from Angus last week and remained a day or so. We will bet Will carries a lame arm from the shakes with his many friends here. He bears his honors becomingly.

A. R. Jones and family leave for St. Paul on Friday evening next. A. R. has been offered a situation as conductor on the motor line which he will accept, providing he finds everything satisfactory upon his arrival.

Special drives next week in all departments. Come in and get bargains at the big dry goods store.

GERVAIS, THE HUSTLER.

Cyprien Demers says: "That slick Merriam emissary, who thought to buy our 91 votes for $1.50 worth of poor whiskey got most beautifully left, as our vote clearly shows. Poplar River vote can't be bought for whiskey."

The evening papers for Monday state that Fish & Frain, of the Great West, were arraigned before the court in Washington County, for criminal libel on charges preferred by John Lathrop, plead guilty and were fined $50 each.

Sen. Vice Commander Parker came up last Friday evening and gave the boys of Col. Cobham Post a good talk. He came in place of Commander Compton, who had the misfortune to have his hand shot off early in September.

D. Jacobus returned this week from a visit below. He says "sometimes it is better that a man can't have his own way. Suppose I had been nominated for sheriff on the republican ticket. I would have been out two or three hundred dollars and in—the soup!"

Great attractions next week at the mammoth dry goods store.

GERVAIS, THE HUSTLER.

Col. Cobham Post has cause to feel honored in the election of one of our members to the legislature. Will Carlton is a man of whom the boys may well feel proud and his election is an honor the old soldiers will duly appreciate. 'Rah for Carlton.

Elmer Blanchard has returned to the city from his school near Euclid where he has taught for five successive terms, and will make his headquarters in the city for the winter. He has made arrangements to move to Kansas and expects to send his family there this fall.

A three months scholarship in Prof J. B. Lanigan's business college for sale Call at THE JOURNAL office. [21-tf]

D. D. Williams started for Oregon last Thursday where he will reside in the future. Mr. Williams has been an efficient county attorney during the time he has served Polk County in that capacity, and his many friends unite with THE JOURNAL in best wishes for his future prosperity.

H. F. Brown has repapered and repainted his new place on Second street, fixed everything up in apple pie order and is now ready to receive his friends to whom he extends a hearty invitation to drop in and look him over. The same old prices rule on cigars in spite of the tariff. If you enjoy an elegant smoke in an elegant store, call on H. F.

Charley Johnson came down from Rockstad last week to report a glorious alliance victory in his town. Charley is one of the veterans in the cause, having taken hold early last winter and worked faithfully and hard in the cause ever since. He is more than pleased at the way in which the farmers stood by their guns in the face of the enemy and says truly that it augurs well for the future.

C. P. Demers was down from Poplar River last week bringing an almost solid vote for Owen with him. He says he is glad to see by their vote that Crookston business men stand by the farmers. He thinks the farmers should reciprocate by standing by the city of Crookston which has so clearly proved its friendship, and he thinks that they will. He is proud of the vote his town gave the alliance ticket and says they will do it every time.

W. N. Godfrey came down from Maple Bay last week to bring a good report from the town of Godfrey and ascertain how the battle went. He was enthusiastic over the result and says he reckons the next time the people so emphatically say that they do not want a certain man for governor the politicians will pay attention to what the people do want. W. N. says if the farmers do not obtain their rights now, the next time it will be hotter. The powers that be must give heed to the wishes of the people.

The Official Count.

Gervais, the hustler, opened out in his new store on Monday morning and all day long a delighted multitude thronged his mammoth store, keeping the army of clerks busy as bees until late in the evening. Such a display of dry goods would be a credit to many a St. Paul house, and if there is anything he has not got we do not know what it is. In the rear of the mammoth establishment is the cloak and carpet department, where you can find anything in that line you could wish. The patent cash system carries your money from the smiling salesman up to the obliging cashier and returns the right change in short order, and it is worth a small sum just to see the machine work. It may be that Gervais may not know how to keep a hotel, but he does know how to run a metropolitan store all the same. The establishment is not only a credit to him, but to our thriving young city as well. Mr. Gervais richly deserves ample success, and we have no doubt his enterprise will prove remunerative.

Farmers have gained several good points in this fight, but they should not rest until the victory is entirely gained. They should go forward in alliance work with renewed vigor, ever on the alert and vigilant in their own interests and never get into the negligent habits to which some have been prone. They have lots of friends among business men and they should stand by all such. Crookston has shown many such and they should and will be supported.

For Sale.

New milch cow. Call on M. K. Bartlett, Fairfax, or at JOURNAL office.

We have to thank those of our friends who dropped in to square up that little subscription. One dollar and fifty cents is a very small item to each individual, but the aggregate on our list is a big thing for one alone to carry. We feel assured that every man in Polk County, who cares to secure his rights in an open wheat market will add his mite to uphold our hands in the cause. We trust that every man who is from one to two years in arrears will be able to show up this fall, as it means a sufficient help to us to go a long way toward paying our indebtedness. THE JOURNAL will stand by its friends as long as they will uphold it. To go through our entire list and make up a statement in every individual case involves a vast amount of labor and some extra expense, a large share of which could be saved us if every one who could, would drop in and see us. To those who have done so we return our hearty thanks.

CROOKSTON BUSINESS COLLEGE AND INSTITUTE OF SHORTHAND.

TEACHING FOREIGNERS:

A Business College has great advantages over other schools for teaching Germans Scandinavians and other foreigners.

Of course, business is done in this country very differently from the way it is done in the old country, and a young man who has been in America only a few years cannot understand what is needed in business here, unless somebody teaches him. If he goes into a store, no one there has the time to teach him. So the best place to learn how business is done is in a college.

In our school he can learn how to read and write the English language correctly, and prepare himself to conduct his own business affairs successfully.

Our teachers will do all they can to help along those who do not know our language very well, and every student receives personal, and individual instruction.

Our foreign students generally make as good progress as our American students.

There is a great demand in business for young men who can speak the German or Scandinavian languages, so our foreign students have no trouble in getting work when they finish our course of study.

"Consultation."

When a doctor finds that his patient is either growing worse, or making no progress towards recovery, he often calls in one or two other physicians in consultation. This consultation is, in fact equivalent to a confession, either that the doctor's skill is of no avail, or that he has used the wrong remedies. If the first is the case, the physicians labor together; if the latter, the treatment is changed, sometimes to the benefit of the patient, and very often to his distruction. But in the use of the Compound Oxygen Treatment there is no fear of any injury to the patient. Being inhaled into the lungs, it is taken into the blood, which distributes it to all parts of the body. It is a combination of the elements of the air, but richer in ozone. It is as easy to take as to breathe, and imparts new strength and vigor to every organ. But read our treatise on Compound Oxygen. Read what such men as Rev. Victor L. Conrad, Edward L. Wilson, Frank Siddall, and a host of others say of it. Book of 200 pages sent free. It gives a full history of the discovery, made of action and results of Compound Oxygen, with hundreds of testimonials and records of cures in cases of Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Catarrh, Malarial, Diseases, Nervous Prostration, and numerous other diseasee. You will also learn that over one thousand physicians are using it in their practies. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

"The original and only genuine Compound Oxygen Treatment," Drs. Starkey & Palen have been using for the last twenty years, is a scientific adjustment of the elements of oxygen and nitrogen magnetized, and the compound is so condensed and made portable that it is sent all over the world.

Drs. Starkey & Palen's office records show over 50,000 cases in which their original (and only genuine) Compound Oxygen Treatment has been used by physicians in their practice, and by invalids independently. Over 1,000 physicians and more than 49,000 invalids.

"Compound Oxygen—Its Mode of Action and Results," is the title of a new brochure of two hundred pages, published by Drs. Starkey and Palen, which gives to all inquirers full information as to this remarkable curative agent and a record of several hundred surprising cures in a wide range of chronic cases—many of them after being abandoned to die by other physicians. Will be mailed free to any address on application. Read the brochure!

The republican party will now brace up and try to do something for agriculture.

E. G. Holmes, for senator in the 50th district was defeated by the alliance nominee, H. M. Probstfield.

The alliance carried its point though some good men and true went down before the storm, because they did not fully appreciate the situation.

It was a grand run that Owen made even though he was not elected. Some day Minnesota will be independent enough to elect a good governor.

The labor element in the cities did not stand by the alliance worth a cent! Out upon such fawning sycophancy! You can't buy farmers that way.

C. P. Demers says: "Whiskey and cigars don't carry any more elections in our town! We know what we want, and we think we know how to get it hereafter."

Polk County gives her opinion of S. M. Owen in a way that does that gentleman proud. You can't tell us that S. M. Owen is not all right in every way, shape and manner.

Right here we wish to remark that had the party paid sufficient attention to the will of the people this would not have been thusly. The sovereign will of the people is law and must be heeded.

Some say it was a "cyclone," some say it was an "avalanche," some say one thing and some another, but we say that it was a warning to the republican party to quit fooling and attend to the business interests of the country.

Joel P. Heatwole, after having made a gallant fight as chairman of the State Central Committee, has gone to London, where he is to be married this month. Some day Joel will bob up serenely as Governor of Minnesota and then we will have a good one.

We can now tell that ranter in St. Paul what hay seed is worth. It is worth its weight in gold and cannot be bought for money! Wish we could say the same of the element in St. Paul that asked the question. Owen would have been elected if we could. "Hay seed" in Polk County is gilt-edged and unpurchasable, Mr. Man!

The Fisher Bulletin has just waked up to an issue of the present campaign. Says it was a "money loaner what did the bizness!" You need not go quite so far and lay it all to one man. We said some time since that people were tired of bossism, but the Bulletin man had to wait until he was knocked down and dragged out before he tumbled. We have casually remarked before that no one man was big enough to dictate to a sovereign people.

The campaign has developed some men who have shown by their actions that if they could not run the concern they would like to ruin it. Such infernal traitors richly deserve to be burned in effigy. The farmers stood in perishing need of immediate relief, but these infernal toad stools said by their actions: "If you can't let us run the concern you may perish for the want of your market. We will rule or ruin you!"

One feature of the late campaign is very gratifying to us and that is that S. M. Owen received a majority of the votes cast in Crookston. This shows plainly that the business men of Crookston are in sympathy with the farmer in his efforts to obtain a free and open wheat market, and that they are ready to aid and abet him in every possible way. This is as it should be. The interests of business men are identical with those of farmers, and we are more than pleased to see that this fact is recognized.

Early in September, while in St. Paul one day, the editor of this paper said to a Daily News reporter: "Merriam is not in it in Polk County. If the sentiment in every county is a reflex of that in Polk County, Merriam cannot possibly be elected." All the old-line machine politicians hooted at that and gave us the grand laugh, and many of the papers at once began to open out their mud batteries. Well, we let them fire away, knowing that they had to earn their money in some way, but now we wish to call their attention to the vote of Polk County and ask them how much Merriam was in it? Will they have the manliness to take back the unkind words spoken of us in the heat of battle and acknowledge their error? You may be sure that none of the boodlers will.

THE JOURNAL is forced to the conclusion that there was a Judas on board of the craft! A man occupying a very important position who, while he pretended to be a great farmers friend, was all the while doing all he could in an underhanded way to aid Merriam's cause, and we have heard many farmers in this neck of the woods express the same fear. They have spotted him and if it is proved true it were better for that man if he had never been born. It does not matter what some of the so-called alliance workers did, S. M. Owen is pure gold as every true alliance man can well see, and he should have been supported heartily. He would have been elected if some influential men had not sulked in their tents. They deserve the execration of every true alliance man.

Say, Bro. Osborne, of the Glyndon News, what do you think of the Polk County vote on Merriam?

And Donnelly goes to the senate from Dakota County. Good enough. There will be one good man on deck.

It would seem that the McKinley Bill was too heavy for Bill McKinley. The reports indicate his defeat for reelection.

Upon the face of the returns, Kittel Halvorson is undoubtedly elected by a majority of 1,500 or 1,600. We believe that the future will clearly show what the defeat of Mr. Comstock means to this district, for while we do not personally know much about Mr. Halvorson, we do know that Mr. Comstock is one of the most dilligent workers in Congress, and we feel that his absence in that body at this time will be a serious detriment to the best interests of the people. The district requires the services of just such a worker as Mr. Comstock is; and he should have been returned. We are confident if everybody knew him as well as does the writer, he would have been returned by a big majority; however, it is the will of the people and to that will we bow submissive.

The Bledge Broken

Minneapolis Journal.

On Nov. 8, 1888, The Journal commented upon the great victory of the Republican party throughout the country, which insured a Republican administration and Republican control of both houses of the national legislature. The position of the party through the campaign on the subject of the tariff was clearly shown to be emphatically that of promoting tariff reform. The platform utterance was shown to have been interpreted by the people and by the party press and campaign orators as intending tariff reform in the sense of an intelligent reduction of excessive duties, and upon this subject The Journal said:

"As the lines for the final contest on this issue were formed, they rapidly took position favorable to the Republicans. It became distinctly and unavoidably a question of protection or free trade. The Republicans have won on that issue, and they deserved it. Now, what are they going to do about it? Will they realize the fact that they could not have won if they had not persuaded the people that their's is the true party of tariff reform? And will they as soon as they have opportunity, proceeded to "adjust the inequalities of the tariff" in the interest of the people? They cannot afford to do otherwise. The protective principle has been preserved, thanks to the intelligence of the people. But it was preserved to be made highest benefit to the country. It has been preserved for a good purpose. The Republicans have an opportunity to make it serve that purpose in the highest dedgree. That is certainly a magnificent opportunity. It is unquestionably an imperative duty."

That was the position of the party when it went into full control of the government. Tariff reform was the spirit of the hour. It was inscribed upon the guidon of the party through the campaign. THE JOURNAL challenges a refutation of this fact. The party was expected to perform the recognized and avowed duty. The party expected it of the leaders in the house. What was the issue of that expectation?

The McKinley bill.

A Hint to Party Managers.

Minneapolis Journal.

The November election of 1890 must go on record as furnishing another instance of the prompt rebuke by the people of this country to part managers who, in the sublimity of their conceit, imagine that they are greater than their party and have some kind of ownership of the voters.

When the defeat of 1874 came suddenly upon the Republican party they had a majority of 106 in the house. the election of Nov. 1, 1874 gave the Democrats majority of 73 when the house was organized in December. the party leaders had become reckless and presumpuous.

The people are stronger than any intrenched boss. When they feel wronged, party ties snap asunder with a vengeance. The persistence in an extreme policy with regard to the Southern states stimulated the reaction which gave the Democrats the house of the Forty-fourth, Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth congresses. Political history teaches mighty lessons. In this country the lesson to party leaders who think they can ride rough-shod over the preferences and convictions of voters is full of meaning. The party manager cannot, without encountering a boomerang crack a slave-driver's whip over the heads of unwilling voters. The late election was a thunderous retort to the presumption of the house leaders. In Pennsylvania Quay had his locks shorn and his strength devitalized, because he had grown into the conceit that he owned the Keystone state in fee simple. The party manager has no business to assume that the voters are simply a plastic mass to be easily and mechanically manipulated.

In this country the people think and act for themselves when they think the occasion requires action.

The Discussion of Current Topics in the Organized States.

The Liberal Enterprise (Cuthbert, Ga—

Once more we call attention to the fact that no arguements are brought to bear against the sub treasury bill. Abuse of prominent Alliance men is the only stock in trade of those who oppose it. It is a very weak cause which must resort to slander and appeal to political prejudice to support it. The gutter and groundless attack upon the Alliance leaders is the strongest argument presented in favor of the sub treasury bill. It is the last resort of the man who is vanquished by argument.

The progressive Farmer (Raleigh, N. C.) says:

Now and then somebody rises up to remark that the sub-treasury bill is class legislation; that it is as bad as the tariff. It is class legislation, but there is no harm in it. If the goverment could put ten times as much money in circulation among our farmers, all other classes would reap a fair share of the prosperity. Farmers, as a rule, are not miserly. If farmers are rich, every other class will be prosperous. So it is impossible for "class" legislation in the interest of the farmers to hurt the other class. Remember that agriculture is a great sea. Every other business floats upon the water thereof like corks. If the water be troubled, your cork will go under; put if the surface be smooth and the water deep, the cork will continue to float proudly on. More class legislation is the need of the hour. Give the farmers all the class legislation they are justly entitled to and other classes will need but little legislation of any kind. If you are not a farmer, remember that you are swimming on the great, deep sea of agriculture, and whatever you do, don't agitate the waves.

The People,s Signal (Marlin, Tex—:)

Everything goes to indicate that there will be more business failures in the next four months than were ever known in the United States before in the length of time. If those who oppose the sub treasury bill can substitute a measure that will give to the agricultural districts the relief they demand more quickly and more effectually why do they not promulgate it?

The Signal forgives with a blessing:

For fourteen long years every vile and contemptible epithet that could possible be conceived of has been applied to us beacuse we opposed the infamous Hazzard circular monetary system of this country. It is a remarkble coincident, however, that Senator Coke has at last got his eyes open and indorses the identical position we took fourteen years ago. Like Paul of Tarsus the old sinner has persecuted the saints, but as the scales havend fallen from his eyes, and the messengers tell us he is praying, we, like the brethren at Damascus whom he sought to destroy, can show our faith by our good works, and say peace to thy soul, Brother Coke.

The Capital Item (Baton Rouge, La,) comes to the relief of a much troubled contemporary:

The Advocate appears to be terribly worried over the sub-treasury plan, and is very fearful it would bankrupt the country and send it to the dominion bow-wows. The Item will say to the Advocate that it need not get excited over the matter. The sub-treasury plan is in a crude shape, and will no doubt, in the cours of time be perfected so as to do away with the principal objections urged against it. In the meantime if the Advocate has any amendments or a better plan to offer, why does it content itself with merely alluding to the originators of the subtreasury idea as crack brained visionaries? Why not present its plan to break up the rings, monopolies, trusts, and future gambling and give the people a chance to compare the two and see which they like best? In this world men are judged by their works. Therefore let it not be said hereafter that the Advocate opposed the sub-treasury idea merely because it was a farmer's measure. Let it present its plan and the good offices of the Item will be extended by copying and reproducing it so the farmers of the parish may see what it looks like.

The Haven (Kan.) Independent says:

Every few weeks there is a report sent out from the State-house to the effect that the farmers of Kansas are all prosperous and getting out of debt; that the number of mortgages released are far in excess of those put on, and we don't doubt that for the sheriffs of Kansas are all kept busy nowdays canceling mortgages. Where there is one man who pays of his mortgage there are ten who can not, and the sheriff sells the propety and settles the account, consequently the records show a decrease in number of mortgages.

The Farmers and Laborers Union (Batesville, Ark.) is tinctured with political heresy:

"Keep politics out of the Alliance," cries the fogy. Why God have mercy on your poor benighted soul, politics is a grand good thing to have around. Show us a church, a school, a mercantile establishment, family without politics in it and we will show you anything void. Politics is the art and science of good government, and any well governed institution obtains its distinguishing political characteristics.

Just What the Household Wants.

It is only necessary to look at the December Peterson, to decide that it is the magazine for the family. Next year Peterson will hold its jubilee. To have been for fifty years the prime favorite in thousands of households is something to be proud of, and its popularity steadily increases. For 1891 the magazine will be enlarged, its attractions more varied, and its illustrations more abundant. This number seems about as full of handsome pictures as it can hold. Besides admirable steel and other engravings, there are various copiously illustrated articles. A capital paper, "Some Ice Carnival Sketches," gives, in addition to numerous smaller designs, two splendid full page cuts. "A Frozen Lake in Holland" and a "Snowshoe Race over Hurdles. "A Problem Never Solved" is the best short story Edgar Fawcett has ever written. The fashion department will save any woman money enough to double her dresses, enabling her to make them at home, and the decorative designs will help her to ornament her rooms at an almost nominal price. The lady who neglects to have Peterson on her list for 1891 will make a great mistake.

Now is the time to get up clubs; terms; $2,00 a year. 2 Copies $3,50; 3 copies $4,50, with a handsome premium to the getter-up of the club; 4 copies $6,40; 6 copies, $9,00, with an extra copy of the magazine for one year to the getter-up of the club. A sample copy, with full particulars, will be sent to Club raisers. Address PETERSON'S MAGAZINE, 306 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

Call for Immigration Convention to meet at Stephen Marshall County Minnesota, Wednesday, November 26, at 10:30 a. m.

In view of the fact that the Red River Valley and Northern Minnesota are today among the most prosperous grain and stock raising regions of the United States, and that they are now enjoying success superior to that of any other section, and that, notwithstanding, it is generally supposed in the east that our climate is unhealthy and severe, and that our section has been subjected to a succession of crop failuaes,—the contrary being the case. And, in view of these false impressions, and of the fact that other sections, inferior in every respect in climate, resources and productions are making strenuous efforts to divert and retain eastern immigration and eastern capital to their localities, it is not only our duty but a matter of justice to ourselves that we take measures to secure our rightful share of the influx of home-seekers and capital from the east, which will not only populate our unoccupied lands but enhance the value of real estate already occupied. Everyone interested in the prosperity and advancement of our common interests are eligible to participate in the proceeding of the convention. the object of Polk, Marshall, and Kittson to carry on immigration work jointly between them. Stephen has been chosen as the best point to hold the convention, as this will enable Polk and Marshall county participants to go on the Great Northern morning train, returning to their homes on the evening of the same day, while it will be easily accessible to the participants from Kittson county by team. You are earnestly requested to attend yourself and use your best efforts to induce otheas interested in our common welfare to attend.

National Economist: Any measure that will create an additional office is almost certain to become a law. Not long since a bill passed creating a commission to appraise merchandise in connection with the customs department. This provided a number of fat offices which have been promptly filled and will cost the people more than $100,000 annually. The tariff bill contains the usual rider which creates another commission of five members, which is given in full in another column. This commission will no doubt cost a full quarter of a million annually, as there is no limit to its power or privileges. It was created probably for the purpose of keeping alive an interest in the tariff question and to furnish material for future congressional buncombe speeches upon that rather stale subject. It will formulate new tables and, if possible, bring out some fresh arguments for and against such doctrine. It is an expensive luxury, and one that the people should at once stamp with their emphatic disapproval. Let the tax-ridden, and mortgage-burdened farmer read carefully its provisions.

The republican party will now brace up and try to do something for agriculture.

E. G. Holmes, for senator in the 50th district was defeated by the alliance nominee, H. M. Probstfield.

The alliance carried its point though some good men and true went down before the storm, because they did not fully appreciate the situation.

It was a grand run that Owen made even though he was not elected. Some day Minnesota will be independent enough to elect a good governor.

The labor element in the cities did not stand by the alliance worth a cent! Out upon such fawning sycophancy! You can't buy farmers that way.

C. P. Demers says: "Whiskey and cigars don't carry any more elections in our town! We know what we want, and we think we know how to get it hereafter."

Polk County gives her opinion of S. M. Owen in a way that does that gentleman proud. You can't tell us that S. M. Owen is not all right in every way, shape and manner.

Right here we wish to remark that had the party paid sufficieint attention to the will of the people this would not have been thusly. The sovereign will of the people is law and must be heeded

Some say it was a "cyclone," some say it was an "avalanche," some say one thing and some another, but we say that it was a warning to the republican party to quit fooling and attend to the business interests of the country.

Joel P. Heatwole, after having made a gallant fight as chairman of the State Central Committee, has gone to London, where he is to be married this month. Some day Joel will bob up serenely as Governor of Minnesota and then we will have a good one.

We can now tell that ranter in St. Paul what hay seed is worth. It is worth its weight in gold and cannot be bought for money! Wish we could say the same of the element in St. Paul that asked the question. Owen would have been elected if we could. "Hay seed" in Polk County is gilt-edged and unpurchasable, Mr. Man!

The Fisher Bulletin has just waked up to an issue of the present campaign. Says it was a "money loaner what did the bizness!" You need not go quite so far and lay it all to one man. We said some time since that people were tired of bossism, but the Bulletin man had to wait until he was knocked down and dragged out before he tumbled. We have casually remarked before that no one man was big enough to dictate to a sovereign people.

The campaign has developed some men who have shown by their actions that if they could not run the concern they would like to ruin it. Such infernal traitors richly deserve to be burned in effigy. The farmers stood in perishing need of immediate relief, but these infernal toad stools said by their actions: "If you can't let us run the concern you may perish for the want of your market. We will rule or ruin you!"

One feature of the late campaign is very gratifying to us and that is that S. M. Owen received a majority of the votes cast in Crookston. This shows plainly that the business men of Crookston are in sympathy with the farmer in his efforts to obtain a free and open wheat market, and that they are ready to aid and abet him in every possible way. This is as it should be. The interests of business men are identical with those of farmers, and we are more than pleased to see that this fact is recognized.

Early in September, while in St. Paul one day, the editor of this paper said to a Daily News reporter: "Merriam is not in it in Polk County. If the sentiment in every county is a reflex of that in Polk County, Merriam cannot possibly be elected." All the old-line machine politicians hooted at that and gave us the grand laugh, and many of the papers at once began to open out their mud batteries. Well, we let them fire away, knowing that they had to earn their money in some way, but now we wish to call their attention to the vote of Polk County, and ask them how much Merriam was in it? Will they have the manliness to take back the unkind words spoken of us in the heat of battle and acknowledge their error? You may be sure that none of the boodlers will.

THE JOURNAL is forced to the conclusion that there was a Judas on board of the craft! A man occupying a very important position who, while he pretended to be a great farmers friend, was all the while doing all he could in an underhanded way to aid Merriam's cause, and we have heard many farmers in this neck of the woods express the same fear. They have spotted him and if it is proved true it were better for that man if he had never been born. It does not matter what some of the so-called alliance workers did, S. M. Owen is pure gold as every true alliance man can well see, and he should have been supported heartily. He would have been elected if some uncongenial men had not sulked in their tents. They deserve the execration of every true alliance man.

Say, Bro. Osborne, of the Glyndon News, what do you think of the Polk County vote on Merriam?

Where there is one man who pays of his mortgage there are ten who can not, and the sheriff sells the propety and settles the account, consequently the records show a decrease in number of mortgages.

The Farmers and Laborers Union (Batesville, Ark.) is troubled with politics:

"Keep politics out of the Alliance," cries the fogy. Why God have mercy on your poor benighted soul, politics is a grand good thing to have around. Show us a church, a school, a mercantile establishment, family, without politics in it and we will show you another void. Politics is the art and science of good government, and any well governed institution obtains its distinguishing political characteristics.

Just What the Household Wants.

It is only necessary to look at the December Peterson, to decide that it is the magazine for the family. Next year Peterson will hold its jubilee. To have been for fifty years the prime favorite in thousands of households is something to be proud of, and its popularity steadily increases. For 1891 the magazine will be enlarged, its attractions more varied, and its illustrations more abundant. This number seems about as full of handsome pictures as it can hold. Besides admirable steel and other engravings there are various copiously illustrated articles. A capital paper, "Some Ice Carnival Sketches," gives, in addition to numerous smaller designs, two splendid full page cuts. "A Frozen Lake in Holland" and a "Snowshoe Race over Hurdles. "A Problem Never Solved" is the best short story Edgar Fawcett has ever written. The fashion department will save any woman money enough to double her dresses, enabling her to make them at home, and the decorative designs will help her to ornament her rooms at an almost nominal price. The lady who neglects to have Peterson on her list for 1891 will make a great mistake.

Now is the time to get up clubs; terms; $2,00 a year. 2 Copies $3,50; 3 copies $4,50, with a handsome premium to the getter-up of the club; 4 copies $6,40; 6 copies, $9,00, with an extra copy of the magazine for one year to the getter-up of the club. A sample copy, with full particulars, will be sent to Club raisers. Address PETERSON'S MAGAZINE, 306 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

Call for Immigration Convention to meet at Stephen, Marshall County Minnesota, Wednesday, November 26, at 10:30 a. m.

In view of the fact that the Red River Valley and Northern Minnesota are today among the most prosperous grain and stock raising regions of the United States, and that they are now enjoying success superior to that of any other section, and that, notwithstanding, it is generally supposed in the east, that our climate is unhealthy and severe, and that our section has been subjected to a succession of crop failures,—the contrary being the case. And, in view of these false impressions, and of the fact that other sections, inferior in every respect in climate, resources and productions are making strenuous efforts to divert and retain eastern immigration and eastern capital to their localities, it is not only our duty but a matter of justice to ourselves that we take measures to secure our rightful share of the influx of home-seekers and capital from the east, which will not only populate our unoccupied lands but enhance the value of real estate already occupied. Everyone interested in the prosperity and advancement of our common interests are eligible to participate in the proceeding of the convention. the object of Polk, Marshall, and Kittson to carry on immigration work jointly between them. Stephen has been chosen as the best point to hold the convention, as this will enable Polk and Marshall county participants to go on the Great Northern morning train, returning to their homes on the evening of the same day, while it will be easily accessible to the participants from Kittson county by team. You are earnestly requested to attend yourself and use your best efforts to induce others interested in our common welfare to attend.

National Economist: Any measure that will create an additional office is almost certain to become a law. Not long since a bill passed, creating a commission to appraise merchandise in connection with the customs department. This provided a number of fat offices which have been promptly filled and will cost the people more than $100,000 annually. The tariff bill contains the usual rider which creates another commission of five members, which is given in full in another column. This commission will no doubt cost a full quarter of a million annually, as there is no limit to its power or privileges. It was created probably for the purpose of keeping alive an interest in the tariff question and to furnish material for future congressional buncombe speeches upon that rather stale subject. It will formulate new tables and, if possible, bring out some fresh arguments for and against such doctrine. It is an expensive luxury, and one that the people should at once stamp with their emphatic disapproval. Let the tax-ridden, and mortgage-burdened farmer read carefully its provisions.

OWEN INTERVIEWED.

The Alliance Candidate Expresses His Ideas on Many Subjects.

Minneapolis Tribune.

Sidney M. Owen, the candidate of the alliance movement for governor, has returned to his desk in the office of the Farm, Stock and Home, and left the political field for the present. All that remains of the election excitement which interests him is the moral effect of the alliance campaign.

When the campaign opened Mr. Owen said in an interview in the Evening Tribune that he would not accept the certificate of election to the office of governor if it were handed to him. What he wanted was to stir the people up to independent political action. He did not expect to be elected. His position has not changed since.

"I welcomed this campaign," he said, "because of the chance it gave me, as a student of government and the problems of civilization, to test the ability of the people of this state to break away from old party alliances and vote as freemen on their judgment of what was right. I have been for years a non-partisan. I have long thought that a great many of the ills that the industrial classes suffer from are the direct cause of political partisanship. Voters—intelligent, sensible men, too—forget everything else and rally to the support of a party name. It is their religion to perpetuate party rule. And why do they do it? The masses are honest and believe in good government. They want about what is right; the sense of justice and equity of a people can be trusted. The average citizen gets no benefit from the success or defeat of any political party. That is not what he is looking for. What he wants very often is something to throw his hat up about. He wants to be able to say to his neighbor who votes the other ticket, 'We did you up this time, old fellow.' Then he is happy.'

"Do you think it is possible to do away with parties altogether?"

"No, I do not see how we can get along without parties. But I do see how we can do away with these old parties. They sprang up to represent issues that were alive and important in their day, but those issues are no longer before the people. Take the democratic party; men are dying off now who have served a lifetime in its ranks. They were born in it, grew up under its influence, have stuck to the name through wind and weather, and have raised their children to worship it as a divinity. Almost the same can be said of the republican party. The men who are ready to drop into their graves cast their first ballots with the birth of the party. They, too, worship a fetich.

"The republican party has been in control in this state since its constitution was adopted. The republicans claim a divine right to rule. During the election one of their oft-repeated pleas was: 'Don't vote for the alliance because that will elect a democrat,' just as though the democrats had no right to control the government.

"In my opinion the people can be made to be free and independent of parties. They should be made as footloose as the bee that flits from flower to flower. They think they are true to principles when they are true to a party name. They are deceived. Parties are never true to convictions. They are swayed by the desire to succeed. They are after votes. The citizen, instead of following the party, should exercise his judgment and chose the party which represents his favorite public policy.

"A big hubbub was raised on the tariff question. Men voted for or against the high tariff. Why? Because they were either republicans or democrats. The tariff is a purely business question. There is no politics in it. Men have voted for protection or free trade, so-called, who do not know the difference. They voted with their party. They were true to their party divinity.

"Yet I am very hopeful. No state in the union has been more thoroughly partisan than Minnesota. Yet in that portion of the state which was most partisan the greatest independence was manifest. The Red River Valley was regarded by the republican managers as their sacred property, hedged about by some mysterious Providence. Yet the alliance vote there was the largest. I regard the result of the campaign as one of the most cheering signs of the times. It showed at least a few things that the people are slow to learn; that is, that vast sums of money are not necessary to carry on a campaign. None of the modern political appliances were employed in the alliance canvass. The exact amount that the executive committee expended was $1,461, if I remember correctly. We had no astute policy to guide us, and the press was against us. Yet the result shows that the people were awake."

"You had some good speakers, though," was suggested. Mr. Owen is always sincere; but what he said about his colleagues on the stump seemed to to come from the bottom of his heart. Speaking of the "Tall Pine of the North," W. W. Erwin, he said: "Mr. Erwin was very much maligned during the campaign. The republicans and perhaps the democrats attributed to him some ulterior motive for his activity. Some said he was paid. But he was not. There was nobody to pay him and nothing to pay him with. It was claimed that he was after the senatorship, but I do not believe it. I could see no evidence of it, I saw not a single indication of mercenary or selfish spirit in all his conduct. One of the saddest commentaries on our times is the talk of the newspapers and politicians about hidden motives. No sooner does a man attempt to do his duty to his country and himself than some of them ask: 'What is he after?' We are driven to the conclusion that patriotism is an idle name and love of country is among the lost arts."

This seemed to be a good chance to ask a question. Mr. Owen was interrogated: "What is there in the talk of electing you to the United States Senate?"

"I'm not thinking of that," he said. "Some of my enthusiastic friends have said to me 'if you are not going to be governor we'll send you to the United State Senate,' but it is two years until a senator is chosen. There will be another election. No man can say what will take place in the meanwhile. If called at that time I will do as I did in this campaign. But I would not ask for the office of senator—nor even of president. As I never asked a man to vote for me in this campaign so I do not expect ever to solicit the vote of any man. I consider the vote given me a high compliment, but it is a higher compliment to the good judgment of the people. It shows that they are independent and capable of using their own judgment in politics. Hereafter Minnesota must be classed among the doubtful states. Whenever any state is solid for one party or another there is danger. Whenever a nomination means an election, regardless of the merits of the candidate or the principles he stands for, there corruption flourishes. When the managers of a party can coolly say; 'No matter who we nominate he is sure to be elected,' it amounts to a calamity."

National Economist.

THE campaign which is just closing has been one of explanations and promises. The idea has become general among the politicians that if this election can be tided over in any manner, or through any means, all will be well in the future, because, they argued, long before another election comes round this "inconvenient multitude" will be scattered and out of the way. This sort of reasoning has led the average politician to resort to falsehood and deception wherever a vote could be dobtained by so doing, and to make promises of every kind to every person shere asking. No doubt many Congressmen will owe their election to just such misrepresentations. Now is the time for the farmer to put away in a safe palce all these promises, explantions and protestations of honest intention here they can be brought out as witnesses during the campaign of 1892. This great Alliance movement will live and grow in numbers and in power, and when next the people and the politicans meet, these pledges unfulfilled will send number of ambitious statemen into permant retirement.

FARMER PHILANTHOPHY.

National Economist.

Some farmers are opposed to organization and have no conception of benefits to flow to them as a result of co-operation with other farmers. They rather feel a little pride or cause for self congratulation when they can show that many of their neighbors are less prosperous in the same pursuit, and would be just a little disappointed if poverty should be abolished and all their neighbors made fully as prosperous and successful as they. It is not exactly selfishness, but more like pride or ambition. Jonah felt and expressed it when God saved Ninevah. He was very angry. He was disappointed. He had prophesied the destruction of the city, and God relented and saved it. Jonah did not consider the thousands of men and women, and innocent children, and faithful horses, cattle, sheep, etc.; he was disappointed that his reputation as a prophet must suffer before men. The same spirit will make some men sadly disappointed when they get to Heaven if they find some others who differed from them on points of theology getting in all right. The same spirit in man gives rise to the "pull down" methods of achieving wealth or renown; some can only try to prosper at the expense of others. The true way, the Christian way, is to let prosperity follow merit only; to build up, not at the expense of others, but by assisting others, encouraging everybody to go to Heaven by our route, or any other, just so they go. Make agriculture prosperous by helping each other. It is impossible to skim the cream from agriculture, to select a part and secure prosperity for them, leaving the balance to suffer. The will to do must reach out and help the poorer brother. All must go together, or none can go at all. To illustrate this great fact by details met in every day experience, consider the present method of selling the crop. Prices rule the lowest immediately after harvest; the poorest farmers, that is, those most deeply in debt, are compelled to sell at once, regardless of prices; all who are able hold for prices to rally, but the produce put upon the market at the lowest price by the most needy tends to satisfy the demand, and thereby keeps prices down until those having ability to hold for a limited time are compelled also to sell at the lowest price, and their sales continue to satisfy demand and keep down prices, until practically all farmers are at last forced to accept much lower prices than they could have secured had those who were able helped the needy to hold until they could at least get cost for their produce. Business men know that if you can start the market short it is easier to keep it short throughout the season. This shows that true philanthropy, duty, and the best policy go hand in hand in this great farmers' movement. There is no aristocracy among the farmers; every one must recognise every other as his brother, North, South, East and West. From a business standpoint the colored farmer in the South must be recognized and extended the hand of co-operation, because the sacrifice of his crop at a ruinously low price injures his neighbor as much as it does him. All must pull together, or the evils which afflict agriculture cannot be corrected.

A Barren Voitory

The St. Paul Daily News.

If, as the later returns seem to indicate Gov. Merriam has been re elected, it is by so narrow a margin that it is a practical defeat instead of a victory.

Both he and his methods have been repudiated and it was only due to the division of the opposition that he secures even the empty certificate of election.

In a poll of about two hundred and forty thousand, one hundred and fifty thousand were cast against him.

It would be hard to more emphatically repudiate a public officer.

The people of Minnesota entered their most emphatic protest aginst Merriamism in our politics, their only misfortune being that the opposition divided its stength between two candidates.

This however makes the protest none the less, and a more thoroughly defeated man than W. R. Merriam never engaged in political contest.

He may for two years longer hold the gubernatorial position of the State, but he will not stand as a representative of the people.

The people have emphatically repudiated him, and his political career is as permanently ended as though he had failed to receive the certificate, which carries with it no honor but a mere empty authority to perform clerical duites for the people of Minnesota during the succeeding two years.

The vote is a protest against evil methods in political affairs, and it will be a long time before the example set by Gov. Merriam will be followed byany other aspiring politician in Minnesota.

Election Results.

Sauk Rapids Sentinel.

The election is over and it is difficult to say who is saved to fight another day. It is safe to say that the result is a good one to the Republican party—as good as a blister to a sick man. The party has been burdened beyond its strength and its powers of endurance. Bossism, sale of offices to the highest bidder, and high tariff laws have, altogether, broken the party back in Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Wisconsin and New York, and nearly, if not quite, done the same in Minnesota, where at least three, out of five Congressmen are elected by the Democrats, a Democrat is elected for Auditor, and possibly for Governor and the balance possibly saved by a trifling majority. Congressmen are gained by the Democrats in all directions so that they will have a large majority in the next house. It seems that the people are exercising the right to vote with the party whose acts are most satisfactory. Warnings and predictions of the political storm have not been wanting, but those who have given the warnings have generally been reviled by the party bosses and those voters who delight in blindly following them. But the rebuke has come, and though its results may seem severe, it may prove to be a blessing in disguise, and enable the party to rectify the evils existing so as to secure public confidence again by deserving it.

An Avalanche.

St. Paul Pioneer Press.

It is not a snow storm. It is an avalanche. It now appears that the Democrats will have a majority of about 125 in the next house of representative. They have swept away in large part the Republican representation of nearly every Northwestern state, and of several Eastern and Middle states, and the whole country is strewn with the wrecks of Republican ascendancy. They have captured the state governments of Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Wisconsin and the legislature of New York. Even the solid phalanx of Republican that has for many years defended the citadel of protection in Pennsylvania has been broken. It is a popular revolution and the sky is black with portents that it will go on till victory shall crown their triumphs with the capture of the senate and the presidency. It required no high degree of political sagacity to foresee this result. It is enough now to say that it would not have happened if the leaders of the Republican party had followed the advice or heeded the warning of the Pioneer Press and of all that large body of Republicans who have protested against the monstrous folly of the McKinley bill, and against the sinister influences which have of late been too prominent in the leadership of the Republican party.

Embodying a distinct and reckless violation of the pledge of tariff reform, that measure, forced upon the country as the ultimate of Republican policy with reference to the tariff, has been enacted to the party's undoing. Forced through under the crack of the party whip, its unpopularity was assured. In vain have the congressmen who voted for it endeavored to make the people believe it was what they wanted. In vain have the most noted speakers of the party championed the unfortunate measure. It was repudiated by the thousands at the polls. It stands a melancholy evidence of duty left undone; of opportunity, the most brilliant, for the party, neglected and ignored.

There is not a political party on earth, under any constitutional and popular government, which can, with impunity, defy the sentiments of the voters.

FONTAINE & ANGLIM.

Minneapolis Times:—One fact stands out prominently above all others a result of the campaign of 1888, and that is the death of "Merriamism" in Minnesota for some years to come. The curtain has already rung down on Mr. Merriam's political career, and it conceals from public view many men who might some day have occupied conspicuous positions in the administration of public affairs had they not seen fit to ally themselves with the worst and most dangerous elements of the republican party. Another gratifying feature of the campaign is the fact that the section of the state which protested most loudly against Mr. Merriam's nomination have fully demonstrated the wisdom of their warning that such a step was a dangerous experiment. The delegation from Hennepin county, which so bravely protested against Merriam's nomination, has been vindicated. They have made good their assertion that Hennepin county would go democratic if Merriam headed the ticket. In this connection it is proper to say that some of the gentlemen who composed the famous Hennepin delegation would occupy a higher position in the estimation of their neighbors and townsmen had they showed a little more backbone and not deserted their cause and bowed in submission to the mandates of the party lash. The common, vulgar idea of political ethics is that, if it was wroung to support Merriam before the convention, it was wrong to support him at all; that, if he represented principles in polities which were corrupt and dishonest and tended to debauch and debase the people of the state, and which were repugnant to all good citizens, there was no excuse for supporting him at any time during the campaign. Some of these deserters may have an opportunity to test the temper of the republican voters of Hennepin on some future occasion. Hennepin county however, was not the only section of the state which kept its pledges made at the convention, as over 50,000 votes for Owen will testify. Notwithstanding this there have been many traitors, and the republican party, which has at last broken loose from the machine, will have a day of reckoning for them all.

The Journal of the Knights of Labor (Philadelphia) calls attention to a fearful drain upon the producers of this country, for which no compensation is received.

It is stated on the authority of Minister Phelps, the snob who represents American plutocracy at Berlin, that $150,000,000 is anually spent by Americans traveling abroad. This immense sum is but a small part of the whole amount that our privileged classes yearly wring from labor by means of unjust laws to squander in luxury and dissipation. Absenteeism is becoming continually more fashionable. It used to be a favorite argument in favor of large fortunes, that the money accumulated by legalized robbery was at least freely spent where it was made, and that the outlay was good for trade and gave employment to Amecican workingmen. No intelligent labor reformer was ever deceived by such specious reasoning, for it is obvious that had the money gone to its legitimate channels in the form of increased wages it would have been much more quickly put into circulation. But what does the country gain in return for the amounts spent by our plutocrats in Paris, London and Vienna? Nothing but imported fashionable diseases, European snobbery and the un-democratic craze for titles, Capitalism is essentially unpatriotic and in no respects is this show more plainly seen than in the way which our wealthy class spend in the drawingrooms brothels and gambling hells of European cities the fortunes stolen from the earnings of American workingmen.

Sweet potatoes at Sture's.

Hon. H. Steenerson went north on business this week.

E. D. Childs made a busines trip to St. Paul on Monday evening.

Lovely Indian summer weather prevailed during the week.

The carpenters are putting the windows into the new opera block.

We notice more wood and hay on the market than at any time this fall.

See Mrs. E. E. Bangs' elegant fall and winter millinery. Prices to suit all.

H. H. Sibley, of the Fertile Journal, gave us a pleasant call on Saturday.

Sture has just received a lot of extra fine sweet potatoes. For sale cheap.

Halvor Tvedton succeeds Iver Krohn as landlord of the Scandinavian house.

E. J. Grefthen, the County Superintendent elect, has gone to Iowa on a visit.

Subscribe for THE JOURNAL and get all of the news. You need it and it needs your support.

J. T. Knight was down from Red Lake Falls last week. J. T is the same old boomer as of yore.

Fred Durand moved down on Houston avenue on Monday. The Fourth ward seems to catch 'em all.

Go to Sture's for choice sweet potatoes.

Melville Milne, publisher of The Message, is the happy father of a seven pound boy, born on Saturday last.

The dog show at the Opera House last week was a good one. The panorama was the finest ever exhibited in this city.

A. R. Holston, County Attorney elect, and wife came down last week to look for a house wherein to live after January 1st.

The attraction at Vine's shop last week was a large moose. Almost everybody indulged in baked moose for Sunday dinner.

R. Smith was up from West Superior this week shaking hands with old friends and noting the many improvements going on in the city.

Do you want some extra nice sweet cider for your Thanksgiving pies? Sture has just received a lot of the pure juice of the apple.

Ex-sheriff, W. F. Zwickey, formerly of this county, has been appointed chief of police of Tacoma. THE JOURNAL sends congratulations.

The new Judge of Probate, O. M. Benson, was down last week to view the landscape o'er with a view to getting used to the new honors.

Pure apple cider at Sture's.

R. E. White was up from Fisher on Monday and gave us an evidence of his good will toward THE JOURNAL by a renewal of his subscription.

Mrs. E. E. Bangs is doing a nice business this fall—selling more goods than ever before. Her goods are always all right and her prices reasonable.

This is nice weather for hauling wood. We are still in need of a few cords and would be glad to pay the highest market price therefor on subscription.

Try Sture's sweet cider.

Lots of wheat coming in these days notwithstanding the price has dropped off fearfully. The European markets are said to be way up—higher than ever before this fall.

Levi Myers was over from the west side on Monday to chat with the boys over the result of the recent election. He thinks it was a surprise party to more than one.

Farmers, if you want bargains, call and see Sture before you purchase.

Andrew Swanson was down from Wylia last week to rejoice with the boys over the recent alliance victory. He, with all others, regret that Owen was not elected, however.

Butcher Le Duc displayed a large moose in front of his market last week. We saw Ed. Walsh looking at it as though he was wondering how baked Muus would taste.

Wheat went off fearfully during the past week, reaching 73 for 1 Hard. From present indications it would look as though no better prices would prevail before the first of the year.

One man in Polk County does not desire to see the farmers prosper—and he tries to wreak his vengeance on THE JOURNAL. Never mind. The farmers are of more importance than he is.

Farmers and everybody cordially invited to call at Sture's store for supplies of all kinds.

If every subscriber to THE JOURNAL would send us only one new name that would double our list and influence. If our friends would work with us in this way very much more good could be accomplished.

D. B. McGinnis was in the city last week in the interest on the convention to be held in Stephen on the 26th inst. Everybody who feels an interest in the upbuilding of this country should attend that convention.

It really begins to look like the Polk County farmer would have some show for his crop in the future. With the best soil under the sun, capable of producing large crops, all he needs is good prices and the prospects are good for these for several years to come.

Business seems to be extremely lively these days. Every store seems to be doing well and collections are reported good. The crops were abundant, quality good and prices excellent, is the reason. Next year bids fair to be the best one yet providing the crops are all right.

The St. Paul Dispatch says that Iver G. Lee was elected school superintendent of Polk County at the last election. It also says that Even J. Grefthen was elected school superintendent of Pope County. It looks as though the Dispatch had mixed those children up somewhat.

Everything indicates a very prosperour year next year. Farm products of all kinds bid fair to bring good prices, and a large influx of home-seekers is anticipated which will tend to settle up the unoccupied lands of Polk County. Verily, prospects are brighter than for several years.

Mrs. E. E. Bangs desires her lady friends to know that she is better than ever prepared to attend to their wants in millinery and invites their attention to her fine stock. Call at her store on Second street.

Several new names were added to our list during the past week to take the place of the one who "resigned" because THE JOURNAL is trying to secure an open wheat market. That is right, friends, come in and subscribe and get your neighbors to do the same. We want an open wheat market and we are bound to have it.

Rev. S. H. Barteau has been busy threshing on his farm near Angus for some days—in fact he has not been seen since the big snow-storm of Nov. 4th, when the alliance blizzard snowed everything out of sight. He has only about a half crop this year—but then he did not expect any more as he rented on shares, but what he has is of excellent quality.

In a private letter to the editor of THE JOURNAL, S. M. Owen compliments the voters of Polk County very highly on their independent action on November 4th. This spirit, he says, augurs well for the success of the farmers' attempt to secure justice in our markets. The more one knows of Owen the more he is impressed with the true manliness of the man.

Sture has a choice lot of fine winter apples for sale cheap. Call before they are all gobbled up.

Col. Gorgas tells us that some one in the city is poisoning dogs and he is very anxious about Ben. Bert Duntley's fine pointer was poisened last week, and other dogs of more or less value have turned up their toes to the daises. The Col. thinks as much of Ben as many a man would of a fine horse, and Ben is a fine specimen of the canine race, and no mistake.

A. Sture will pay the highest price for eggs, oats and potatoes. Call and see him if you have a surplus of these articles.

J. L. Cossette was down from Terrebonne on Monday and dropped in to chat with THE JOURNAL man over the results of the late election and to set that subscription ahead a year. He says that very many farmers in his vicinity have sold no wheat as yet hoping for better prices. From the present outlook we should judge that wheat will not get back to the eighties before the New Year's. If the recent panic in Wall street is the cause of the depression it may, however.

Mrs. E. E. Bangs will not be undersold in millinery goods. Remember that and call at her store on Second street, when you want a bargain in that line.

Swan Anderson was down from Black River last week and dropped in to square up on subscription account. Says he: "Every voter in Polk County ought to be a subscriber to THE JOURNAL that has been doing so much to secure a free and open wheat market. Everybody up our way like THE JOURNAL." Swan reports that the boy Peterson, hurt a few weeks ago by climbing on a thresher engine, is yet alive and recovering, though he will be a cripple for life, doubtless.

Farmers, I have had experience enough in your business to know your requirements in merchandise and am prepared to meet them all in the kind, quality and price you desire. Call at Sture's store and see what I can do for you. A. STURE.

The last issue of The Great West gives an account of a serious accident to Dr. Fish. It seems that he has been obliged to use an electric battery occasionally, and on Tuesday night, Nov. 11th, while using it he fell asleep. How long he slept he cannot tell, but he was awakened by the burning sponge, hastily broke the current and had strength enough to walk into his bedroom where his wife was sitting, where he fell unconscious. His wife, with great presence of mind, restored him to consciousness, got him into bed and dispatched a messenger for Dr. Frain, who was up with Dr. Fish all night. Dr. Fish has hosts of friends in the state who will unite with THE JOURNAL in an earnest wish for his early recovery.

A Valuable Institution.

A JOURNAL reporter called at the packing house one day last week where he found Mr. Robert Stanton busily engaged handling the scores of hogs that are being daily brought to him to be transformed into bacon, pickled pork and smoked hams. He had just finished cutting up one lot of 10,000 pounds for E. S. Corser and preparing it for the vats, and while we were there a farmer brought in two fine medium-sized ones which are to be transformed into bacon and sich. One farmer up north had just brought in a dozen or so 300 pound fellows to make pickled pork and smoked ham and so on. To those who do not well understand how to cure pork, this institution furnishes a way to secure excellent pork at small cost, and even when a man does know how to cure it, we question whether Mr. Stanton cannot do it cheaper with the better facilities he possesses. For the dweller in the city this is a great institution. A man can purchase his hog, take it to Stanton, have it cured and kept there until next summer if he chooses, and then take it piece-meal as he wishes to use it, and all at a cost of only two cents a pound—a surprisingly low figure. Mr. S. could hardly afford to do it as low were it not for the fact that he is doing a large amount of business. He is curing for scores of Polk County farmers, besides very many from Dakota, and is prepared to attend to all who come. He intends to buy a limited number of hogs on his own account and supply the Crookston market for bacon, hams and shoulders next summer. He can beat any outside institution we know of and this is the universal opinion of all who have ever tested his work.

A Fatal Accident.

On Tuesday of last week occurred another of those "mysterious explosions" that you read of so frequently, resulting in killing one person and injuring another. Mr. Benjamin Geroux and his son were engaged in threshing on the farm of Mr. Drosier, near Gentilly, when, about 4 p. m., something occurred to stop the work. When the difficulty had been remedied the men, who had been standing about the engine, went to their several places, and young Geroux, the fireman, opened the fire-box door to replenish to fire, when the boiler exploded with a deafening report, blowing the fireman about 70 feet from the engine and fatally injuring him, and also severely injuring the engineer, and completely wrecking the engine and boiler. The boy was taken to his home at once and lived three hours. Boiler Inspector Tomlin, who was out on the Fosston line, came down at once and with deputy inspector, J. E. Morrisey, went out to the scene of the wreck to try and ascertain the cause. They secured what was left of the steam gauge and bringing it to the city, submitted it to hydraulic pressure, which showed that it had not been properly adjusted and would not work properly under two hundred pounds pressure. Mr. Morrisey says that he inspected the boiler this fall and gave orders not to allow over one hundred pounds of steam used. From what THE JOURNAL can learn the inspector cannot be to blame as it is evident his explicit instructions were exceeded. It is a sad affair, carrying grief into one family by the loss of a promising young son.

Died.

On Tuesday, Nov. 18th, 1890, Goldie Rean, twin daughter of H. C. and Ida May Scribner, aged four years. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of many friends in their great affliction.

All signs indicate a large immigration to the Red River Valley next spring. Our abundant crops this fall, with the prospects of good prices for next, has been heralded abroad throughout the length and breadth of the land, and many will be on deck next spring to investigate for themselves. We may not have the boom times of the early days, but without doubt many will be added to our numbers. Let them come, we have plenty of excellent land and at very reasonable figures.

As Joe McMahan was driving D. N. Taylor's rig along Robert street on Monday, somebody threw a small stick against the animal which frightened her causing her to run. The lines were hanging loosely and in gathering them up the driver pulled the left rein too much, causing the animal to turn toward the walk. As they were going round the corner at the time, the buggy tipped completely over, throwing the driver underneath the outfit. He hung to the lines and strange to say was not hurt in the least, but as soon as the buggy was lifted off him got nimbly up, climbed in and drove off as unconcerned as though nothing had happened.

Peter Larson came up from Fisher on Tuesday and did not forget to call and gladden the heart of the printer with a renewal. He says he thinks every Polk County farmer should subscribe and pay for THE JOURNAL one year in advance if for no other reason than what it is doing for an open wheat market. Mr. Larson raised just a fair crop of wheat this year and has plenty of uses for all of his money, but he said he could not think of neglecting to pay up for THE JOURNAL after what it has done and is doing for the upbuilding of the country. If every Polk County farmer felt like that we could put in a steam engine at an early day. Mr. L. is in favor of the sub-treasury plan and government control of railroads.

We had a peculiar dream the other night. We thought we were in a small room adjoining the large one in a money changers shop, and there were much sachems gathered together. And it was the evening of the 2d of November, Annie Domino, 1890; and, lo, the subject under discussion was politics and the attitude of the county toward the Merriam ticket. And behold the voice of one leader in bland accents and mild, observed: "Verily the aspect of the county to-us-ward doth please me much and I think we are even on the verge of a what do you call it in North America?" And with one voice they all responded! "A scoop!" "Yea, verily, a scoop it is," responded the dignified sachem," in every town where we have diligently worked and sowed much siller, except in the town of Garden, wherein we have not worked nor sown any siller, wherein are even an hundred and thirty and ten votes which I much fear me the enemy (the farmers) will get away with! Then up spoke a fair haired son of the Northland and observed: "Say not so, Machumazin (which being interpreted meaneth your reverence, your highness, or such a business) for verily I will dispatch my man Friday hence early by to-morrow's sun, and he shall go forth even into the land of Garden with planty pange, yea and verily he shall bear much fire-water unto our benighted brethren in that land who are hungering and thirsting for to know of the good things of this educational campaign, which I much fear me so far they have lacked for, and lo, you shall straightway see the result thereof, and verily we shall come out of the county of Polk unto the saintly city of Paul with 5,000 votes for our good Kaiser $$ William and the balance of the Merriam ticket." Whereupon there was much rejoicing and, lo, I heard a voice exclaiming like unto the voice of the Kaiser of N. Karolina unto the Kaiser of S. Karolina: "Settemupagin," and a sound like unto the breath of autumn when it soughs gently mid the pine trees, as an occasional pop announced that the cork was out. And verily, in the morning of the next day while yet the day was young, a livery team, with two good men and true, bearers of tidings of great joy unto the benighted citizens of Garden, did set forth upon their mission of love, and verily they did ride all that day until the sun was low in the heavens, yea, even throughout the livelong night and until the morning of the 4th was yet young, when they did arrive at the place of meeting wherein the sachems had again gathered to listen to the report of the special emissary, which was on this wise: "Verily have I performed the mission well, your worships, I did even ride all day and all night and I did waken from their peaceful couch from 25 to 30 of the leading influential citizens of the beautiful town of Garden, and unto them did I dispense from $15 to $30 each according as each man did make demand, and I thought the weight of his inflooence did warrant; nay, moreover, I did dispense with the firewater in original packages to that extent that even before I did realize it I had not a single drop left to cheer me on my homeward way. "Well done, good and faithful servant," said the sachems, "now let the battle proceed, and as according to the law of the realm in such case made and provided, there is now to be found open not one refectory wherein thou canst slake thy thirst, thou wilt even have to find some convenient back door or bide thee in patience until we hear from the day's doings, when verily we will settemupagin and we'll all drink stone blind, Johnny, fill up the bowl, or thereabouts. Now let the battle proceed." And methought the battle did proceed and that the hosts of Owen did meet the hosts of Merriam, and that they did smite them hip and thigh until scarcely a man remained alive to tell the story, and when the reports from the battle fields did begin to reach the castle, lo, it was Owen from every locality, from all to all but one or two, and lo, "Abou Ben Adhem's name led all the rest," that is to say when the report from this thoroughly cultivated Garden was received, it did read: "Garden cast one hundred and thirty and ten votes, of which Owen receives ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY AND TEN!" And a great surprise sat upon the countenances of the sachems, and they began diligently to inquire into the wherefore of the why, but none could answer, and a deep silence settled upon the multitude so deep that one could almost hear a gum drop, and we awoke; and, lo, it was a dream.

Interviewing alderman Bjoin last week we learned that he is making all haste to get the windows and doors into the new building as soon as possible, so that he can put the steam heating apparatus in operation and go ahead with the plastering and finishing. It will require some two months or so before the opera house can be completed ready for business. When completed it will comfortably seat 800 people outside of the boxes. In case of emergencies requiring it he can accommodate from 1,000 to 1,200 people. The curtain and scenery will be painted by Peter Clauson, of Minneapolis, who did the work at the Grand Forks opera house, and he is said to be one of the best artists in the business. When completed Crookston will have an opera house second to none in the Northwest, and we believe that our people will appreciate the fact.

At the council meeting on Nov. 11th, N. P. Stone was appointed alderman for the Third ward, vice Hon. H. Steenerson, moved into the Fourth. The committee appointed to examine the bill of the health officer recommended that he be paid $100 for services since beginning of his term, Jan. 1st, 1890. The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That in future any person other than the regularly appointed city printer who accepts and executes any order for job work or printing except on the order of the council, shall look to the person ordering the work for their pay, but shall in no case receive pay from the city for such work.

The city clerk and the city treasurer were instructed to call upon all persons who had pledged themselves to pay their share of the sewer tax levy this fall and collect the same.

The following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That a frost proof building 12x30 feet in size, be erected over the fire tank and well in the Fifth ward, the same to be constructed under the supervision of the aldermen of that ward, at an expense not to exceed $300, out of the general fund, above the $150 already appropriated for said fund for the erection of said tank.

At an extra session of the city council, held on Monday evening, Nov. 17th, the license for auctioneers in the city was raised to $200.

Before long we shall have our subscription statements ready to send out, and we trust that every one who gets one will do his best for us. We have been very patient in the past in this matter, knowing too well the condition of the crops and the markets. This year we have a good crop and a reasonably good market, and every one should be able to settle up to date, at least, if not one year in advance. Let every one imagine himself a publisher with several thousand names on his list, some of them several years behind, and he can easily figure out what it means to us whether each subscriber pays punctually every year or not. Meanwhile, when in the city, call in and see how the matter stands betwixt thyself and THE JOURNAL. Some have done this and gone out with the proud consciousness of a duty promptly and well performed.

CROOKSTON BUSINESS COLLEGE AND INSTITUTE OF SHORTHAND.
TEACHING FOREIGNERS.

A Business College has great advantages over other schools for teaching Germans Scandinavians and other foreigners.

Of course, business is done in this country very differently from the way it is done in the old country, and a young man who has been in America only a few years cannot understand what is needed in business here, unless somebody teaches him. If he goes into a store, no one there has the time to teach him. So the best place to learn how business is done is in a college.

In our school he can learn how to read and write the English language correctly, and prepare himself to conduct his own business affairs successfully.

Our teachers will do all they can to help along those who do not know our language very well, and every student receives personal, and individual instruction.

Our foreign students generally make as good progress as our American students.

There is a great demand in business for young men who can speak the German or Scandinavian languages, so our foreign students have no trouble in getting work when they finish our course of study.

Marshall County Leader:—In another column we publish the call for a convention at Stephen to consider ways and means of winning an immigration of settlers here next season. We would earnestly urge the people of Marshall, Kittson and Polk counties to give this matter the attention and work that its importance merits. Every man, woman and child regardless of race, color or anything else who lives in this valley and has interests here should enter into the matter. It is no scheme gotten up by any man or set of men for their own advantage, but is for the common welfare. Farmers will doubtless reap greater benefit from the advance in value of their property, which will result from an influx of settlers, than any others. The towns will share in the general development. Let every township in this county be represented at the convention by as many active, enterprising people as possible. A large number will be present from Polk and Kittson. Everybody is urged to attend and join hands in this common cause.

F. P. Brown, for secretary of state leads Merriam by a good many votes.

The governor's private secretary, R. C. Elliott, has resigned and Tams Bixby takes his place. Tams is a hummer and no mistake.

The effect of the last campaign will be felt for good in the future. Had Owen been elected it would have been more marked, however.

The Times egotistically claims that THE JOURNAL was wrong on the official count, and claims to have the only true account in the world. We are glad if our neighbor has managed to get one thing right during his experience in the journalistic field, and do not wonder that he should set up such a cackling about it. We gave the figures that were given us by Auditor McGuire and dept. auditor Cornelius, however, and we consider them fully as reliable as is the Times man.

"I did not know how my subscription account stood, or I could have sent you the money before," said one of our friends the other day while in to pay up his subscription account. For the past two or three years we have sent out no statements to farmers, well knowing the conditions of the market and trusting that all who could do so, would pay when they could. We have not been disappointed in this as we are positive that all who could do so have paid us promptly, but the result is that many do not know how the account stands. For this reason we have decided to go through our list and make up a statement of the account of every one not paid up by Dec. 15th, or as soon thereafter as we can prepare the statement and send out, so that every one may know just how the account stands. No one of our many subscribers owes us a very large amount, not so large but that in this year of good crops and good prices he ought to be able to pay it—to him the amount is trifling, but to us in the aggregate it is a very important matter, as even one dollar and a half for each man on our large list, if not paid in advance, makes a heavy load before the end of the year. THE JOURNAL has ever striven to labor faithfully in the cause of the people, and for this reason some of the would be bosses of Polk County, whose plans have been upset by THE JOURNAL, are bitter against us, but if the people will appreciate our labors and do all they can to sustain THE JOURNAL we shall be able to accomplish what we so much desire to obtain—an absolutely free and untrammelled wheat market, wherein the rights of the poorest farmer are as sacred as the rights of the most influential business man. Meanwhile let every one who can make it convenient drop in and see how his account stands. Let him do more. Let him induce his neighbor who should have the paper, to send in his dollar and a half, and thus aid us in the good cause.

One Disgruntled Man.

THE JOURNAL received the following, curt order last week: "Please stop my paper. Send bill." This was from a man who has grown wealthy out of the farmers of Polk County, and who is very ambitious to control farmer votes, and to be known as a man of great political influence in the county. Evidently the votes did not suit his royal highness and now he thinks to revenge himself upon the farmers by going back on THE JOURNAL. We are exceedingly sorry if he ever had the idea in his head that his little $2 a year subscription entitled him to our support in his schemes yet we are glad that he is now undeceived, and we wish him and all who feel as he does to understand that THE JOURNAL is with the people—it is the people's paper and not the organ of schemers, and will ever stand by the people to the extent of its ability.

Courier Journal:—The Republicanism of Reed, Lodge and McKinley is no more the Republicanism of Lincoln, Grant, Sumner and Chase, than the Federalism of 1800 was the Federalism of Washington and Hamilton.

Duluth News:—Ignatious Donnelly goes to the state senate from Dakota county and the coming session of the legislature promises to be a lively one. It is useless to speculate as to what it will do, It is certain that the Alliance-Democratic combination will have things all their own way, and with such leaders as Donnelly, one need not be surprised at anything. Extreme measures may be looked for.

S. M. Owen:—One of the saddest commentaries in our times is the talk of the newspapers and politicians about hidden motives. No sooner does a man attempt to do his duty to his country and himself than some of them ask: "What is he after?" We are driven to the conclusion that patriotism is an idle name' and love of country is among the lost arts."

Stillwater Call:—Instead of helping the Democratic ticket, as the Republican papers have claimed, it is now clearly shown that but for the Alliance vote Merriam would have been defeated by an immense majority. The Minneapolis Journal, a Merriam organ, admits that the Alliance cost Wilson the election, and says had there been only the two candidates, Wilson and Merriam, the latter would have been overwhelmingly defeated. All the drivel about Owen helping Wilson was senseless.

The Result in Minnsota.

Farm, Stock and Home.

While the result of the election in Minnesota was undoubtedly a sore disappointment to many Alliance men, yet it was quite up to the expectations of those who had the means of knowing the exact situation. In fact, the election of the Alliance ticket would, under the circumstances, have been little short of miraculous. In over twenty counties there were no Alliance organizaions, and in many other counties organizations were both few and week. But in every county well organized the vote was heavy, and in many cases a majority or a plurality was given for the Alliance ticket. Out of 63 counties reported at this writing 23 gave majorities or pluralities for the Alliance. Some of the counties gave very large majorities, notably Otter Tail, Polk, Norman, Douglas, Marshall, Lac qui Parle, Clay and others.

Out of a total vote of about 200,000, the Alliance will have in the neighborhood of 55,000, a magnificent vote, all things considered. The Alliance party had no money to pay the expense of speakers, to circulate literature in sufficient quantities to be effective, or to prosecute any considerable amount of the legitimate work of a political campaign. Less than $1,500 passed through the hands of the state central committee, and it handled a large percentage of the money used in the campaign. This sum is so small compared with that used by either of the opposing parties, that it is a surprise to the old political managers how so much was accomplished with so little to do with. Again, a great deal of friction is inevitable in a new political movement, but in this state it had more than its share of it, and was correspondingly weakened. But a very small portion of the state press was with the Alliance, and all of the astute, experienced politicians were against it; in short, the obstacles were so numerous and powerful that the size of the vote is the highest kind of a compliment to the patriotism and non partisanship of the farmers and laborers of the state.

Though the state ticket was not successful, the Alliance has many triumphs in the state to be proud of. It elected scores of excellent men to county offices, and has got clear balance of power in the legislature which, if properly used, can be made to greatly advantage the industrial interests of the state. There is, in short, nothing to discourage, but everything to encourage the Alliance party in Minnesota. Organization should be kept up and increased; the work of education should continue, and in two years more the state will surely pass into the hands of those classes that produce its wealth.

The Successes.

Western Rural.

The farmer rolled up his sleeves and went into politics. The old political leaders in a sort of dazed conditon are thinking that the farmer is no slouch in the political field after all. In Kansas he seems to have strode over the State like a political giant. Through his organizations he seems to have things pretty much all his own way. In South Dakota he was heard from in no uncertain way. In Nebraska he was an important political factor and in Minnesota and Illinois, he did not stay at home on election day. The farmer has been a long time getting to the point which he reached at the last election; but it is not the fault of the political leaders that he did not get there before. They croded him and goaded him unmercifully and now that he has started out, there is only one way for the partisans to pacify him, and get him back into the ranks of the respective parties and that is to treat him as a man and give him justice. Justice is all he asks. He does not care much who holds the offices if he is properly treated. It may always be depended upon as certain that when a free people feel that they are not being properly used they will rebel against the injustice sooner or later.

Sleepy Eye Herald:—All the oratory of the "Little Norwegian Giant," Knute Nelson, that was brought to bear upon the late campaign, did not have much effect on the "Big Fifth." The people have lost confidence in him and his influence among his countrymen is way down. His mantle has fallen to H. Steenerson, of Crookston, who will be heard from in the future. Mr. Steenerson is a man of ability, backed up by brains and energy, and his action in leaving the Republican party and joining hands with the Alliance in that portion of the state is welcomed by the Alliance. The Alliance party in that district has fully demonstrated its strength in electing a large majority of the state and county officers in the different counties. With such men as Steenerson, Halvorsen, and others in the Fifth district it is certain that the Alliance does not lack good men as leaders.

St. Paul Globe:—The Alliance cause in Minnesota owes its success almost entirely to the man whom it nominated for governor in last July. Sydney M. Owen in the course of the late campaign developed wonderfully as a leader. His honesty and sincerity won him votes wherever he went. His views on public questions were honest and intelligent and they so impressed the people.

Mr. Blaine's Story.

The McKinley Law Does not Open a Market for Another Bushel of Wheat or Another Barrel of Pork.

Washington, Nov. 17.—In conversation upon the result of the election Mr. Blaine was asked by a friend what he thought of the McKinley bill now that the election was over.

"Well," said Mr. Blaine, with a smile, "there was a trial down in Maine some years ago and an old farmer was summoned to testify regarding the character of the defendant.

"Do you know the defendent?' asked the lawyer.

"'Yes sir.'

"'What is his character?'

"'Well, sir, I have known the defendant forty years, and I have been studying him forty years, and my opinion now is the same as it was on the first day I met him.'"

The Minneapolis Times.

It is fair to suppose, if Merriam had been as strong as his political parasites claim for him, and if the McKinley bill was wholly the cause of the republican defeat in this state, that Mr. Merriam would have run considerable ahead of the candidates for congress aganinst whom the brunt of attack was made. An examination of the returns, however, show exactly the reverse to be true. The returns are sufficiently complete to be regarded as practically accurate. Merriam's total vote was 87,778, while the vote cast for five republican congressmen foot up a total of 97,638, or 10,000 votes more than the popular Mr. Merriam's received. The democrats and alliance have forced the fight all through the campaign on the issue of the McKinley bill and their principal object was to secure control of the Minnesota delegation in congress. The election of the state ticket was a minor consideration in the judgment of the leaders of the democratic party compared with this. But not withstanding the fact that the fight was concentrated against the republican congressmen, they succeded in polling 10,000 more votes then the popular Mr. Merriam. The fact is that it was not the McKinley bill but Merriamism that pulled the state ticket down almost to defeat, lost the legislature to the republicans and defeated hundreds of republican tickets all over the state.

But those are not the only figures which reflect upon the "popularity" of Mr. Merriam and either the veracity or sanity of his friends. These same friends have seen fit to draw comparisons between the present election and the election of McGill in 1886. It was foolish to raise this issue, but of course they did not see it that way until after they had made the breake. In 1886 out of a vote of 109,000 McGill had 109,-199, while in 1890 out of a vote of 230,-000 Merriam had 87,778. In other words he lacked nearly 30,000 votes of having half the totale vote cast. The comparison with Mr. McGill's vote does not show up well for Mr. Merriam, and it will be hard to convince intelligent republicans that this same popular Mr. Merriam was not the curse of their party in the campaign of 1890. Mr. Merriam's friends will do wisely in the future to discontinue the discussion of that gentleman's popularity, for it is the thing which doesn't exist. They should also remember that the head of a ticket runs from 8,000 to 8,000 votes behind the other candidates on the same ticket is not calculated to bring him before the people as a great popular leader.

National Democrat.

In anticipation of the increased cost of carpet wools under the McKinley tariff, the Philadelphia manufacturers of brussels carpets proposed that 40 per cent of the looms be stopped and 40 per cent of the weavers dismissed, so that selling prices could be proportionately increased. The New England manufacturers would not asent to this, and urged the formation of a combination, or trust, for the purpose of advancing prices. This is in process of being effected. Philadelphia Record says that five large body brussels carpet factories of Philadelphia and one big mill at Worcester, Mass., have entered into a combination or trust, and placed themselves in the hands of a firm of selling agents at New York. These agents will agree upon the grades of carpet that are to be woven by the mills interested and endeavor to purchase the necessary raw materials at a more advantageous rate to themselves. This combination will also try to crush out "wild-cat" competition of the smaller concerns. Three small factories in Philadelphia have sold out to the trust within the past ten days, and the indications are that more are to follow in the same line. There are still seven big mills outside of the trust—two in Philadelphia, one in New York, three in New England and one in Mount Holly, N. Y.

St. Paul Dispatch:—F. P. Brown, secretary of state, will have several choice official plums to bestow, and having become satisfied that he will really occupy an office in the state house after Jan. 1, it is more than whispered that Mr. Brown contemplates remembering Peter J. McGuire, the only defeated candidate on the state ticket at the late election. There is a great deal of sympathy expressed for Mr. McGuire, who is one of the most worthy deserving young men of the state, and if the appointment of assistant secretary of state is tendered him it will be but a fitting recognition of his valiant services for the republican ticket in the northern part of the state where he is very popular. It is very probable also that Herman Sockenstrom will still continue to hold a position under the new secretary. He is a valuable and efficient assistant and is very popular with the public.

The Brainerd Dispatch

An exchange says: The supreme court on Tuesday handed down five decisions, one of which is most important in that it determines the right of a person who has purchased a railroad ticket from a broker or scalper, to travel upon the road of the company by whom the ticket was originally issued. From the records of the case it appears that in August, 1888, the Northern Pacific road issued excursion tickets between Minneapolis and Detroit, Minn. Casper Carsten, who had purchased the return half of a ticket from a broker in Minneapolis, duly went to the depot intending to take the train to Detroit. The ticket examiner at Minneapolis punched the ticket, and Carsten boarded the train for Detroit. When the conductor came into the car to examine tickets, he refused to accept the one presented by Carsten and demanded the fare. The request was refused by Carsten, and two brakemen were about to put him off the train when a fellow passenger interferred and paid his fare to Brainerd, where Carsten left the train. He instituted an action against the railroad company in the district court for damages, but it was decided that he could not recover. The case was caried to the supreme court with the result that yesterday the lower court was reversed in its ruling.

Carlisle and the Farmers.

A. Barnwell in National Economist

The day for hero worship has passed. Men now require good reasons for opinions whether they eminate from prominent men or otherwise. The great name of Mr. Carlisle can not therefore, prevent the farmers from investigating his strictures upon the sub-treasury bill

Let it be understood that this bill has been deliberately put forward by the Alliance of Farmers and laborers as the most available measure of relief which they could devise in this their great extremity. That they have made a strenuous appeal to their friends in Congress to either advocate this bill or give them some substitute which will be as effectual, or even more so, if possible. With this clearly understood, compare the answer of Mr. Carlisle to his constituents with his avowed knowledge of the urgency of the case, and the disgust on the part of his farmer constituents at its inadequacy is at once accounted for and justified. Says Mr. Carlisle in the Forum of last January:

"The American farmer is constantly engaged in a hard struggle to secure a comfortable support for his family and a moderate education for his children, and to pay taxes and keep out of debt. This is all he can reasonably hope to accomplish; in a large majority of cases he fails even to do this, and sooner or later is compelled to sell or mortgage his land and reduce his expenditures to the lowest figure. He has a paternal government which has determined that certain classes of industry ought to be maintained at the public expense, and for thirty years he has been taxed for their support; and now, after these favored industries have become rich and powerful, they conspire and confederate under the names of trusts, syndicates, and pools and dictate the terms upon which the people may procure the necessaries of life and carry on their business. Under our system of taxation the farmer is almost without the semblance of power to protect his own interests. He cannot control the prices of the products he sells in the markets of his own country, because the demand is not equal to the supply, and he must take what he can get. The farmer's crop depends almost entirely upon the character of the season he may have, and he cannot decide in advance how he must plant in order to furnish a supply that will not be in excess of the demand. He must sow and reap all he can every year, and take the risk of reducing the price of his own products by overstocking the markets. When the seed is sown it must remain until the crop is gathered, and consequently the farmer's investment yields but one return each year. These and and many other disadvantages under which the farmer labors, and which no act of Congress can move, etc."

The above is a clear statement of facts, not complete, because it fails to assign the most potent cause of the farmer's troubles—manipulation of the currency by the money kings. But what little use has Mr. Carlisle made of his accurate knowledge of the position of the farmer? Even if his plans for tariff reform were successful, which they are not, he could not expect them to be adequate to the needs of the farmer. If his other measures could also be added as successes—that is, free coinage of silver and the repeal of national bank charters—still the disadvantages of the farmer would not be fully removed. Should not Mr. Carlisle then, have come to the front with some measure more definite, more certain, and offering more prompt relief?

But in place of this he distinctly denounces in toto the very first plan which is advanced in this direction. Let us state the case. Says Mr. Carlisle, "the farmers have a paternal government."

The present systems have been impoverishing him for thirty years. His case is desperate and rapidly growing worse. Part of this lies in the nature of the case; that is to say, in the fact that his entire income is controlled by the prices at harvest time. The other part lies in the ability of trusts, syndicates, and pools, etc., to manipulate the harvest prices as well as the cost of his goods. Now just add to the above expositions of Mr. Carlisle the fact, that the expansion and contraction of the currency, without any other cause whatever, can, and does reduce the harvest price of his produce. When you recognize that this contraction of the currency can be, and is used for this very purpose by the speculators et al, you have the case before you. Said a prominent Southern politician, the sub-treasury plan was conceived in deception and born of subterfuge, and his is about the spirit in which it has, been met and considered. Let us see, upon calm investigation, if this very bill was not on the countrary the spontaneous outcome of the situation—a genuine undefiled child of nature springing into existence, formed and shaped by unavoidable circumstances and potent from its very adaptability to the requirements of the situation. Let us now state the case as presented to us by Mr. Carlisle. The farmer faces ruin. "He has a paternal Government." This Government has determined that certain classes of industry ought to be maintained at the public expense. For thirty years he has been the victim of this settled policy of his Government. The entire financial system opposes his interests. His yearly profit is reduced by the force of a contracted currensy manipulated for that purpose by those interested. He is almost without "the semblance of power to protect his interests."

Now if this be the farmers' case what would be his most natural course. He has a paternal Government, then surely he must expect paternal action. It is the settled policy of that Government to extend aid to the weak and needy pursuits of its citizens; then surely his is in the condition to apply for aid. He is ruined by a currency independent of him, and contracted by the purchaser of his goods. Well, ask for a different currency. Is there any deceit in this, any subterfuge in his pointing out that he needed a currency absolutely dependent for its expansion or contraction upon the products of his labor, and so out of control of the tyrannic money kings? Was not his next suggestion that the Government receive his produce in warehouses, as silver and whisky are received, as a safe collateral, a perfectly honest one? Does it not grow out of the case? What could be simpler or more direct or more practical?

But it has been attacked by the very man who has brought forward the statements which is the basis of its cause, and

"It is paternalism," and yet he says that this is a paternal government.

That the settled policy of the Government is one of class legislation.

"It is unconstitutional," and again he admits it is in line with the legislation of at least thirty years.

"It is undemocratic." Ah! here is the rut; but it is presented by Democrats, sustained by Democrats, and is for the benefit of Democrats, and equally so regarding Republicans. It is not, in fact, in any sense a party measure. Its tendency would be to break party lines; it was not intended as a party measure in any sense. It is a mere matter of justice, of justice to a well nigh ruined class. A class most important to the entire country, and clearly entitled to justice; and yet it has been spurned by the lawmakers. Spurned, but not defeated. Rejected by the builders, it has become a corner stone; and something more tangible than the blank catridges from even such staunch old veterans as Mr. Carlisle must be projected to prevent its being firmly set in the foundation of our Republic with its inscription, "Justice first, sentiment afterward."

The farmers, says Mr. Carlisle, are almost without the semblance of power to protect their own interests. This seems to be true at present, but surely he must, in order to maintain himself, make a desperate struggle to obtain that power, and although the measure of relief did not essentially require farmers as a class to take part in elections, by the treatment of this bill they are forced to do so, or see themselves and all that is sacred to their interests ruined. They are not responsible for this, the responsibility rests upon the present incumbent. There is, however, little prospect of making a new party. On the other hand, it is about to improve both of the old parties'

Kittel Halvorsen.

What Ex-State Senator Milne Says of Him.

Special to The Journal.

Duluth, Nov. 12.—Ex-State Senator J. O. Milne, who was in the senate when Kittel Halvorsen, now elected representative to congress, was in the house, gives the Duluth Herald the following interesting interview on Halvorsen and his capabilities;

"I have known Hon. Kittel Halvorsen for a number of years. He is a man of medium size, dresses very plainly but neatly and is a pleasant man to meet. He is a man of strong personal convictions, with moral backbone enough to stand by them; rather retiring, but not easily confused: not a brilliant speaker, but a clear thinker and a strong hitter; a hard worker and one who makes his work count.

"He is not a politician by profession, but I believe him to be the peer of any man in the Fifth district in the study of political economy, and he will be able to judge of the bearing any question may have upon the interests of his constituents as a whole. He will make a good congressman, who will faithfully serve his constituents, whether they live in Duluth or Stearns county.

"No, I am not one of those who believe the district would be better served by either of the other candidates. Neither am I one of those who believe that the McKinley bill is altogether to blame for this election I should charge the blame more to the unwise and unpopular manner of controling politics by a few self appointed would-be leaders in every town, who have been able to control public patronage in their own interests until the people have said no further shalt thou go. This is the case in Polk county, where every member of the ring is left, from Thompson down.

"Halvorsen served in the state legislature in 1887. I was also in the senate at that time and know him well. I had occasion to look up his record pretty closely at one time there, and was surprised at it. It is good."

Work for the Alliance To Do

By T. M. Smith, Blooming Grove Texas. The National Economist.

In the early days of Farmers Alliance I became a member because I thought I saw in the declaration of purposes a line of policy which. faithfully carried out, would relieve the oppressed wealth producers of our country, and speedily obliterate the prejudices and animosities engendered by the late war. In my first effort to explain Alliance doctrine to an audience I boldly urged the study of politics by the membership. This was early in 1885. Since that time I have written and spoken much in the same line. I may say here that if the Alliance does not make it obligatory upon its membership to study politico economic questions an immediate dissolution will and should be the result. When the Alliance leaders first began this course of instruction many and loud were the wails from those patriots—demagogues—of breaking up this or that party, most of them averring their great regard for the institution, but, at the same time, persistently advising a course that they knew would kill the Order quicker than anything else, viz., avoiding politics. The greatest obstacle to day in the way of our agriculturists is a lack of proper information as to our true condition. Is it reasonable to suppose that the farmers of our nation would be divided upon vital and important questions did they but intelligently comprehend the true situation? Our farmers may meet every year and every month and pass flaming resolutions dealing in generalities, without taking decisive steps, and the government will pursue its usual course of allowing her pets to continue their exactions. It is sheer folly to talk of having an Alliance of, and for farmers and laborers without requiring the membership to study and learn politics.

No people can prosper whose government does not give them proper protection. This fact is at once apparent. Now, it can easily be shown that all the evils of which our people are complaining are the result of misgovernment. With these two propositions in mind I apprehend that any one will grant the necessity for political education.

Our leaders should be careful to urge upon the individual members to leave their partisanism just on the outside of the Alliance hall. We have a common cause and a common foe—concentrated capital whose pliant and willing tools are the professional politicians—then why should there be division among us? Texas farmers arrayed in solid phalanx against their Kansas neighbors! ! and so through the whole list. I have imagined that our masters (and they never divide when common interest is at stake) look on and smile, silently exclaiming, "What fools these mortals be." Let us all go to work in good earnest from this day and do what we can in the way of organizing, educating and drilling our membership for the great battle of 1892, and if the various labor organizations do not name the next President of the United States they ought to quit. Somebody will name him, why not the farmers? Don't be afraid. You will succeed if wisdom and determination prevail. In conclusion I will say for the benefit of those who are fearful that the Alliance will distroy one or both of the political parties of our nation, that whatever is found to be genuine will be endorsed, and all the spurious condemned. Our country's politics are certainly safe in the hands of its citizens if the country has not been transformed from a republic to an oligarchy. With an intelligent understanding of our true condition will come a consolidation of our efforts for relief, and can come in no other way. Then, let us educate.

The Work in Hand.

The Western Rural.

The Legislatures which will meet this coming Winter have important duties to perform; and it is certainly to be hoped that no one will be elected a member of any one of them who is so stupid as not to know what those duties are. We have not much patience, as the reader very well knows, with the blind devotion to party interests which distinguish the course of the great majority of our law makers. But if partisan zeal is greater in any legislator's breast than is the zeal to serve the interests of the people, we wish to say to him confidentially, that a devotion to the public interests on the part of our legislators, is the only thing that will prevent a general smash-up among present political parties. The anti-monopoly sentiment is taking strong root in this country, and, mark our words, it will result in a thoroughly organized, fully equipped and powerful political party, unless the old parties do their duties by the people. As for ourselves we are indifferent as to the means which shall be used to secure to the people their rights. We ask for the repeal of all class legislation and for a pledge that no more shall be enacted; for effective legal intervention between grasping, greedy monopolies and corporations and the people; for laws that will prevent us from being robbed by food adulterators, bogus patents or even genuine patents, and through a monstrously unequal system of taxation. This is what we want, and we have not the slightest objection to taking it from either one party or the other, form one section of the country or another, or from an entirely new political party. We have no time or disposition to engage in the nonsense of shouting "hurrah for our party," while "our" party is doing no more for us than an old gate post. If "our" party cannot keep up with the demands of the hour, we are not going to lag behind with it, but are going to leave it and keep abreast with the times; and there is a host of people in this country who will do just as we intend to do. When the farmer gets justice at the hands of the monopolies that are now crushing him; when he stands before the law as the equal of any other man and of every other man; when labor is recognized by legal enactment for what it is worth, and our farms exert greater influence than Wall street does, we have not the slightest objection to the partisan screaming the party name, and glorifying the past record of his political organization, from morning until night, and from one year's end to another. In fact we shall be delighted that he has some trifling, harmless thing to amuse himself with. Having grown too large for a child's rattle, and too boisterous for any ordinary amusement, by all means let him give vent to his childishness by shouting the name of his party, if there is nothing else to do. But while monopolies are getting richer and the people poorer, we have no time to indulge in senseless partisan clamor, and do not mean that the legislator shall indulge in it longer than we can get rid of him.

National Economist: The condition in Wall street for the past two weeks is a living and practical demonstration of the necessity for the sub-treasury plan. The only thing that saves the country from a panic when the exploiting class let out credit paper as a circulating medium to supply the deficiency of money to move the crops, and let it out much slower than needed, in order to produce a stringency that will reduce prices, the only thing that prevents a panic as a result of this pressure is money furnished New York bankers from the United States Treasury. When the debt is paid we will be compelled to have the sub-treasury plan or a panic.

"Ashamed to see a Physician."

Many years ago schoolboys were forced to translate an anecdote of a scholar and a physician. Of course it was from a "dead" language.

It was a very literal translation, and was something like this: "A physician discovered a scholar hiding behind a wall. The latter said, "I have passed a great while not being sick, and am ashamed to see a physician."

At the present time scholars, authors, professional men, and, in fact, brain-workers generally, rarely have any occasion for hiding from the physician. Nervous Prostration, the general "break down," is the penalty of excessive or long-continued mental activity. The Greek cultivate the body as well as the mind, and did not suffer so much from this class of ailments. But the evil is upon us; there seems but little hope; and all we can do is to seek a remedy. Many have found it in Compound Oxygen. But send for our treatise, giving a history of this wonderful remedial agent, with testimonials and records of cures in Nervous Prostation, Bronchitis, Consumption, Catarrh, Neuralgia, Asthma, and numerous other diseases. Books of 200 pages sent free. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Minneapolis Times:—Mr. Davis' most serious mistake was made when he mixed up in the gubernatoral contest during the past campaign. He ought to have had respect enough for that very large and respectable element of the republican party which repudiated Merriamism in this state, and remained simply a spectator of the events of the campaign. Had Mr. Davis been a far sighted politician he must have discerned that the Merriam faction of the republican party was destined to go out of power with this campaign, and that the very men whom he had antagonized by supporting Merriam, would be in control of the party two years from now when he would need their support. There is a spirit abroad which is strongly in favor of wiping out of the republican party everything and everybody in any respect identified with Merriam and his campaigns. Whether or not Mr. Davis will escape being swept away with the rest is a question which cannot be answered until the opening of the next campaign.

Call for Immigration Convention to meet at Stephen Marshall County Minnesota, Wednesday, November 26, at 10:30 a. m.

In view of the fact that the Red River Valley and Northern Minnesota are today among the most prosperous grain and stock raising regions of the United States, and that they are now enjoying success superior to that of any other section, and that, notwithstanding, it is generally supposed in the east that our climate is unhealthy and severe, and that our section has been subjected to a succession of crop failures,—the contrary being the case. And, in view of these false impressions, and of the fact that other sections, inferior in every respect in climate, resources and productions are making strenuous efforts to divert and retain eastern immigration and eastern capital to their localities, it is not only our duty but a matter of justice to ourselves that we take measures to secure our rightful share of the influx of home-seekers and capital from the east, which will not only populate our unoccupied lands but enhance the value of real estate already occupied. Everyone interested in the prosperity and advancement of our common interests are eligible to participate in the proceeding of the convention. the object of Polk, Marshall, and Kittson to carry on immigration work jointly between them. Stephen has been chosen as the best point to hold the convention, as this will enable Polk and Marshall county participants to go on the Great Northern morning train, returning to their homes on the evening of the same day, while it will be easily accessible to the participants from Kittson county by team. You are earnestly requested to attend yourself and use your best efforts to induce otheas interested in our common welfare to attend.

Jersey Vs. Holstein.

Meadowgrange, in Am. Stockkeeper.

Your correspondent of Aug. 2nd, from Edinburg, Mo., defends the Jersey cow as Queen of the churn, and he has much of truth on his side, but I cannot accept some of his claims, He says; "it takes but a little less than four gallons of milk from an ordinary cow to make a pound of butter while it takes but two gallons of good Jersey milk to accomplish the same result."

The experience of the average Massachusetts creamery is that from 11 to 12 qts. of milk will make a pound of butter, and this at 1.15 lbs. to the quart, is a good deal less than four gallons. Again, the average Jersey cow will not make a pound of butter from two gallons of milk; it is only the exceptionally good cows that will do it. If your readers will study his table of 1500 tests of Jersey cows he will find that there are 149, or less than 10 per cent. of his list, who exceed 20 lbs. a week. Only seven animals of the 1500 rise above 30 lbs. His list of yearly records is also misleading, for the 10 animals mentioned as exceeding 500 lbs. per year are probably all he could secure, not only from his 1500 but from the whole Jersey field. All these figures are delusive to the average farmer who will try in vain to equal them. They require phenomenal animals and the grestest of care, favorable conditions, and a feeding that would be unsafe in an ordinarry herd.

He is disposed to attack Holsteins as butter stock, but he had studied Holstein as carefully as he has studied Jersey records he would have been less sweeping in his assertions. I am not a Holstein breeder, and would hardly adopt them yet as a class for butter stock, but the records indicate that in the near future the title to supremacy is to be sharply contested.

Let your Missouri friend ponder over these authentic Holstein records taken at random from a very limited field:

A aggie 2nd, 26 lbs. 7 ozs. in seven days, 301.05 in 90 days.

A herd of 190 cows and heifers producing 19.56 lbs per week, the average of milk required being 19 lbs. per pound of butter, or 8.8 quarts.

Thirteen nearest female ancestors of bull Count Clothilde average 20 lbs. 6 ozs. per week, including one two and one there year old record.

A large herd averaging 20 lbs. of milk to a pound of butter in November. this is only 9.3 quarts per pound; quite a reduction from 16 quarts.

De Kol 2nd, 33 lbs. 6 ozs. in seven days as a four year old.

De Kol 2nd's Queen, 28 lbs. 7 oz. as a three-year-old.

Pauline Paul, 31 lbs. 1 oz. in seven days; 128 lbs. 13 1-2 ozs. in 30 days, and 421 lbs 14 1-2 ozs. in 100 days; 700 lbs. 13 1-2 ozs. in six months, which is claimed to surpass the record of any cow of any breed for the same period.

Five two-year-old heifers with an average record of 14 lbs. 7 ozs. in seven days.

A herd averaging 13 per cent. cream with a large flock of milk.

Seven nearest female ancestors of Sybil's Aaggie, with an average record of 22 lbs. in seven days.

Netherland Queen, 21 lbs. 3 ozs. in one week; 88 lbs. 6 ozs. in 30 days; 17 lbs. of milk, or less than 8 quarts to the pound.

Netherland Princess, 17 lbs. 4 ozs. in a week, as a four-year-old.

Netherland Consor, 20 lbs. 4 1-2 ozs. in one week.

Eight ancestors of Sir Westwood, an Ontario bull, show an average of 19 lbs. 7 2-3 ozs. in a week.

Natsey, owned by Ehrich & White, Colorado Springs, has made 34 lbs. 9 ozs. in a week, 15 7-8 lbs. of milk making a pound.

Mechthilde, of Chas. Robinson & Sons herd, Barre Plains, Mass.; has just completed a test of seven days with 39 lbs. 10 1-2 ozs. to her credit; of thirty days with 150 1-2 lbs.; and in 60 days of 292 1-3 lbs.

In the 60 day test, it required only 18 lbs of milk or 8 3 quarts to a pound of butter.

These are by no means all that might be gathered to show that the Jersey cow is not the onely desirable butter animal. and there are other features in the Holstein stock,—size, hardiness, beef quality, etc., with which the Jersey can never compete.

National Economist: The opponents of the sub-treasury bill have ignored its principles and confined themselves to ridiculing and misrepresenting its details too long. A reaction is now taking place which threatens to change the entire situation in regard to this economic question. The logic of events and the persistent, intelligent manner in which this important measure has been kept before the public since its introduction, has caused many of the best business and judicial minds in the nation to give it a careful consideration. This has resulted in neutralizing the effort to meet its demands by ridicule, and substituted a strong desire to know why its provisions are not proper and legal. Men who stand high as legal authorities are now boldly proclaiming that the principles of this bill are constitutional and would be so decided by the highest courts. The people, in the mean time, are thinking, investigating and asking questions, all of which tend toward making the life of a political demagogue anything but pleasant. It is also quite plain to the average citizen thas this opposition is inspired in Wall street. When the similarity of these attacks through the press by certain congressmen are noted, the almost identical line of objections, the unfair and pettifogging manner of dealing with its legal phases, the suspicion becomes near a certainty that this concert of action is the result of a scheme by parties who little understand the progress of the people over former years in doing their own thinking.

Chances for Trade.

Stanley Says Americans Have A Promising Field in Africa.

He Tells What Commodities of Ours Would Find Ready Sale There.

Duluth Tribune.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 16.—Henry M. Stanley sat in his parlor at the Stratford this morning. He had just arisen from the breakfast table, and was feeling in a mood for a talk. He sat in an easy chair and smoked while he chatted, and just across the room his wife was entertaining some of the visitors who had already called, although the hands of the clock pointed to but 10:30.

"So you want to know what chance there is for American enterprise in Africa?" Mr. Stanley repeated, breathing forth a slender stream of smoke. "Well, at present, trade could only be carried forward on a small scale by private enterprise. Of course, the immeasurable possibilities for development in Africa needs colossal sums of money, and yet a great deal of trade may be picked up by vessels bringing to the coast cargoes of Yankee notions. Before the war Yankee skippers used to visit African shores in Yankee schooners. They could do so now better than before; but for some unaccountable reason they don't."

"There are five or six factories along the Congo river alone. Do you know what factories are there? They are market places where goods are stored and where the barter takes place. There must be immense factories in which to store the goods, for these are in bales as large as a big table. Of course the bales taken inland are much smaller. Now suppose a Yankee schooner comes over there laden with canned goods, lumber, chairs, American notions of that kind, a few hams, wheat, flour, corn meal, et cetera. Then the cargo must include all kinds of fabrics from the most precious velvet or silk to the most common cotton. Well, you get a cargo of those things to the Congo and they will sell like lightning for 100 per cent. profit. In exchange you can get either money or palm oil, and in bringing the last back to civilization you can realize an immense profit. I am convinced that fortunes can be made in this way just as before the war by American cargoes. If you think of going out with such a cargo, and don't know exactly what to include in it, just sit down and think what you yourself would like to have in such a land, far from civilization.

"Then again, all of the factories spoken of require boards, scantlings, etc. Sometimes the factories are burned down; then they find it difficult to get lumber. A ship loaded with lumber, chairs, tables, American notions of that kind, a few hams, pork, corn meal, canned fruits, and that sort of goods—a schooner loaded judiciously with those things that white men are unable to get are what they would like to have. Supposing we take the salesmen of Philadelphia and land them on the Congo; exactly what they would wish to buy is what the ship ought to contain. A barrel of flour is there considered to be a Godsend, and the sugar cured hams, a side of bacon, tobacco, etc., are valued greatly."

"The ship can go right to the river. It is not necessary for it to go inland. To Kabinda is about twenty miles from the river, then go to Gaboon, then right along to the Spanish factories, and then to Old Kalabar. When I started to my work on the Congo I should have bought shiploads of goo s if I had found the things I wanted. I wanted plank to build chairs and bedsteads; I wanted mosquito bars, gin, whisky, rum, slippers, smoking caps. They would have gone like hot cakes. One trouble is this: There has never been an American agent there who understood his business and could represent things fairly. Government agents have gone there, got the fever, became demoralized, and came back home."

Mr. Stanley spoke easily, fluently and calmly when touching upon commercial topics; but a minute after his whole appearance changed. The press man asked:

"With all your experience you do not consider that the efforts of foreign missionaries have proved a success?"

Stanley blew a huge cloud of smoke into the air, his face lighted up and his eyes flashed as he exclaimed: "Yes, sir, most emphatically. I am as certain of it as that I am sitting here talking to you. I am perfectly convinced of the fact that the work of missionaries is successful. It has not always been carried on rightfully or managed wisely; nevertheless, they can be shown to-day as something marvelous, considering the country where they have been at work and considering that the people were rum-drinking savages accustomed to robbery, fraud and murder whenever it was possible. The Protestants have the strongest hold in Africa so far, but the missionary work ought to be systematically carried on, and it is not now."

Speaking further of opportunities in Africa for private enterprise, Mr. Stanley added: "No private trade could be carried on with the interior until the railway is finished. This is now being built and will probably be completed in five years. It will reach the pool, and when it does you can go from the sea to Stanley Falls, 1,500 miles in two weeks. The Congo river is through one of the most magnificent sections of country in the world, but between Stanley's pool and the sea the country is hilly, mountainous and cut up too much by ravines to be appreciated. There is plenty of copper, iron, etc. Preparations are being carried on for civilization and for the comfort of the people, so that they have little time to prepare a government or the ways of communication. They use our American canned goods there, where there are 200 Europeans and officers, and, of course, as the railway advances there will be more and more. The railway is just begun, but they are constructing it. Just where the railway begins is the biggest work, and when they get a little headway it will go on more rapidly. They have begun at a canyon, and when they get out of it will be able to get along much faster. It is impossible to say anything at all about the future of the Congo Free State, inasmuch as the Congo Free State without a railway is not worth five cents. The Europeans expected to undergo all the perils and privations as though they were black men and to the manner born. But they have found this impossible. We have tried elephants, buffaloes, horses, mules, donkeys, dogs, white men and black men, but they have all died. The Bombay government gave us six elephants.

"Here we can order anything we like. We can live in peace with one another. But suppose we embark on board ship and go to the Congo. How long do you suppose you would be on good terms with each other, with yourselves? And the consequence is that when the fever comes you die helplessly. You blame Africa. Don't blame Africa; blame your own improvidence. When we first went there officers died because we had only £10,000 a year to pay wages and supply them with food, such as we could get in the country. They are able to live better now. When the railroad is built they will be still better off. There is no objection to the climate, and there is nothing in the country against it. It is a magnificent country. When I reached Zanzibar I weighed 135 pounds. Now I tip the scales at 180 pounds."

"What are your future plans regarding Africa, Mr. Stanley?"

"I have as yet formed no definite plan, and do not mean to do so until I am through with my present work. I believe in taking one thing at one time. I think I shall remain in this country until April, when I will take the family back to England?"

The Toledo Weekly Blade, the most popular weekly newspaper of the United States, will in a few weeks commence publication of a new serial story, now being written especially for its columns by Oliver Optic. Send postal card to Blade, Toledo, Ohio, for free specimen copy of the paper, and at the same time send names of all your friends, also.

The Sub-Treasury Plan.

When this plan was first suggested we were very favorably impressed with it on the simple ground that it would so perfectly control the output of wheat as to allow the poorest farmer in the land to sell his wheat to as good advantage as the most wealthy. The more we have studied it up since then the better we like it, and we are fully convinced that it is what we want. Senator Sandford's idea of loaning money on land is a good one for many, but unless the evils which exist in the market are corrected it would only be a question of time when the sharks would get all the poor farmer had and could borrow, in fact it would be a better thing for the sharks than the farmers, as it would furnish them more money to appropriate. What we want first of all is to stop this legalized robbery in our markets, and then the Sandford loaning plan would be all right, but if we had the sub-treasury plan in operation we would not need the loans. Every farmer in Polk County has actually earned money enough to make him independent. The wheat he has raised has helped to swell the millions of some rich capitalist, while he, if he has been able to pay his running expenses, has done exceedingly well. Under the sub-treasury plan the wheat would only be marketed as wanted for actual consumption and thus the price would be steadier. Wheat in this market to-day ought to bring one dollar a bushel, and would if the sub-treasury plan was in operation.

Partisanship.

The Western Rural.

The ways of the partisan are, as a demonstration of clear cut cheek, amazing. We have a partisan newspaper in Chicago that denounced the McKinley bill vigorously before the campaign. During the campaign it defended the new tariff law with energy and ability. Now at the close of the campaign, it is upon the law with both feet, stamping it with the spitefulness of a mad mule's kick. It is this sort of thing that disgusts people with partisan politics. It is this sort of thing that is augmenting the independent vote at every election; and the extent of independent voting at the present time is something of a wonder. Only a few years ago the ticket peddler stood at the polls, and the voters came to him to get their tickets. Now in our cities the different parties mail their tickets to all the voters, and in the intelligent districts fully ninety-nine per cent of the voters come to the polls with their tickets in their pockets, and the vocation of the ticket peddler is nearly gone; and the vast majority of those voters do not vote a straight ticket. It is only in the ignorant, disreputable, tough communities that party lines are strictly drawn. It is an encouraging feature in our politics, and it will ultimately lead to the exercise of very much more care in making the party nominations than has usually been given to that kind of work. If we could get rid of the reckless, lying, partisan newspaper, the large independent vote in the country would be pretty tosure elect the best man every time. But the best of voters are often misled by the bold, brazen falsehoods of the partisan press. In our last election there were candidates in Chicago defeated by those reckless partisan attacks upon character which was, as a matter of fact, the very best.

The Will of the People.

The Western Rural.

Abraham Lincoln used to say that you could fool some of the people all the time, that you could fool all of the people some of the time, but that you could not fool all the people all the time. This is true, too. This country is filled with people who to-day cannot sleep or eat because of the result of the late election. They are partisans; they love their party, and to defeat it is something like sacrilege. Now it verges upon folly to become excited over the result of any election, however far it may come from our ideas of what would have been best. The people's will is supreme, and it should be acquiesced in with pleasure by all good citizens. The Western Rural is willing to trust this people. The result of an election does not always signify that the people are right. The election may be the occasion on which all the people are fooled. But if they are they will right the wrong. You cannot fool them all the time. But if it should prove that any election has really gone in the interests of the people—that the people knew just what they were doing and what was best, and were not fooled, then everybody can afford to rejoice with the majority.

This country is perfectly safe. Those who are with the defeated can find comfort in that. No party or sect and no class can destroy this American Republic; and if any mistakes are made by the people they will rectify them. The election of certain men for office; and no amount of regret on the part of the defeated, can change the result. It is far better, therefore, for those who are so constituted that they think a great error has been committed, to go about their business, and wait for the actual result, and if it is not what it ought to be, it will be time enough to get excited when the chance to rectify the error shall come. And to those who have won the victory, permit us to say, that there is something for them to do besides throwing their hats in the air and shouting over the achievements. With victory comes responsibility. The large independent vote of this country shows that there are thousands who do not care which party has the offices, if government is properly administered. Future victories to the present victors depends altogether upon what they accomplish. But let the will of the people triumph without useless complainings on the part of the defeated.

Who Owns the Country.

The Western Rual.

We boast of our republic. We say it is the only country under the heavens where man can enjoy full freedom and equal rights. We say our government is of the people, by the people, and for the people. We point to Great Britain, with her great landed interests in the hands of the few, and with her titled aristocracy, and exclaim: How different from our own free, beautiful republic! Well, who owns our country? It is but little over a hundred years old. It is an infant compared with Great Britiain. Who owns it? The people, you say. Do they? Now look here. We have 200 people who are worth in the aggregate $,4000,000,000. We have 400 who are worth an aggregate of $4,000,000,000. more; we have a thousand whose aggregate wealth reaches $5,000,000,000; we have 2,500 people with a total wealth of $6,250,000,000; we have 7,000 who possess in round numbers $7,000,000,000; and there are 20,000 whose fortunes will together amount to $10,000,000,000. Here we have 31,100 people who possess $36,i250,000,00, Now the estimated wealth of the country is $60,000,000,000, and 31,100 persons own more than half of it. It is a startling array of figures. When in a nation of 60,000,000 people a handful owns more than half the wealth. which the millions have produced, it is time the people not only began to think, but that they put forth a united effort to destroy the influences which steadily tend to make the rich richer and the poor poorer.

The farmer in all justice, should be the most prosperous and best fixed man in the country. He feeds all; he clothes all; he makes the foundation of all prosperity. Yet he scarcely knows how to make both ends meet. He is not enjoying prosperity. It is the man who produces nothing who becomes rich; it is the schemer who accumulates money; it is the money lender, the railroad wrecker, the manufacturer, and the polite, polished rascals who get all the money there is afloat. And this infernal condition of affairs is the result of treachery on the part of legislators, and even of courts of justice, to the people's interests. The whole crowd needs shaking up. We need shaking up ourselves, for corporations and monopolies generally gets into office through our votes.

The Possibilities of wheat Culture.

A French paper says: Some thirty years ago the French considered a wheat crop quite good when it yielded 22 bushels to the a cre, but with the same soil the present requrment is at least 33 bushels, while in the best soils the crop is good only when it yields from 43 to 48 bushels, and occasionally the product is 55½ bushels to the acre. There are whole countries—Hess for example—which are satisfied only when the average crop attains 37 bushels while the experimental farmers' central France produce from year to year, over large areas, 41 bushels to the acre, and a number of farms in northern France regularly yield, year after year, from 55 to 68 bushels to the acre. Occasionally even as much as 80 bushels have been obtained upon limited areas under special care. In fact it is now proved that by combining a series of such simple operations as the selection of seeds, sowing in rows and proper manuring, the crop can be increased by at least 75 per cent over the best present average. While the cost of production can be reduced by 50 per cent by the use of some inexpensive machines like steam diggers or the pulverizers which make the soil required for each special culture. They are now occasionally resorted to here and there, but they will come into general use as soon as humanity feels the need of increasing the agricultural product tenfold.

St. Paul Daily News

Instead of proving a strong candidate, as some of Gov. Merriam's sycophantic organs are claiming, he proved the weakest man who could have been named. Almost any other Republican nominee would have been elected without a question. As it is, Gov. Merriam runs behind the vote of every candidate for Congress, even though they were weighed down with the McKinley bill. He runs behind the vote of every man on the Rupublican State ticket with the exception of Secretary of State and State Auditor, whose opponents were supported by the Alliance as well. If the issue had been made between Merriam and a single candidate, he would have been beaten by 30,000 votes, a larger majority than he received two years ago. The people have overwhelmingly repudiated him, and, though he secures the position by a scratch, it is no compliment.

Call at Sture's for bargains in dry goods and groceries.

Caroline Gage at the Opera House to-night in "Camille."

Wheat took an upward whirl this week, reaching 80 cents.

Mrs. E. E. Bangs will not be undersold in millinery goods. Remember that and call at her store on Second street, when you want a bargain in that line.

His Honor, Mayor McKinnon, went down to St. Paul last week.

Go to Sture's for choice sweet potatoes.

That portion of the round-house that is on Robert street is being removed.

Miss Minnie Bailey is in Minneapolis studying the latest styles in dressmaking.

W. G. Newton, of Castleton, N. D., was in the city with friends on Sunday last.

Try Sture's sweet cider.

Prepare for the big rush of next spring. Farming lands will be in great demand.

The lovely weather continues to abide with us. We would not object to have it last the year out.

Alderman J. E. Morrisey rejoices in the arrival of a bouncing boy, on Thursday of last week.

Farmers, if you want bargains, call and see Sture before you purchase.

Chief of Police, Louis Gonyea, has rented the Lake View house and will run an Alliance hotel.

A. G. Gallasch was up from St. Paul last week. He is now a member of the firm of Powers Bros., St. Paul.

Charlie Rapp, the genial St. Hilaire merchant, went to St. Paul last Thursday, returning home on Monday.

Sture has a choice lot of fine winter apples for sale cheap. Call before they are all gobbled up.

Chris Anderson has bought the John Erwin place near Fisher. He now has one of the finest farms on the river.

Judge Mills came down from Warren last Wednesday night and left for Moorhead on the delayed train same night.

Mrs. Cora Underhill and child arrived last week to spend the winter with her parents, alderman and Mrs. I. U. Jennings.

A. Sture will pay the highest price for eggs, oats and potatoes. Call and see him if you have a surplus of these articles.

Mrs. Netzer, widow of Frank Netzer, came up last week to attend the marriage of Mrs. Johanna Netzer to Mark Rauenbuehler.

Purchases to the amount of one dollar at the millinery store of Mrs. and Minnie Bailey entitles the purchaser to a fine string of beads.

Mrs. E. E. Bangs desires her lady friends to know that she is better than ever prepared to attend to their wants in millinery and invites their attention to her fine stock. Call at her store on Second street.

Ed. H. Love, the Hallock Enterprise hustler, was in the city on Tuesday. He reports that Hallock will soon have a fine large court house.

J. M. Palmer was down from Angus on Monday to trade stoves for the "keepin' room." Says he thinks Angus did nobly in the late election.

Sweet potatoes at Sture's.

John Watts wears his arm in a sling these days. The result of a fall which he got over at the Ste. Croix elevator one day last week resulting in a fractured arm.

A. Sture sent THE JOURNAL man a sample of that cider he brags about. In our judgment it can't be beat in this city. If you want the "rale ould sthuff" for a mince pie try Sture's cider.

Pure apple cider at Sture's.

Our good-looking policeman, Andy Locken, was rusticating in Minneapolis last week. Thinks that village will compare very favorably with Crookston, but too far away ever to amount to anything extra.

Al. Jones has secured a good position on the motor line in St. Paul. He has the front end of an electric—on the steam cars he would be an engineer As soon as he thoroughly learns the biz it will be a lucrative job.

The dramatic company that will appear at the Opera House this week announces that it will open with Dumas' masterpiece, "Camille," this evening. A change for each evening is announced. Don't fail to see "Camille" to-night.

Farmers, I have had experience enough in your business to know your requirements in merchandise and am prepared to meet them all in the kind, quality and price you desire. Call at Sture's store and see what I can do for you. A. STURE.

The through Montana express on Wednesday evening last was delayed by a burned bridge between Mallory and Fisher, about five hours. Fortunately the condition of the bridge was discovered in time to prevent an accident.

Mark Rauenbuehler, the Broadway harness maker, and Mrs. Johanna Netzer were united for life on Thursday of last week. Mark is one of Crookston's old-timers, the leading harness maker of the city, and THE JOURNAL casts the old slipper for luck and wishes the newly married couple a long and happy life.

A. R. Holston has become a resident of Crookston. By the way, by a typographical error THE JOURNAL cut his vote short just 300. Instead of the figure 9, as it should have been, the figure 6 appeared. It made no difference in the facts; however, he "got there" just the same.

Last week THE JOURNAL was called upon to chronicle the death of little Goldie, the four year old twin daughter of H. O. and Ida May Scribner, and this week we have to record the death of the other twin. Verily, the afflicted parents are in sore trouble and they have the sympathy of many friends as far as that may mitigate afflictions like these.

Swan Anderson brought down the business end of an Indian war-club, when he was last in from Black River. He found the stone on a farm near Wylie station and intends to keep it as a souvenir of the former owners of Red River soil. The stone weighs about six pounds and has a notch cut in it to hold the thong that formerly bound it to the club.

Rev. S. N. Griffith was over from Larimore on Tuesday. Mr. Griffith takes a deep interest in the alliance work and is in full sympathy with the idea of government control of railroads. He says the true idea is illustrated in the mail system wherein space is annihilated, and this idea must eventually obtain in relation to freights. He thinks farmers are masters of the situation if they take the proper steps.

"Geo. H. Palmer, Rose M. Dickmann, married Saturday, Nov. 22d, 1890, at 8 o'clock a. m., Crookston, Minnesota. At home after date," is the way the card we received on Monday reads. Geo. H., aforesaid, party of the first part, is one of the legal luminaries of our brilliant young city, and for some time it has been apparent that all he needed was a good partner to make life for him a complete success. Having found a life partner in the daughter of Register Dickmann, THE JOURNAL unites with a host of their friends in wishing the happy pair a long and useful life.

Ed. Chapin, brother of Engineer Fred and S. E., passed through the city on Friday morning bound for Devil's Lake, where Fred at present lives. He was accompanied by quite a little company of Prattsburgh folks who are on their way to the new state of Washington. The only mistake of which we complain is that they did not stop in the fertile Valley of the Red to make their future home, but then they can do that on their return, after they have seen the bubble out there, and are tired of it. Ed. intends to engage in business with his brother, S. E., at Church's Ferry, and if he is a rustler like either of his brothers, he will no doubt make a success of it. We bid him welcome to the New Northwest.

While from every portion of the country come reports of slim crops, the Red River Valley stands forth with the best crop in the country. We have a fine crop of excellent wheat, a good crop of nice potatoes—worth big money this year; a good crop of barley, that never brought a better price in this market, and a big crop of oats—which also commands a good price. All these facts are well known all over these United States and many farmers are looking with longing eyes toward the future wheat granary of the world, where our fertile farming lands may now be had at merely nominal figures, and the result will be a big immigration some day in the near future. And is probable that the coming spring time will see many flocking in to occupy the land and help to fully develope this New Northwest. Probably never again will come the time when our lands can be bought at so low a figure.

Caroline Gage, the eminent young society actress, supported by Harry F. Keene's celebrated company of players, will give a grand Thanksgiving Day's entertainment at the Opera House to-night, when they will produce Dumas' beautiful drama, "Camille," Miss Gage comes highly recommended by the press wherever she has appeared, and enjoys the enviable reputation of being the handsomest and most gifted emotional actress of her age before the public, being only 22 years of age. This will undoubtedly be "THE" event in theatrical circles this season. Manager Rapin is to be congratulated for his efforts to secure for theatre goers so excellent an attraction for the Thanksgiving Day entertainment. The stage settings of the piece are said to be magnificent and the wardrobe of the company will undoubtedly surpass anything ever seen in Crookston, the dresses worn in this piece by Miss Gage alone cost $2,000. The company will stay three nights, changing the play each evening. The price of admission is placed at 75 cents with no extra charge for reserved seats, which are on sale at Tom Morris' jewelry store. Gallery 50 cents.

John N. Bailey has gone to Duluth to visit the Milnes.

Notwithstanding the rece[illegible] New York, money for f[illegible] at panic in to be as plenty as e[illegible] rm loans seems rates than fo[illegible] er and at much less reasonable [illegible] merly. Loans at a reasonable [illegible] luation can be made at from [illegible] per cent., but the more thrifty of our farmers do not have to borrow this year.

If you get time call in and see about that little subscription. We need a good bit of money this fall and the subscriptions that are due, and past due, would go very far toward supplying it. As all our bills have to be met promptly when due and as we have been obliged to carry many from one to three years or so, it has necessitated borrowing money at 10 per cent., which money is now due and we do not wish to renew loans when the money actually due us could as well be paid as not. Many have already come to the front, and we hope that all who are behind will also call and arrange the matter. We think it beyond dispute that we have been very lenient in this matter and if our friends will only appreciate this fact and do their best for us in return, we shall not regret having had to borrow money in the past to carry our list. We only ask you to do the best you can by us and we confidently expect this.

Ran Away.

Noe Bottineau, aged 10 years, son of Pierre Bottineau, of Red Lake Falls, in company with a boy aged 11, whose parents live at Grafton, N. D., ran away from the Catholic industrial school at Clontarf, Minn., on Sunday evening, Nov. 16th, and has not been heard from since. Mr. Bottineau was not notified until Friday last and left on the evening train to search for the boy. George Bottineau came down to Crookston on Tuesday and on Wednesday morning received word that the boy had been found.

The City Market.

Since the removal of the city market to Third and Fifth streets there seems to be much confusion in the matter, many still going to the old market place and others preferring to expose their hay for sale upon any of the principal business streets that come handy. The chief of police has been indefatigable in his efforts in this matter and the street commissioner has also taken a whirl at it, but seemingly to little purpose, and it is evident that other means should be applied. A large sign, conspicuously posted upon the market streets, would be a good thing, and then the by-laws should be so amended as to make it an object for people to expose their wares for sale, and to feed their teams on the grounds prepared for them.

Minn. Alliance Storm Association.

The directors of the Minnesota Alliance Storm Association held a meeting at the office of the secretary, in St. Paul, on Thursday, Nov. 20th, at which all but one or two members were present. Upon examination of the condition of the business it was found that the company had met with severe losses by hail, as is the case with all hail companies in Minnesota and Dakota. They have done a business amounting to over $26,000, and the notes are all collected except some $4,000 or $5,000. When this is all collected the company will be able to pay 50 per cent. of its losses, which is a remarkably good showing for this year. The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Upon examination of the accounts of the Minnesota Alliance Storm Association, this day had, it appears that the entire business of the Association for the past year amounted to $26,019.45; and that this large business was conducted at an expense of less than one thousand dollars for salaries of officers, rent of office, clerk hire, and all other headquarters expenditures; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Board of Directors hereby extends to the president, secretary, and other officers of the association their thanks for the energy, industry and remarkable economy they have displayed in the conduct of the association.

THE TRAIN SAVED.

John Torrison Discovers a Fire on the Marais Bridge and runs a Half mile in Time to Save the Train.

Fisher Bulletin.

What might have been a terrible accident, resulting in a frightful loss of life was averted Wednesday night by the heroism of John Torrison. At about 6:30 John Torrison discovered what he supposed was a brush fire at the Marais bridge, after looking more closely he saw that the bridge itself was on fire. Just then he heard the east-bound passenger whistle at Mallory five miles away and knowing that if the train with its load of human freight was to be saved something must be done at once. Hastily getting a lantern he ran to the railroad over a half a mile distant, and got there in time to save the train. The crew and passengers turned in and put out the fire which had burned off several ties and stringers leaving the rails with no support. Conductor Sands then started to walk into town to telegraph and met the section crew just going out, as they suspected something was wrong as the train had been reported out of Mallory on time and should have been in. As it happened the bridge crew were in town putting up the new water tank and they took a special train and repaired the bridge and their train got into Fisher at eleven o'clock, four hours late. Conductor Sands went down in his pocket and gave the young man $5,00 out of his own pocket book. But what did the passengers do?

They made up a handsome purse and gave to the man who saved them from certain death is what you expect to read that they did.

They did nothing of the sort, instead of being thankful for their deliverance many of them simply stood around and cursed the railroad for not getting them to their destination.

Notice.

All persons interested in the D. N. Taylor elevator scheme are requested to meet at City Hall, Crookston, on Saturday, Dec. 6th, 1890, at 2 o'clock p. m., to take steps for self-protection.

CHRIS. HOUSTON,
Chairman.

Remember the entertainment at the opera house to-night. Also Friday, and Saturday evenings.

Ignatius Donnelly, will be a candidate before the December meeting of the State Farmers' Alliance for President of that body. Mr. Donnelly has done good work for the farmers in times past and amply deserves consideration. We are of the opinion that Mr. Donnelly will get the majority of the votes in this county.

Douglas County News: -Last Thursday forenoon three prisoners escaped from the Douglas county jail while Deputy Lundgren was getting in wood and had the outer door open. They watched their chance and while the deputy was at the woodpile they opened the inner door with a wooden key and slipped out. By the time he discovered their escape they had a start of from ten to fifteen minutes. They were brought here from Crookston to await trial there. A reward of $75 has been offered by Sheriff De Frate for the capture of all of them or $25 for each. There names are Wm. Mc. Donough alias John Conners, James Hickey and Thomas Kelly.

CROOKSTON BUSINESS COLLEGE AND INSTITUTE OF SHORTHAND.

TEACHING FOREIGNERS.

A Business College has great advantages over other schools for teaching Germans Scandinavians and other foreigners.

Of course, business is done in this country very differently from the way it is done in the old country, and a young man who has been in America only a few years cannot understand what is needed in business here, unless somebody teaches him. If he goes into a store, no one there has the time to teach him. So the best place to learn how business is done is in a college.

In our school he can learn how to read and write the English language correctly, and prepare himself to conduct his own business affairs successfully.

Our teachers will do all they can to help along those who do not know our language very well, and every student receives personal, and individual instruction.

Our foreign students generally make as good progress as our American students.

There is a great demand in business for young men who can speak the German or Scandinavian languages, so our foreign students have no trouble in getting work when they finish our course of study.

Baker Can't get There.

Mankato Free Press.

Our Democratic contemporaries need lose no unnecessary sleep in trying to dig out some sort of an excuse on which General Baker can contest Congressman Lind's seat. He will not be able to get there. And, besides the General would feel awfully "shaky" to go before a party whose leaders had voted him "unfit to hold office under the United States Government," after the people had passed on his case in a free election when every man had been permitted to cast his ballot according to the dictates of his own conscience and had that ballot fairly counted.

The Alliance's Function.

The Chicago News.

There is no doubt that the influence of the farmers upon future national and state legislation will be greater when the old parties have learned the lesson that the party fetich will not be blindly followed any longer. As a balance wheel, courted by both political parties, the independent voters, including the agriculturist, will accomplish more than if they created a new party of their own.

A Tariff on Fish.

And you can't charge this to the McKinley Bill, but simply and solely to John Lathrop, late secretary of the State Farmers' Alliance. In the Great West, during the campaign, Dr. Fish went for John red-hot, whereupon John, after the election, hauled the doctor up before a magistrate and he was taxed $100. No McKinleyism about that.

As To Beet Sugar.

Prairie Farmer.

The Prairie Farmer has kept its readers fully informed as to the status of the manufacture of beet sugar in the United states for the last twenty five years, including the failures at Chatsworth, Ill., Fond du Lac, Wis., the attempts in New Jersey, in New England States and in California. It is not necessary here to recapitulate reasons why all these enterprises, except one in California, failed. The first and great Napolen may well be called the father of beet-sugar making. He fostered the enterprise in France. To day more than two thirds of all commercial sugar made in the world is beet sugar made in Europe. Many, perhaps all, European governments now exact a tax of five dollars per ton on the beets raised. Not over twelve tons per acre is sought to be growing, since large beets do not contain so high a per cent of sugar as beets of about three quarters of a pound each. On the basis of twelve tons of beets per acre the tax the European governments exact is about sixty dollars per acre.

Last spring a company was formed, as stated by us at the time, to build a factory at Grand Island, Nebraska. The editor of the Prairie Farmer stated after the Chatsworth failure, from his personal knowledge of soils, that the trans-Mississippi country would be the region both for sorghum and cane sugar. This statement has now been verified. The factory, as stated in these columns a month ago, was turning out pure sugar—what chemists call sucrose—in large quantities. The enthusiasm is of course great and, we believe, well founded. Already South Dakota, as well as points in Nebraska, are moving in the direction of the manufacture of beet sugar. There is one thing, however, to be remembered in this connection. It is this: Do not locate a factory where there is not a good supply of living water. It takes at least fifteen cubic feet of water per minute to supply the waste of a large factory. We have now restated some principal facts from our personal knowledge of the manufacture. In answer to a letter, we have received a communication which shows that the factory at Grand Island has a capacity of 350 tons of beet per day, which gives 275 barrels of pure, granulated, refined sugar per day. The size of the main factory is one hundred feet wide, three hundred feet long fifty-eight feet high, besides the other buildings covering several acres of ground. The steam battery has twelve fine boilers each eight feet in diameter, the engines aggregating twelve hundred-horse power. The history of the Grand Island enterprise, as given us, is as follows:

"After three years of extensive, careful and expensive experiments in growing sugar beets, under the directions of an expert German chemist who had made the subject his life study, it was demonstrated beyond a doubt that the altitude, bright, dry atmosphere and pecular soil in the immediate vicinity of Grand Island, were conditions extremely favorable to the successful cultivation of the sugar beet. Efforts made for years and continued without success, were now renewed with redoubled energy to induce capital to invest in the manufacture of beet sugar at this place. The attention of Mr. H. T. Oxnard, a sugar refiner of large experience, backed with unlimited capital, was at last attracted. Mr. Oxnard had been investigatigating the beet sugar industry for years and had alredy visited and re-visited every country on the globe where the conditions for growing sugar beet were supposed to be favorable. Negotiations with him were at once begun, looking to the erection of a factory which would be not only one of the largest but the most complete and perfect establishment in the world for making sugar from beets. Ground for the erection of this immense plant was broken in December, 1889, and the work was pushed as fast as men and money could do it—from two hundred to four hundred men having been directly employed since that time.

"The machinery (excepting only the boillers and numerous vats and tanks of steel) was purchased in France and Germany and erected under the personal supervision of a number of experts from those countries. Some idea of the magnitude of this factory can be formed when it is known that one hundred and thirty-six car loads of machinery, or three trains of forty-five loaded cars each, have been received and put in place in the main building. Employment is furnished directly and indirectly to more than one thousand persons during the campaign, and the product of three thousand acres of beets has been found inadequate to supply the demands of the factory. Six car loads of coal and limestone are consumed daily."

The sample of sugar received by us is first class in every respect except that the granulation is rather finer than usually seen. The crystal, however, can be produced large or small at the will of the operator of the vacuum pans. There seems now no doubt of the great success of this enterprise that may eventually make the West the first sugar producing country in the world. We learn that the success of the factory is so pronounced that steps have already been taken to double its capacity for next season's crop, and to insure the cultivation of at least ten thousand acres of beets in the immediate locality.

In addition to this, numerous factories will be erected at convenient distances from Grand Island, for the manufacture of raw sugar to be refined at the Grand Island refinery, or to extract the juice from the beets and ship it there in tanks for manufacture.

In conclusion we may say that the present season in Nebraska has proved to be the driest known for seventeen years, and some farmers failed to raise not only corn and small grains in paying quantities, but beets as well. Many, however, have raised crops which show a net profit of from $20 to $60 per acre. Of course the farmers in that vicinity are jubilent over the situation, and The Prairie Farmer congratulates them upon the present successful outlook.

Greater Then Their Creators.

St. Paul Dispatch.

If the report be true that the Rockefellers have secured control of the Northern Pacific railroad, and are about to engage themselves, in conjunction with Mr. Gould, in the control of railroad property throughout the country, the circumstance but affords another illustration of how the creature may be made to surpass the creator. All that the Rockefellers are, and that the Standard Oil trust is, they have been made through the agency of the railroads, which have discriminated against the people in the interest of those monopolists.

It is, perhaps, reasonable and proper to denounce the public policy which would favor the ownership of the railroads by the state. But when such circumstances as this, which show clearly how public interests have been prostituted for the enormous gain of individuals, are constantly coming to light in connection with railway administration, it can hardly be said to be surprising that so large a proportion of the American people are daily approaching the condition of mind which looks to state ownership as the only means of solving the railway problem.

The Rockefellers and the Goulds and the rest of the monopolists are loudest about these times in their denunciation of farmers' alliances and other such manifestations of socialism, yet it requires not a great deal of knowledge, nor a very extensive recollection, to be able to identify them as the chief agents in the growth of such organizations. The tendency toward concentration in industrial life is more clearly shown in recent developments in the ownership of railroad property than in any other way. But from present indications these recent developments are but a step. Whether the end of the journey will be reached when the state has owned the railroads which are now passing into the hands of a few men, it would be difficult to say; but if such be the ultimate outcome the responsibility will lie at the doors of the Goulds and the Rockefellers, and those other creations of a corrupt and dishonest use of public agencies for private emolument.

The Plaindealer—: Senator Washburn, of Minnesota, is doing considerable work in the interest of sugar beet culture in his State. He invites all interested to talk over the matter with him at the different towns he visits. We are reminded Senator Pierce might help his chances to another term by working up the sugar interest in this State. If the enterprise is practical, and it would seem it must be, the work is important enough to engage any man's attention.

Prinseton Union:—More surprising than all else was the result in the Fifth district, when Sol. Comstock was laid out by Kittel Halvorsen. Of all the members of the Minnesota delegation Comstock was the most persistent and hard working. He probably did not miss four days in attendance upon the congressional session of the house. He was always at his committee meetings, and unliring in his work. He was instrumental in securing for his district nearly $800,000 in appropriations to be expended in various portions of the northern part of Minnesota. The feature about these appropriations is that the money will be expended directly among the people, and the improvements made will be for the benefit of the people as well. It could have been nothing more or less than the fact that Comstock supported the McKinley bill.

The Plaindealer:—S. M. Owen, who got 50,000 votes for Governor of Minnesota, has some excellent ideas and his counsel will be of value to the Alliance. He thinks the legislature should act with great care, pass but few laws, reduce expenses where it can justly be done, guard against dislike of old parties to influence them to pass any retaliatory act. Mr. Owen favors changing the Alliance name to make it more comprehensive, and thinks the party will have a ticket in the field in 1892. Mr. Owen seems to be very modest in expressing his views, is not in any sense a "boss." We notice some paper has brought him out for President. The farmers might select a worse man but the chances are they will not name a better one.

For the Mill Bosses.

Chicago Tribune.

The duties on wool and woolens were advanced and for one of two reasons—to raise revenue or to promote certain American industries. Nobody claims it was for the first, for the bill was one to lessen, not to increase revenue. All its friends asserted that it was for the second. They claim to have put up the duties on wool to promote the interests of sheep growers who were being harmed they said, by Australian and Argentine competion. They said they put up the duties on manufactured woolen goods of all kinds because they had advanced those on raw wool, and also because the manufacturer was unable at the present rates to compete successfully with his European competitor. In other words, as it was going to cost the American more to manufacture goods than the European, duties must be raised so as to enable the former to sell his dearer goods. If it is not meant to advance prices, what is it for? How are the raw materials of the manufacturer to be made dearer and his selling prices to remain unaltered?

Gould's Grip.

St. Paul Daily News.

In spite of the denials to the contrary, the indications are that, through the Rockefellers, Jay Gould has secured a sufficient interest in the Northern Pacific to dictate its policy.

It does not appear that he proposes to antagonize Mr. Villard, or make radical changes, as in the case of the Union Pacific, where President Adams is to be deposed, but he proposes to control and regulate the business of all the trans-continenal lines.

In the recent great shrinkage of values in railroad stock, Mr. Gould is credited with having secured at least a sufficient interest to dictate the policy of the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe.

These, with the lines already in his possession gives him the control of at least 40,000 miles of railroad property, a mileage twice as great as that of either France or Great Britain making him the greatest railroad potentate in the world.

The concentration of such vast interests in the hands of one man, and he thoroughly unscrupulous, is a menace to the interests of the people.

That he will use his power for his own interests, goes without saying, and that his interests are counter to those that are the public's is equally apparent.

Matters are approaching a gigantic trust, covering all the railroads in the country, and the concentration of all the trans-continental lines in the hands of one man is a long step in that direction.

Eli Perkins on Wheat.

Minneapolis Journal.

Eli Perkins figures that two years wheat will be worth $1 a bushel in this country. This raise in values will be accomplished by the culling off of the 60,000,000 bushels surplus wheat now raised, which is exported. The raising of beets for sugar, flax for linen and sheep, he declares, will withdraw a large acreage now devoted to wheat. Then the 20 cent penalty on Canadian wheat is bound, so he says, to remove the competition of cheap Manitoban grain. Wheat is worth $1,25 a bushel as a food product, says Eli, and ought to fetch that much money.

Among our Exchanges.

Mankato Register.

Hon. S. M. Owen, editor of Farm, Stock and Home, and late Alliance nominee for Governor, has unlimited reason to feel proud of the run he made. It was little less than miraculous when all the circumstances are estimated. Mr. Owen had none of the three great essentials to the successful conduct of a political campaign, viz: Party organization, newspaper support and money. His party organization was in a deplorable shape. Instead pulling unitedly for Mr. Owen's success, the State committee was conducting a Killkenny cat fight wherein charges of every conceivable nature were hurled back and forth between the opposing factions while Mr. Owen was conducting his canvass unaided and alone. Then, the only paper in the state which professed to be an Alliance organ, the Great West, opposed Mr. Owen by insinuation and hints at post-election attacks. On top of this, he had no means with which to pay legitimate assistance in his canvas. The Alliance party has great reason to feel proud of Mr. Owen because of his clean, dignified manhood and because of his commendable campaign methods. The Register differs with Mr. Owen, diametrically on the great campaign issue, the tariff, but regardless of this, it can see in him one of the most brilliant men in the state.

Sleepy Eye Herald:—Now that the smoke of battle has cleared away, we can impartially review the field and calmly reflect upon the results. Never in the history of the state has there been such a determined effort on the part of the people to rid themselves of party tyranny. The Alliance had no campaign fund; no boodle. If we had money we would not have used it. With few exceptions the press was against us. The politicians were not with us. As a political organization the Alliance in this state is not a year old; yet, in the next legislature, we shall hold the balance of power. Had Owen received the support from cities that he did from the rural districts, Merriam would not be our next governon.

Our munitions of war were not directed against old party organizations. We confined ourselves to the agitation of the issues which were involved in the campaign. By the agitation of these issues old parties were weakened. In every case the party which is in power suffered the worst. The success of the Alliance party is due to its ability to deal with the question which agitates the public mind.

If the past campaign has done nothing else it has taught the people their strength. It was originated, not to advance the selfish ends of a few, but was born of necessity.

As a political organization the Alliance ought to have a wide signification. It should include not only the farmer, but all whose interests are identical with his. I hope to see in '92 a national party in whose ranks there shall be producer and consumer laboring together for the triumph of the same political measures.

The Alliance was never stronger and yet we were never in more danger. There are those who would gather the seeds of discord and contention among us. Not a few who would greatly rejoice if the Farmers Alliance were dissolved into petty antagonistic factions.

The capitalists are alarmed and will make a tremendous struggle. Our present achievement will be wrested from us unless maintained by eternal vigilance.

We recognize no defeat. Already the campaign of 92 has begun. We must succeed. The Alliance must be pushed into every township of the state. Organization is the watchword. Let us not cease our labors until victory crowns our efforts.

"Curiosity and Experiment."

"For it has been solemnly resolved, malpractice is a great misdemeanor and offence at common law, whether it be for curiosity and experiment, or by neglect, because it breaks the trust which the party had placed in his physician, and tends to the patient's destruction."

The only kind of malpractice from which there can be any great danger among intelligent persons is that arising from "curiosity and experiment." Judging from the reports in medical Journals, there is a tendency to experimenting.

However, if you prefer to make your own report, try the Compound Oxygen Treatment. It is no experiment. It has been used in thousands of cases all over one thousand physician are using it in their practice.

Justice and Union.

The Farmers' Alliance to Obtain the One By Means of the Other.

KANSES CITY, Nov. 12.-In its issue of this week the Farmers' Advocate, the official paper of the Farmers' Alliance or people's party of Kansas, has the following to say of the future of the party:

"Weshall at once commence to marshal the hosts of the people for the conflict of 1892. In this work there are many prejudices to overcome. Sectional lines must be abolished. Interests which are identical must be brought together and the combined forces of the agricultural classes must be consolidated against the forces of the corporations, monopolies, trusts, syndicates and monied aristocrats who have for years feasted upon the substance of the people. When we say these forces are to be marshaled against the oppressors of the people, we do not mean that the injustice which has characterized the corporate power of America is to be returned in kind. The people simply ask for justice-that alone, and that, by the eternal, they will have. The coming contest, therefore, will not take place between the Northern and Southern sections of our country. The interests of the people of the West and South are identical and their political forces must be consolidated against the power of corporate greed. We may as well recognize this fact now as to permit our prejudices to postpone the day of its recognition. The professional politicians of both parties, both North and South, who have devoted their lives so assiduously to the promotion of corporate interests, recognize that this union of the two sections is the great danger that threatens the power of monopoly and they therefore constantly aim to keep alive the prejudices that have estranged them only to prey upon them and to maintain their political supremacy by their alienation. It has been and is the holy mission of the Farmers' alliance to subdue this sectional prejudice. It is full time for this nation to become united. Did the hosts of the army in blue face shot and shell to maintain and perpetuate a more perfect Union or to divide the nation into contending sections? If the former, let us see to it that those who fell did not perish in vain. Let us see to it that those of their comrades who survive may live to see a country redeemed and its liberties restored. Down with all sectional lines! Away with all sectional prejudices! Let the fires of patriotism that still burn in the hearts of the people, consume the prejudices of the past. Let one flag float over us and one spirit so perfectly pervade our hearts that we shall be able and willing to stand shoulder to shoulder in the great army that must be making lasting conquest of the host of corporate greed that are fattening upon the stolen substance of the people."

Fiat Money Fiat Millionaires.

Farm, Stock and Home.

If there is any one thing that those who rule over us seems to stand it holier horror of than any other thing it is "fiat money"; money that is created by legislative fiat, like the old "greenbacks," for instance. But our rulers have no sort of horror of, but, on the contrary, apparently have the profoundest admiration for fiat millionaires and the legislative fiats that make them both possible and plenty. It is not the impending fear of fiat money but the present fear of fiat millionaires that should most concern the industrial workers of this country. The fiat millionaire produces no wealth, is in no sense a useful member of socity. He simply absorbs the earnings of productive industry, and returns to that industry no recompense whatever. When he amasses a million he must literally rob of every cent they posses over a thousand of his fellow citizens, for he has added nothing to the country's wealth, and that wealth averages less than a thousand dollers to each inhabitant. The fiat millionaire enters into combine and monopolist of all sorts, uses them as channels upon which to float fiat stocks—without any referance to the absence of security behind them—that become fiat drafts on productive industry for amounts regulated only by greed on one side and ability to pay on the other. Against the first methods and fiat results herewith alluded to no protest is ever uttered by our law givers, but the mere suggestion of fiat money throws them into a cold sweat of apprehension.

If a man could become a millionaire only through legetimate means, as a great merchant does, for instance, who does not try to eliminate competition from trade, but possesses a genius for money-making in spite of it, no fault would be found with millionaires, and no harm would come from them; for, in the first place, they would be too few in number to cut any figure in the general distribution of wealth; and, in the second place, such men give a recompense to the community for the wealth they absorb, by narrowing the margin of profit between producer and consumer, accumulating their wealth through the magnitude of a business done on a small percentage of profit. To such fortune makers there is no industrial antagonism; and strangely enough, for such fortune-makers our rulers have no sympathy. Special legislation, or the absence of legislation, is always in the interest of those who have not the genius to make money ligitimately, and so must be aided either by the co-operation or non-interference of law makers.

It is not fortune making in the abstract that wealth producers antagonize, but the illegitimate and oppressive methods employed in making the fortunes; it is not capital in the abstract, but the use of capital as a political power to multiply itself without adding to the general store of wealth that is objected to.

If there were no fiat millionaires and no fiat method of making them, there would be no popular clamor for fiat money. If every other business interest had a foundation of undoubted security, then such a foundation for our circulating medium might with propriety be insisted upon. But while billions of dollars worth of airy nothings are drawing heavy tributes from productive industry the clamor for a circularing medium with an equally visionary foundation will never cease. If fiat money is such a dreadful thing it would be wise to remove the causes that create the demand for it.

"Curiosity and Experiment."

"For it has been solemnly resolved, malpractice is a great misdemeanor and offence at common law, whether it be for curiosity and experiment, or by neglect, because it breaks the trust which the party had placed in his physician, and tends to the patient's destruction."

The only kind of malpractice from which there can be any great danger among intelligent persons is that arising from "curiosity and experiment." Judging from the reports in medical Journals, there is a tendency to experimenting.

However, if you prefer to make your own report, try the Compound Oxygen Treatment. It is no experiment. It has been used in thousands of cases and over one thousand physician are using it in their practice.

For further information, send for our brochure, mailed free. It gives a history of Compound Oxygen, its mode of action, discovery, and results. No other genuine than the Compound Oxygen manufactured by DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Rocky Mountain Grass Hopper

Editor Farm, Stock and Home.

Having reciveda number of letters from the Red River Valley, all describing the actions of a large swarm of locusts coming from the northwest and, passing over Crookston on the 16th of August, I deem it of great importance to obtain all the possible information from farmers who live in the invaded region and who are naturally most concerned. A number of specimens received from Crookston show that two species of locusts are concerned, viz: the Two Striped Locust and the Minor Locust, both are injurious, both are native species, which occur in large or smaller numbers every season. One specimen, however, received from Mr. McGrew, looks very much like the genuine Rocky Mountain species, but was too much mutilated to show a positive identification. As it is very important to know the real facts in the case, I ask person living in the region between Crookston and Fosston to send me specimens of the suspected insect, and any other information, such as time of appearance, direction of flight, and whether any eggs have been deposited or not. UNDER-CONSUMPTION.

The National Economist.

The writer has from time to time urged upon the readers of this paper that the argument of over-production by agriculturist was false and erroneous. It was maintained that we are not being impovershed by superbundance of life's necessities, but by the inability of the great mass of urban population to pay for a normal ration. In the November issve of The True Commonwealth Professor Ely has an article entitled "Farmers and Natural Nonopolies," showing how farmers are directly interested in the prospeity of urban communities. The professor shows that existing conditions have so impaired the purchasing power of the natural consumers of farm products that "thousands and hundreds of thousands do not consume a sufficient amount of agricultural product to satisfy their rational wants." "Widely diffused prosperity," continued the learned professor, "will increase the consumption, even of staples like wheat, corn, and potatoes, and still more of products like meat and fruits of all kinds." Our readers will not fail to recognize a full endorsement of our arguments in criticism of the political twist given to the statistics of agriculture and the McKinley bill, in these contentions of Professor Ely. Nevertheless we do not believe that Professor Ely, this writer, or anybody else even suspects the actual extent to which the people of the poorer classes in this country are underfed. Farmers themselves, forced to eat what they cannot sell, are to a great extent underfed and insufficiently clothed, being also sorely overworked. Professor Ely is beyond question a very able and a very original thinker, who has already placed the people under lasting obligations for his very honest and very potent efforts in their behalf. In calling attention to the existence of natural monopolies were they were not suspected, and pointing out so forcbly as he has done the duty of government to control and administer them on behalf of the people, he has done the people and the institutions of this country a greater service than all the politicians since George Washington. We hear said much of "the scholar in politics." The mere scholar in politic, or in anything else except scholarship, amounts to naught. It is the thinker, not the scholar; or better. the scholar who is also a thinker, who is needed.

Such a one is Professor Ely, and such another is Hon. William S. Wilson. Reverting to the question in hand we say again what we have already said repeatedly. That the surplus products of agriculture are withheld from the hungry people and accumulated by speculators, in elevators, in order to force a rise by cornering the markets for the food supplies of the people. In the accomplishment of these villiainies, these millionaires, aided and abetted by the people's government perverted from its natural uses and functions by the politicians growing richer and richar, are soon to become billionaires: while the people starve and die in the midst of plenty which they, underfed and overworked, produce in vain. We say starve and die not as a mere extravagance of speech. How much the death rate, is increased among a populace overworked and underfed, and insufficiently clothed and unfitly housed, who shall say? Oh, ye speculators in the bread of the people. Millionaires, the most of you also thieves and plunderers of the needy and helpless! Oh, ye politicians, corrupt and venal, who pervert the people's government from its natural uses and functions, ye are those murderers who kill the poor, who have no covering from the cold, and whom their government has left defenceless.

Our Currency.

The Western Rual.

There is a very deep conspiracy against the people, underlying the strange policy of the government in the matter of keeping the treasury crammed with unused money and also under every scheme that may be proposed to get rid of it, except in payment of the public debt. It ought to be known by everybody that under the present financial influences which are exerted upon the general government the public debt never be paid and cannot be paid. If the United States had to-day money enough to pay off every dollar of its indebtedness the debt would not be paid, even if every bond was due. That would mean the end of every national bank, and who supposes that will the people of this country permit a few to run things to suit themselves, that the national banks will permit themselves to be wiped out of existence. Nor can we have them wiped out of existence, with no other legislation then we have. Our circulating medium is principally the national bank currency, We now have this incubus fastened upon us, and until we have new legislation, it is the best thing we can have.

We must have a circulating medium, and until we have a Congress that can see an inch beyond its nose, and consequently see that a bank note for which the government is responsible, might just as well be issued by the government direct, as to be first issued by it to a corporation, and then by the corporation to the public, we shall have nothing else to do than to submit to the, national bank system. Consequently as long as we elect a Congress that is thus stupid, we are virtually advocates of the perpetuation of the public debt. We must have money; except as to the comparatively few greenbacks in circulation the national currency is our principal circulating medium; hence we must have national banks, and hence we must have a national debt. That is the whole case in a nut shell. Every one of us who votes for a candidate for Congress who will not work and vote to put an end to this piece of financial stupidity, votes to perpetuate the debt. Many people do not understand this. But when the people clearly realize that the national debt is the basis of the national banking system, they will see what utter folly it is to advocate the system, unless they are among those who believe a public debt to be a public blessing.

We think, too, that many people permit themselves to be blinded in this matter by their prejudice against what is popularly called Greenbackism. They say they cannot be greenbackers. No one in advocating the abolishment of the national banking system asks them to be such except so far as they are already. Every man who champions the national banks as they now are is just as much an advocate of the government issuing our circulating medium as he would be if he advocated that it be issued directly by the government. The government is at the back of the national banking system. It guarantees the redemption of every bank bill in circulation. And what does it agree to redeem them with? Greenbacks. And it agrees to redeem the Greenbacks in coin. The holder of the bank note, therefore, can get gold or silver, if he perseveres. A more bungling system could not be very well devised. Is there any reason why this circulating medium should not be wholly greenbacks, and the government directly responsible as it is now indirectly, for their redemption, and be bound to redeem its paper without the holder first exchanging a bank note for a greenback—as is now likely to be the case—and then having to present the greenback for redemption? Certainly such a currency would be as sound as a currency could be, and all the banks we should have would be banks of deposit, depending upon their own credit for business. It must be remembered that the present national banking system is no safe-guard to depositors. If the bank fail, depositors have no claim upon the government. Hence a private bank is just as safe as a national bank, and the private banks of Chicago do just as large a business as any of the national banks.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk—ss. In Probate Court, Special Term, Nov. 13th, 1890.

In the matter of the estate of Olaf A. Wig, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Nels K. Anderson, administrator of the estate of Olaf A. Wig, deceased, representing, among other things, that he has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining and allowing the final account of his administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law.

It is ordered, that said account be examined, and petition heard, by this Court, on Tuesday, the 16th day of December, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office in the city of Crookston, in said county.

And it is further ordered, that notice thereof be given to all persons interested by publishing a copy of this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston, in said county.

Dated at Crookston, the 13th day of November, A. D. 1890.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post office, whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the payment.
2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made and then collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.
3. In suits for subscriptions, the suit may be instituted where the paper is published.
4. The Courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, while unpaid for, is prima facie evidence of intention to defraud.

ALMOST READY.

We have our list almost ready to begin sending out a statement of subscription account to those who are in arrears. While many of those have cheerfully responded to our request for settlement this fall, yet many have failed to do so—too many for one to carry over, and with a good crop and fairly good prices all should be able to make a settlement this fall, and we very much need the money due us. As an inducement for all in arrears to pay up now we will make this offer: To all who will pay up before January 15th, 1891, we will accept pay at the rate of $1.50—just the same as though paid in advance. That is, we will throw off fifty cents for each and every year that your subscription is in arrears. Let every one now make an effort to put his subscription ahead a year. We know you would do it if you understood thoroughly what a difference this makes to us. A list of 2,000 subscribers is not an easy matter for the average country newspaper to handle if each and every one should allow his subscripton to drag along a year or so. Many seem to appreciate this fact and have chipped in their little mite. We want to see every one do so, and this will furnish us with the wherewithal to make such a paper as we would like to. We are anxious to make several important improvements that we do not dare to go in debt for, and need not, if all would cheerfully pay up and one year in advance. Since we commenced upon our list very many have called and settled—we wish every one would, so that we should not be obliged to send out a single statement. That would be exceedingly pleasant for us. We do not like to go to that expense and trouble, but are obliged to unless the accounts are settled before.

REMEMBER YOUR FRIENDS.

That is one way for the Alliance to win recognition for the farmer. That is one of the strongest levers used by the monopolist and farmers can use it to excellent advantage. For instance, suppose they give their patronage only to such business houses as are in sympathy with and doing all they can to obtain a free and open wheat market? How long would it be before every business man would be on their side and support their cause? Crookston business men, in the last election showed that they are in sympathy with the object the alliance is striving to obtain by casting a good majority for the alliance candidate for governor. And they are showing their interest in the upbuilding of this country by selling their goods at as close figures as the same class of goods can be had anywhere. As a rule, they deserve the patronage of the people who need their help just as much as they do yours. The interests of the true business man and the farmer are wholly identical. Both are striving to make an honest profit and both are mutually interested in the upbuilding of the country. Working together they can make a grand success.

Every true friend of THE JOURNAL can help on the good cause by sending us one more subscriber. If every one should do this that would double our list and our opportunity for good. Try it, friends, and let us go into the next campaign with every man in Polk County on our list.

If any of our readers have failed to get satisfactory profits from horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, bees, fruits, grain or vegetables, they should commence at once and read every number of Farm, Stock and Home during the coming year. If ordered in connection with this paper its cost will not be felt.

A CRISIS.

Western Rural.

The election is over and the result is recorded. The people have protested against what they believed to be the injustice of the new tariff schedule and against the conditions which seemingly lead to less and less prosperity on the part of the masses. The farmer was the chief factor in the political revolution. He broke away from partizan restraint and voted, as he believed, in his own interests. As there are but two principal parties, the defeat of one is popularly regarded as the success of the other. But The Rural does not believe that such a landslide as that which occurred at the last election, means or was intended to mean the defeat or success of either of the great parties. It was simply an independent movement on the part of the people. Either party can win the approbation of the people if it will do the right thing by the people, and any political party that does not do that deserves defeat and oblivion. It is possible, too, that the people may have been misled in regard to some supposed causes of dissatisfaction. But they were not misled in regard to the general condition of affairs. They could not help knowing—for a bitter experience had taught them—that the great industry of agriculture was being ground into the dust, and it was pardonable for the farmer to strike in the hope of bettering his condition.

But the success of the farmer at the polls will have a tendency to produce a crisis in his affairs and especially his organizations—through which he was enabled to do what he did do at the election—if the men who have been elected by his vote are not exceedingly careful. The strongest chord that binds the average man is the chord of partisanship He is often a slave to party when he does not realize it. He may break away from party rule for the moment, but when the claims of party are made afterwards, he may readily go back to the ranks of the organization in which he has served so long and to him so pleasantly. Now the successful farmer candidates for our legislatures were elected partly by the votes of the farmers who belonged to the party which was opposed to that to which the candidate always belonged. These men of opposite political views were honestly independent at least in thousands of instances. They did not cherish the slightest thought that they were voting into power the party to which they had always been opposed. They voted, as they believed, for the best interests of the farming community. Already the popular claim that one party has succeeded and that the other has been defeated—made, as we have already said, because the people sort of take it for granted that the defeat of one party means the success of the other—is frightening a good many farmers who have always belonged to the defeated party and they are half regretting that they voted as they did. We are receiving many letters expressing the fear that the writers have been deceived; and if the men whom the independent farmer vote elected to office, follow the beck and call of either political party, the farmers' organization will probably be ruined and the farmers' movement put back many years. Whenever these farmer members of the Legislature have the balance of the power there will be no excuse whatever for permitting themselves to be tied to either party, like the tail to the kite. They can dictate the policy of the legislature of which they are members, and if they have the true interest of the farmer at heart they will do it.

Where United States Senators are to elected by such legislatures, these farmer members should demand the selection of their own candidate. Of course the senator will have to come from one party or the other but these independent members should insist that a man be selected who is in full sympathy with the farmer. That will give the farmers of all parties confidence in independent political movement and the farmers' organizations will grow more rapidly than they have ever grown, and instead of having a few real farmers in our legislature, with sympathy for their class, we shall in time have our legislatures largely composed of such men and our legislation will be greatly improved. A vast deal of responsibility rests upon the men who have been elected as independent candidates. It rests largely with them whether the farmers' movement shall continue to prosper or whether it shall stop just where it is.

What Kittel Halvorson Says.

In an interview with a P. P. reporter, Kittel Halvorson is made to say:

"My tendencies have always been toward the republican party, although I am not favorably inclined toward a high tariff. A time came when I deemed the question of prohibition superior to that of party politics, and I abandoned the republican party.

If I had been a member of the last congress I cannot now say whether or not I would have voted for the McKinley bill. I am not sufficiently acquainted with the McKinley bill to be able to state. I have heard a great deal about it, but I would like to study the measure more before deciding for or against it. If it increases the duties on imports I am opposed to it, and don't think I should have voted for it. The silver question I have not studied.

I am in favor of the proposition of the Federal government of loaning money to farmers at 2 per cent. interest. It would be of immense benefit to the farmers who have to pay exhorbitant rates of interest upon the money they borrow. I am also favorably inclined toward the sub-treasury scheme, which is that the Federal government establish storehouses throughout the country, where farmers can store their produce and receive in return a negotiable receipt or treasury note for the full market value of their produce. It would be a costly proceeding, however, and would require careful forethought. It is as fair a scheme as the present system of bonded warehouses for the benefit of the whisky dealers.

I also favor government control of railways, it has always been one of my favorite ideas. If we could have the civil service extended to include the railroads, it would, I think, be practicable; but it would be a great injury to the country if the government had control of the railroads and used them as a political machine, appointing the employes for political reasons. I think the civil service might very well be extended to the whole postal service.

As to the alliance party, I believe it has come to stay. I am extremely anxious to see the alliance, labor and prohibition parties all collected into one third party, having a common platform broad enough for all to stand upon. I shall do what I can to bring this about. It may prove an impossible task, but it is worth trying. I expect the matter will be brought up at the state alliance to be held in St. Paul on Dec. 3d.

I shall go down to Washington early next January and learn my way about. I need scarcely say that I go absolutely unpledged. If I cannot conscientiously enter into caucus with any party I find there, I shall remain out of any caucus. There is no reason I am aware of why I should not be able to participate in the alliance caucus, if such a thing is held. I occupy the peculiar position of being the first congressman who has been nominated by the prohibition party and been elected. The prohibitionists nominated me at their convention held after the alliance convention, not merely endorsing me, and I ran on both tickets."

No farmer in this county should fail to take his local paper and a least one agricultural journal. No matter how many papers he is now getting his list should not be considered complete if it does not contain the JOURNAL and the excellent agricultural paper, the Farm, Stock and Home, published at Minneapolis, Minn, both of which can be had one year for the small sum of $1,50.

The Alliance Programme.

Measures to Be Agitated to Relive the present Stringency.

St. Paul Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Congressman Pierce, of Tennessee, is the first of the Farmers' Alliance members to come to Washington. He says that he thinks the alliance intends to advocate measures calculated to loosen the stringency in money matters. They believe, he says, that the existing stringency should be relieved, and that congress has the power to do it. The sub-treasury, or something that will in effect accomplish the same end, will be urged, Mr. Pierce says, unless the tightness in money is relieved.

Minneapolis Times:—The politicians of the Fifth district seem to relish the result of the late election less than those in any other section of the state. The election of Kittle Halverson to congress over Hon. S. G. Comstock and Hon. A. J. Whiteman, was the last thing that the political seers of either party expected. The republicans feared that he might cut into Comstock's vote enough to elect Whiteman, and made their fight with that possibility in view, the democrats holding to the same opinion and encouraging Halverson's candidacy as much as possibility. Neither party, however, ever dreamed of the possibility of his election. It is well-known that Mr. Halverson hesitated for a long time before accepting the nomination of the alliance and a prominent Fifth district democrat is authority for the statement that he was on the point of withdrawing after Whiteman had been nominated by the democrats, and to prevent Whiteman advancing him a considerable sum of money, estimated at about $800, with which to defray the expenses of the campaign. At that time this was considered by all democrats a good investment, and one which would materially aid Whiteman in his canvass, if it kept Halvorson in the race. It was also claimed that Mr. Whiteman fully expected to be elected, and that he expended an immense amount of money in conducting his canvass, which was probably the most thorough ever made by a democrat in the Fifth district. There was one circumstance about Mr. Whiteman's campaign which was unfortunate, and that was that it was not in thorough harmony with the state campaign. The democratic state central committee never felt satisfied that Mr. Whiteman took as much interest in the success of the democratic party as he ought to have done. Some of the members went so far as to charge him with willful neglect of the interests of the state ticket and with being responsible for the defeat of Judge Wilson by sacrificing the interests of the party as a whole at the altar of his own ambition.

Large and Small Farms.

American Farmer.

The relative profit of large and small farms, says the National Stockman and Farmer, is one of the matters which bids fair to never be thoroughly settled to the satisfaction of everybody. Like the question of deep and shallow plowing, and the best time to spread manure, this is likely to continue to be "vexed." Some of our readers are now discussing it in the Stockman, and with the usual nonclusive result, except so far as defining for each more clearly than before the outcome of own experience and observation. In theory it looks as though if a small farm could be made to pay a large one, with the same outfit of tools, the same management, and the same main buildings to be kept up, would still pay better; and with many men of excellent executive ability it undoubtedly does. On the other hand the smaller farm ought to be and certainly can be better tilled, and is usually made more productive per acre, giving an increased product in proportion to the amount of capital invested, besides requiring less taxes, fencing, etc. The popular idea seems to be that "a little farm well tilled" is about the thing.

We wish every farmer in this county would become a reader of Farm, Stock and Home. Taken in connection with this paper its cost is nominal.

Wm. N. Hanna and Miss Mary Milne were married on Thanksgiving Day at the residence of the bride's parents in Duluth. They were both formerly residents of this city.

A very enjoyable feast was that at the Baptist church on Thanksgiving Day. A large company partook of the many good things and all seemed to enjoy the event hugely.

W. E. Slocum returned from a sad trip to Charles City, Iowa, last week, where he had been summoned to the sick bed of his brother, who died and was buried before W. E. returned.

Among the distinguished strangers in attendance at the Pearl of Savoy, on Friday evening we noticed John Kops, of Grand Forks, A. Gilmour, of McIntosh, and Frank Gravel's jolly laugh.

Mrs. E. E. Bangs desires her lady friends to know that she is better than ever prepared to attend to their wants in millinery and invites their attention to her fine stock. Call at her store on Second street.

John E. Tice was down from Mentor on Tuesday on business connected with the estate of the late Geo. W. Tice. John says that wheat pans out well in his neighborhood and is an extra fine sample.

Sweet potatoes at Sture's.

If every one will take hold with the immigration committee and help along the good work much can be done toward bringing in good farmers to settle upon our fertile acres that are at present unused.

The Grand Jury on Tuesday brought in an indictment against Horace Russell for murder in the first degree. Russell has till Friday to plead or demur. The case may not be taken up inside of two weeks.

A traveling man says: "I have been all over the southern and western states and if I had any money to invest I would rather put it into the farming lands of the Red River Valley than any place else."

Go to Sture's for choice sweet potatoes.

Wheat took an upward tendency after Thanksgiving Day, reaching $1, but falling off one cent on Saturday. It commenced the month with a stronger tendency, but dropped three cents on Wednesday.

A. Sture will pay the highest price for eggs, oats and potatoes. Call and see him if you have a surplus of these articles.

From tillage to market Farm, Stock and Home suggests, directs, cautions and aids the farmer more than any other agricultural paper we know of. We can send it and the JOURNAL one year for only $1,50.

Joseph Murphy was up from Edna this week and dropped in to see THE JOURNAL man and set that little subscription ahead a peg. He says Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Herriott will spend the winter in the east and may remove there.

Farmers, I have had experience enough in your business to know your requirements in merchandise and am prepared to meet them all in the kind, quality and price you desire. Call at Sture's store and see what I can do for you. A. STURE.

Several of the stores in the new Opera Block have been engaged already and will be occupied as soon as completed. This block will be one of the most desirable in the city owing to the steam heating apparatus and other improvements.

Joseph Brewster, of Fisher, gave THE JOURNAL a pleasant call on Tuesday. He has a lot of fine stock out at Lambert and will go out there to winter them, and says he must have THE JOURNAL with him in order to keep posted up.

Pure apple cider at Sture's.

P. J. Russel, whose card appears in this issue, is one of our rising young attorneys. Faith, he is a rustler—and that is no pun, either. If you must have anything to do with the law try P. J. a whack, and if it is collecting you are after sure he is the lad for yees.

The Breeders' Gazette, the leading stock paper in the United States, will issue a handsome Christmas number. It will be ready for distribution Dec 17th. Send 20 cents for postage and get this elegant number. Address the J. H. Sanders Publishing Co., 226 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

N. S. Gervais went down to St. Paul last week to select the carpets and furniture for the new Odd Fellow's Hall, and that it will be nobby goes without saying, with such a master hand to make the selection. As a side issue he laid in a supply for the mammoth dry goods house over which he presides.

A. Holmboe was united for life to Miss Julia Narveson, at the residence of the bride's parents, in Erskine, on Thanksgiving Day, by the Rev. C. Saugstad. Mr. H. is one of Crookston's prominent merchants and the bride is not unknown to Crookston society people. THE JOURNAL adds its blessing.

The current number of Farm, Stock and Home Minneapolis, Minn. should be read by every farmer in the State. In fact, for a farmer to miss reading any number of that excellent journal is a misfortune which he can escape almost without money and without price, by taking it in connection with the JOURNAL.

The Fisher Bulletin goes into the hands of the great newspaper absorber—Bierly, of Grand Forks, and will now be a Grand Forks newspaper. You can hardly tell tother from which between that and the G. F. News and the E. G. F. do., as like as peas in the same pod. Col. Starr will wield the editorial quill, and the Col. is an experienced hand.

By its effective efforts in behalf of the agricultural interests of the Northwest, during the past six years, Farm, Stock and Home, of Minneapolis, Minn, has gained a position and influence equalled by no other paper. We will send it and the JOURNAL. One year for $1,50. Sample copies may be seen at this office.

Judge Mills and his stenographer arrived on Monday morning ready to open court promptly at 10 o'clock. There are many cases on the calendar but few seem to be ready for trial. The criminal cases, however, will probably be on deck at this term. The most important of these is the trial of Horace Russell for the murder of Dr. Bonnsen

Hon. H. Steenerson took a flying trip to St. Paul last week, returning on Saturday. He has many cases in the present term of court, many of them very important ones. The railroad crossing case, wherein the relatives of Anton Mikelson sue the Great Northern for damages, is liable to go over to the extra term in January, if, indeed, it is not settled before.

The president of Crookston allince No. 648, desires THE JOURNAL to give notice of the regular meeting which occurs at the hall on Saturday next, Dec. 6th. One delegate and one alternate will be elected to attend the regular meeting at St. Paul on Dec. 30th, and other business of importance will come before the meeting. A full attendance is desired.

Miss Gage, as an emotional actress, is excellent. Thanksgiving evening quite a large audience gathered to listen to "Camille." On Friday evening "The Pearl of Savoy" was rendered and on Saturday "Mr. Barnes, of New York." Mr. Barnes, of Crookston, continues to sell groceries just as cheaply all the same. The company as a whole is a good one and we should like to see it in the new Opera House.

Those little statements will show you how your account with THE JOURNAL stands. The manner in which you meet them will show how much in earnest you are to obtain a free and open wheat market. We are sure that all who earnestly desire the prosperity of the farmers will take these statements in the spirit in which they are sent, and will do all they can for THE JOURNAL that has labored so long and faithfully for them.

Which is why Dept. Auditor Cornelius appeared on our streets early on Monday morning clad in a bright smile that defied zero weather—born, on Saturday evening, Nov. 29th, 1890, to Mr. and Mrs. Mathias Cornelius, a ten pound boy. Mat was industriously circulating the cigars among the late candidates on the republican county ticket while they sang: "Oh, we'll never mind the weather, and we'll take defeat together," &c.

Powers Bros. mammoth wholesale dry goods house in St. Paul caught fire on Thanksgiving Day, resulting in a loss estimated between $150,000 and $200,000 fully insured. A. G. Gallasch, formerly of the firm of Hack & Gallasch, had recently bought an interest in Powers Bros. establishment. Mr. G. was in this city at the time and the first he heard of the affair was through the St. Paul Daily News, which published the only account of it on the day it occurred.

One of tinner Layman's little boys did not go hunting on Thanksgiving Day—but his father did—for a doctor to patch him up. THE JOURNAL informant says several boys, among them the Layman boy, planned a heap big hunt; one of the boys had the shot in his pocket and the Layman boy had the powder in his; also some matches. The boys got to scuffling igniting one of the matches in the powder magazine and—well, the boys gave up the hunt and the Layman boy is recovering.

Coroner Shepard was summoned to East Grand Forks on Monday to hold an inquest on the body of Billy Blair, who died suddenly on Sunday morning. Mr. Shepard was told that Blair entered a saloon on Sunday morning and called for a drink. He was told that no liquor was sold at that shop on Sunday and he went into an adjoining room and sat down at a table. Directly somebody went into the room and the discovery was made that Blair was dead. The jury came to the conclusion that it was heart disease that ailed him.

We expect to have our subscription statements ready to send out by Friday or Saturday of this week. We trust that every one who gets one will do his best to send in the small amount due as promptly as possible as a little help now will be of great service to THE JOURNAL. If our friends could be in our place awhile they would be better prepared to appreciate the situation than perhaps they are. We have several hundred subscriptions in arrears two and three years—a few even longer, and the aggregate is more than we can well carry.

Polk County Alliance.

President Swift notifies us that a meeting of Polk County Alliance has been called for Friday, Dec. 26th, at the Court House in Crookston. No doubt the secretary will notify each sub-alliance, as to delegates. Among other matters a delegate and an alternate is to be elected to the annual State meeting at St. Paul on Dec. 30th.

A Sudden Death.

Alexander Finlayson went from his home in this city to his farm near Angus last Friday in apparently good health. On Saturday morning a neighbor called and seeing no one around the premises went into the house where he found Mr. F. in a stupor. A doctor was summoned but all to no purpose as he never rallied and died about 2 o'clock Sabbath morning. THE JOURNAL is informed that Mr. F. had been in poor health and was in the habit of taking laudanum, and it is thought he took an overdose by mistake. The body was brought to this city for burial on Monday. Mr. F. leaves a wife and children in very good circumstances, financially considered.

How He Fooled 'Em.

Pete Cornelius was down one day last week with a two year old colt which got 'em all. He had weighed the animal on Cowing's scales, and of course had the weight down pat. Not long after he had weighed the colt he struck a fellow who wanted to bet on her weight and put the figures at 900; another "good judge" of horses came along just then and raised it 50, and so on, until a dozen or so had guessed for cigars and so on, when they went over to Collins' scales where the colt kicked the beam at 1,250. Everybody was fooled on that colt and Pete won heap big smoke.

Farmer Geo. McManus says: "I find it pays to ship my wheat. I can beat prices given by home buyers from five to twenty cents per bushel. Next year I shall raise more barley than wheat. I shall sow 700 acres to barley."

S. M. McKee returned from Michigan on Saturday with 56 thoroughbred Shropshire sheep, among the number being one ram that took the sweepstakes prize, with the noted Shropshire rams Astral and Proud Victor competing. He is valued at $800. Forty-one of the flock Mr. McKee bought were ewes and he has sold all but 15 of them already. He has a number of choice thoroughbred rams yet for sale. He got caught in the wreck of freight trains at Ada, but fortunately the car he was in was not broken up, though it was sandwiched between two that were badly wrecked.

Remember that the well known traveler and lecturer, C. E. Bolton, will be here the 16th and 17th of this month. His lectures and stereopticon views are most highly spoken of by those who have attended his entertainments. As for instance, the Hon. W. G. Northrop, L. L. D., of Connecticut, says of him: "The lecture was given without notes, in an easy, terse and and felicitous style, and commanded the closest attention of four thousand people." Profits of lectures to go towards the support of the reading room, for which purpose funds are at present much needed.

Owing to the unpropitious condition of our markets for the past two or three years we have sent out no statements to farmers, allowing them to pay their subscriptions when they felt able. Owing to this fact, doubtless, we have many on our list who are several years in arrears, so many that it becomes a very heavy burden upon one to carry. This fall we need money to carry on our business and we are going to ask our friends for it. In a few days we shall send to each one who is in arrears a statement of his subscription account and we hope that each will appreciate our leniency in the past and do all he can for us now that we need his help. THE JOURNAL has ever labored faithfully to aid its friends, for the upbuilding of the country and for a free and open wheat market, and will continue so to do in the future. Let us have your earnest assistance, friends, in the good work.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found an article from the Hallock Enterprise giving an account of the organization of an immigration society. This organization can be the means of doing much good if it goes to work in the right way. One of the greatest needs of this country is people enough to cultivate the hundreds of fertile acres now lying idle, and there are hundreds of farmers east who need these same cheap lands. If the proper steps be taken this new society can be the means of much good, not only to this country, but to the hundreds it can bring here. The character of the men who compose the society augurs well for the success of the undertaking, as they are among our leading business men, those who are ever alive to the best interests of the country. If every citizen will take hold with the committee much good can be accomplished.

The Queen's Latest Offer.

A Free Education or One Year's Travel in Europe.

In the Queen's "Word Contest," which the publishers of that magazine announce as the last one they will ever offer, a free education, consisting of a three years' course in any Canadian or American Seminary of College, including all expenses, tuition and board, to be paid by the publishers of The Queen, or one year abroad, consisting of one entire year's travel in Europe, all expenses to be paid, will be given to the person sending them the largest list of words made from the text which is announced in the last issue of The Queen. A special deposit of $750 has been made in The Dominion Bank of Canada, to carry out this offer. Many other useful and valuable prizes will be awarded in order of merit. The publishers of The Queen have made their popular family magazine famous throughout both Canada and the United States by the liberal prizes given in their previous competitions, and as this will positively be the last one offered, they intend to make it excel all others as regards the value of the prizes. Send six two cent U. S. stamps for copy of The Queen containing the text, complete rules and list of prizes. Address The Canadian Queen, Toronto, Canada. [33-40]

Old But Frisky.

Western Rural.

Mr. Jay Gould is aging. The richest man in America—and about the most useless one—having arrived at that age when it might be supposed that he would be quiet, he has been shaking up Wall street, committing some more robberies and making some money. Gould has been pretty quiet of late years. He thought he was about to die at one time and he was about the most scared man to be found in ten States That is not to be wondered at, if he believes in a future judgment. If Jay Gould ever expects to stand before a judgment bar, where men are judged according to the deeds done in the body, he must dread the ordeal. But he is evidently feeling better physically, and is sufficiently healthy to go into Wall street and run down the stock of the Union Pacific railroad, gobble all that was necessary to give him control of the road, and retire with the chief desire of his later life satisfied. He has long wanted to form a great railroad trust. Already having control of the Santa Fe road, he now has the Union Pacific under his thumb.

Just what he will do remains to be seen, but he will make a pile of money whatever he may do. His usual course is to bankrupt the road he secures control of and having pocketed all there is in it, let it slide into the hands of a receiver. This fleeces the stockholders. In this instance he may maintain a monopoly, and that will fleece the public. Somebody is dead sure to get robbed when Jay Gould lets himself loose. But government is at fault, clearly at fault, if it permits this financial free booter to rob the public. The law should give the government such absolute control of railroads, as that such a result would be impossible. But if we ever have such a law we must look to the great, powerful farming community to give it to us. Then onward with the work of organization among farmers, until through the farmers' vote the right shall prevail and the speculative kleptomaniacs shall be powerless for harm.

Agricultural Depression.

Prairie Farmer,

A. L. Crosby undertakes to say one of the farmer's troubles is not due to the manner of grading farm products in the wholesale markets. He talks like a stock yards man whom I know. We will admit that there is a very great difference in the quality of animals, of butter, etc, but we know that and Mr. Crosby knows there is no such difference as to justify the difference betwen $1 and $5.25 per hundred for any cattle that should go to market. If any animal is not worth more than $1 per 100 lbs at the stock yards, Chicago, what must be the price given the farmer after paying drovers and railway charges? Evidently not 50 cents on the farm. Therefore it were better that the farmers shoot and bury the stock. We ask: Why so many grades and why so great a difference in the price of $1 per 100 lbs, is all that the farmers should submit to. As for the grade of hogs mentioned on sale about Oct. 1st that brought but $4.20 as against the best grade bringing $4,95, we expect that there was no such difference, as the product would sell alike as pork in the barrel and as lard. They were good lard hogs—the weights being considerable more than 400 lbs average to the hog. We spoke of government inspectors of live stock and meats and that they should grade and the prices be fixed to grade. The difference in prices we repeat should not vary for 100 lbs.more than $1, and for the most part not one half that. A stop should be put to the grading down of the price by the backers and butchers who are now prospering beyond all reason, the laments of Armour and others to the contrary notwithstanding. When a man can begin from a very small butcher 50 or 25 years ago and now be able to slaughter 1,405,000 hogs, 650,000 cattle and 350,000 sheep per year, employing 7,000 persons, equipping 1,800 refrigerator cars, covering 50 acres of land with builbings with 140 acres of floor room, paying employes $3,500,000, with aggregate sales of 65,000,000, he must have made some money in the business. It is little wonder that those engaged in this live stock and this slaughter business are able, after having made the prices on the farmers for their cattle, hogs, sheep, such as have made the most of them now millionaires, it is no wonder, we repeat, that they want to continue the same methods and are preparing to increase, and do increase their their places of slaughter from year to year. Mr. Crosby says that the farmers must write and work harmoniously together, as do those in other interests that now have the whiphand of the farmer. This your correspondent has urged repeatedly and has asked help of the press generally, and our agricultural press particularly, to advocate some sort of an organization that will do this. Can we not and shall we not have the power of all our agricultural papers—all the press in fact—to agitate the question till it honorably settled?

Kendall Co., Ill. J. M. GALE

Low Prices

Western Rural.

The farm machinery men have now made a combination, for the purpose, it is stated, of lessening expenses, and lowering the price of farm machinery. It is the old excuse for the formation of trusts. Every time a combination of this kind is made, we are told that prices will lower; and every time prices are raised. The coal men combined "to keep prices down," but somehow prices get away from the benevolent gentlemen who express such anxiety for the poor public, and leap upward. There is one part of human nature that is conspicuous, and that is when it has power in its hands, it will exercise that power to the fullest. Establish a monopoly and it will bleed the public unmercifully. It always has done so, and until the millennium comes it always will. Competition in business is the only protection from robbery that the people have; and it was only when combinations and trusts and other forms of concentrated capital became common, that our people became the victims of a vast business conspiracy to plunder, and the prosperity of the masses began to decline.

And now comes these farm machinery men with a scheme to put an end to competition in their business and establish a gigantic monopoly. No sensible man believes for one moment that they will sell machinary for a less price. No sensible man believes for one moment that they have the slightest intention of doing it. The modus operandi of all such enterprises is to cut down expenses and raise prices. But we desire to call the attention of law officers and the public generally to the fact that any attempt to prevent competition is a violation of the common law which is as old as the law itself. It will do no harm, however, four our legislatures to supplement the common law and to make such conspiracies so plainly a penitentiary offense that it will be less popular to commit it.

Join Our People and Say on With The Dance,—An Immigration Bureau Fomed at Stephen.

Kittson County Enterprise,

On Wednesday last the Red River Valley was well represented at Stephen in convention assembled for the purpose of taking steps regarding securing immigration to this vally. At 10:30 a m. the convention was called to order by M. R. Brown of Crookston, who was made chairman. H. Smith of Marshall and E. H. Love of Kittson were elected secretaries. The Great Northern was represented by M. Folson of passenger department and Mr. Jarvis the immigration agent and Newall of the frieght department. Facts were discussed, pro and con, and finally a committee of two from each of the counties of Polk, Marshall and Kittion and one at large, were chosen as follows to draft resolutions. Chair appointed the following: Polk, E. Ellington, E. D. Childs. Marshall L. Lamberson, O. L. Melgaard. Kittson, H. W. Donaldson, Ed. H. Love and M. Folson of the Great Northern. Convention then adjourned until afternoon, that the committee might report. 1,30 p. m. convention called and committee on resolution reported as follows:

Resolved, That a permanent board of Immigration should be organized by this convention to be known as the board of Immigration of the Red River Valley of Minnesota. Said board to consist of three members, to be chosen from each county, and one at large, from the Red River Valley and subdivided into committees on Ways and Means and Finance, legislation on Railways, and Railway Aid.

That said Board shall have full power to act upon the lines expressed by those who have addressed this convention. i. e., to work in concert with the Great Northern Railway Company to secure immigration to this valley.

That when this convention adjourns it shall be to a certain fixed date when they shall receive the report of the Board of immigration and take such action as they may deem wise and proper.

After report of committee the three counties represented were aske to place in nomination members for the Board of Immigration. Polk county elected E. D. Childs, E. Ellington and C. O. Christianson. Marshall county J. P. Lundin, L. Lockridge, H. L. Melgaard. Kittson county, Ed. H. Love, H. W. Donaldson, C. J. McCollom. The Board was elected to serve one year.

After considerable discussion the convention adjourned, then the Board met and elected officers as follows:

President, M. R. Brown of Polk county. Secretary, Ed. H. Love of Kittson county. Assistant secretary, C. O. Christianson of Polk. Treasurer, H. L. Melgaard of Marshall.

Committee on ways and means and finance, E. D. Childs, C. J. McCollom and L. Lockridge.

Committee on Legislation, E. Ellington, H. L. Melgaard, Ed. H. Love.

On Railways and Railway Aid, H. W. Donaldson, M. R. Brown, J. J. Lundin.

Board then adjourned. Work will commence at once, and the different committees will begin concerted action in every department and the next two years will see the grantest influx of immigration ever seen in the west. Our time to-day will not permit our giving minute details, but in the future we will take pleasure in keeping our readers posted.

The McKinley Bill's Change.

Duluth Tribune.

A great many staunch protectionists scout the idea of an immediate effort to amend the McKinley bill, and say, "give the bill a chance and see what it will accomplish." That may be a good doctrine for many features of the bill, but the people have practically declared themselves against this measure. Their declaration will have the effect of preventing the McKinley bill from doing the good it might, because capitalists are going to be very much more cautious about putting their money into enterprises which depend upon the McKinley bill to make them profitable investments, than if the Republican party had wont or had sustained merely the usual off year defeat. But a disaster which is so sweeping that it threatens the supremacy of the Republican party in the senate, which was supposed to be perfectly safe for ten years, will be interpreted by capital as something ominous to all these provisions of the McKinley bill which impose new or higher duties, if not to the principle of high protection itself. The landslide will reduce the grouth of new manufacturing enterprises in a good degree. It will be seen every where that enterprises projected before election in good faith, will be abandoned.

The Republican party cannot afford to wait to see what will be the effects of the McKinley bill. The more obnoxious provisions of it should be amended at once. Everybody knows that the burdens of the tin tariff will be felt by the people from now until 1892 and that the good it will accomplish in two years will be imperceptible. It is not probable that there will be 5,000 men engaged in mining tin ore and manufacturing tin plate in '92, and pray of what value will that "great industry" be to the millions of people who have been paying higher prices since last October? The tin tariff alone, in a close fight, is amply sufficient to defeat the party which passed it and insists that it shall stand. This clause of the McKinley bill and those which raise the price of articles of clothing and bedding should be asked to stay not upon the order of their going but to go at once. A party which has an intelligent people to deal with, after making a false movement, should take the back track at the first possible moment. What is to be gained by perseverence in error?

The Great Family Newspaper.

The National Tribune

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The National Tribune aims to be the greatest family newspaper in the United States. It has the FINEST ARRAY OF CONTRIBUTORS in the country, and gives MORE ORIGINAL READING MATTER, of the best quality, than any other great weekly. Among its present special features are:

"The Fuel Beams," a vividly interesting novel by George Alfred Townsend. (Now running.)

Recollections of the Great Men of the War Period, by Maj-Gen. John Pope.

"Real Russia," a study of the great Empire of the Czar, by Col. Augustus Buell.

"War History," by men who actually saw and did what they write about. It makes a specialty of this, and the contributions to its columns by the men in every rank and degree who did the marching, digging and shooting and carried forward the war through all its various phases to a glorious success, make the only genuine history of the war.

It makes a specialty of

G. A. R. NEWS,
W. R. C. NEWS,
SONS OF VETERANS NEWS.

Besides, it has "Health Hints," by Prof. Felix L. Oswald; studies of "The Weather," by Lieut. John P. Finley, of the Signal Service; "Loyal Homeworkers," by Mrs. Kate B. Sherwood; short stories by authors of distinguished ability, sketches of Travel and Adventure by Army and Naval Officers, Answers tor Correspondents, Synopsis of the News of the Week. Abstract of the Proceedings of Congress, and

WASHINGTON GOSSIP.

It makes a special feature of matters of matters of interest at the National Capital, and gives a weekly budget of entertaining gossip about men and things at the seat of Government.

Besides this it presents every week a splendid arrray of Editorials on Current Topics—Stories by the Best Authors—Wit, Humor and Information—Agricultural Notes of the Greatest Value—Household Hints and Suggestions—Synopsis of the News of the Week—Answers to Correspondents—Bright Miscellany, etc, which will interest, amuse and instruct every member of the family.

THE ISSUE.

The National Economist.

A very exciting political campaign has just closed. It is remarkable for the great prevalence of discussion upon economic questions. Being what is usually termed "an off political year," because it is not attended with a presidential election, it has differed in a marked degree from such years since the days of Calhoun, Clay and Webster. An era seems to be dawning in which great political questions shall again be brought to the front in the politics of the country, and it remains to be seen whether the times will also develop great intellectual giants to grapple with them. Beyond a doubt men will always be found who are equal to the occasion. The universal discussion of economics now so prevalent among the masses must result in the near future in the presentation to public service of a crop of statesmen in fact, who will be too devoted to great principles to be mercenary or partisan.

One of the most potent factors in developing the new conditions that have marked this campaign has been an issue, a real, live and burning issue based on principles of ultimate truth. True, the issue has not been universally joined, but it has been generally recognized. As a rule professional politicians have denied the existence of any issue except such as they claim exists between the two parties, and have sought to dodge the issue presented them by the farmers in every conceivable way. They have spared no pains in a futile effort to show that the great farmers' reform movement was a partisan political effort in disguise. They have slandered and falsified the officers of the National Farmers Alliance both personally and officially. They have misquoted misconstrued and misrepresented everything said in favor of this true and living issue presented by the farmers. Still, it has marched steadily and triumphantly on to a recognition. What folly to attempt to down a living issue by a wave of the hand. How silly to trv to kill it by ridicule, or destroy it by an effort to arouse partisan prejudice.

Now that the election is over the complete failure of all efforts to cover up or destroy the true issue will become very apparent. The partisan zeal so rife during the heat of the conflict is based on prejudice, and must cool as soon as the question is decided, but the great issue is developed to greater strength and effort as effectually by opposition and temporary defeat as by success. It is time that the politicians and the country at large became aroused and conscious of the fact that the farmers are presenting a great issue based on economic truth, and that in defense of it they are and will be utterly oblivious of men and places, position or power. If they happen to present the standard bearer in some local or State political contest who will support their issue, and are defeated, it only beats the man and has no effect on the movement or the issue, except to strengthen their devotion or determination. On the other hand, a political success will not so intoxicate them with the flush of victory, like politicians, would yield all principles in a platform and by a skillful use of words seek to make it conform to the wishes of everybody. Defeat in this election is received by the farmers with the same apparent unconcern that marks their reception of tidings of success. No demonstration. A more determined look may indicate, either that the same battle shall be whipped next time; or it may indicate, now that the battle is whipped here, it must be pushed into new fields. That is the sum total of the effect upon the farmers' movement of succees or failure in this election.

There is of course a faction that will from choice remain blind to these great facts, but the general public, including that great class of intelligent, conservative, thinking and honest people, composed largely of laboring men, professional men and those engaged in commerce, transportation and manufacture, who truly sympathise with the farmer in all laudable efforts, should early be brought to a recognition of the fact that he is battling for a great issue that will benefit them as much as him in the long run.

HOW TO READ.

"Read not to criticise and confute nor to believe and take for granted, but to weigh and consider."

We wish to submit for your examination a work, giving a full history of a great remedial agent, describing its mode of action and stating its results. In reading this work, we shall be greatly pleased to have you follow the advice of Lord Bacon, as given above. We shall present the claims of the compound Oxygen Treatment of Drs. Starkey & Palen as a great vitalizing and remedial agent. We shall furnish abundant evidence, and, after you have carefully weighed and considered, shall await your decision with confidence.

Drs. Starkey & Palen—I have ordered your Compound Oxygen Treatment for quite a number of my patients.

They have all been greatly benefited, most of them entirely cured. The last patient, for whom I ordered the Compound Oxygen, is improving fast.

E. L. PATRICK, M. D.

Hill View, Warren Co., N. Y., Aug. 2 1889.

The work referred to is a treatise on Compound Oxygen, its nature, mode of action, history, discovery and results, with numerous testimonials from patients who have been cured of various chronic ailments.

This work is mailed free, 200 pages. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch street Philada., Pa.

CROOKSTON BUSINESS COLLEGE AND INSTITUTE OF SHORTHAND.

TEACHING FOREIGNERS.

A Business College has great advantages over other schools for teaching Germans Scandinavians and other foreigners.

Of course, business is done in this country very differently from the way it is done in the old country, and a young man who has been in America only a few years cannot understand what is needed in business here, unless somebody teaches him. If he goes into a store, no one there has the time to teach him. So the best place to learn how business is done is in a college.

In our school he can learn how to read and write the English language correctly, and prepare himself to conduct his own business affairs successfully.

Our teachers will do all they can to help along those who do not know our language very well, and every student receives personal, and individual instruction.

Our foreign students generally make as good progress as our American students.

There is a great demand in business for young men who can speak the German or Scandinavian languages, so our foreign students have no trouble in getting work when they finish our course of study.

U. S. LAND OFFICE.
Crookston, Minn., Nov. 5th, 1890.

Complaint having been entered at this office by August Kilmann against Amasa Stewart Thompson, for failure to comply with law as to timber-culture entry No. 2,764, dated Sept. 25th, 1882, upon the e½ sw¼ and lots 6 and 7, Section 6. Township 147, Range 46, in Polk County, Minnesota, with a view to the cancellation of said entry; contestant alleging that the said Amasa Stewart Thompson and his heirs have wholly failed to break, cultivate or plant to trees, tree seeds or cuttings any of said land since date of entry, and that there are now no trees, tree seeds or cuttings standing or growing thereon except about 40 acres of natural growth of small poplar and willows, the said parties are hereby summoned to appear at this office on the 29th day of December, 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m., to respond and furnish testimony concerning said alleged failure.

[30-35] H. H. DICKMANN, Register.

Didn't Understand it.

Saint Paul Pioneer Press.

Some of our Republican friends are trying hard to persuade themselves and others that the McKinley bill had nothing to do with the recent political revolution in this country—or, if it had, that it was only because it was misrepresented, or because the people had not yet had time to experience its benefi It was the Republican stay-at-homes who did it, according to the New York Tribune. But why did stay they at home? If they believed in the sort of protection which that measure provided, they surely had every incentive to come out of their holes and defend it against the fierce onslaughts of its enemies. It was the one vital issue of the contest. Why was it, then, that they did not raise a hand to defend it? Why was it that they took so little interest in it that they would not even take the trouble to sustain by their ballots the men that vote for it? There is but one possible answer to these questions. They did not vote to sustain the policy of their party in this regard because they did not believe it right or wise. The Republicans who abstained from voting practically voted "No" upon the McKinley bill.

Nor will the theory wash any better that the defeat of four out of five of the Republicans congressmen of Minnesota and the election of the fifth by a bare plurality was due to the fact that the people did not understand the McKinley bill. They understood, at least, this much about it. That it was not such a revision of the tariff as they had been repeatedly promised by the Republican leaders; that instead of reducing duties, except on articles like sugar, which are not produced in this country to any extent, it raised them on a great variety of articles in common consumption. They understood, too the general principle on which the bil was framed, which was to make the duties so high as to prevent any foreign competition with the American manufacturer, and to give the latter a practical monopoly of the American market. They understood that this meant that the home manufacturer could thus virtually make his prices what he pleased; and experience had proved that he was quite sure to avail himself of this embargo on foreign competiton by combining with his fellows in the same line of business to do away with all domestic competition. This much, at least, was well known by all Republican voters of ordinary intelligence; and it was not their understanding of the Republican theory of protection. They had been long educated to believe that the protection advocated by the Republican party was not intended to prohibit the competition of the foreigner, but to restrain it by a duty sufficient to equalize the cost of domestic and foreign production, and to admit it above that level as a means of keeping prices within moderate limits, and of preventing extortionate combination". This is the general understanding among the Republicans of Minnesota as to what protection means, as their state and district platforms through a long series of years make evident. We believe this to be the view of Republicans generally throughout the Northwest. So it will not do to tell us that the Republicans of the Northwest refused to sanction the McKinley bill because they did not understand it. They knew that it was not the sort of protection they had been promised and which they wanted.

TREATMENT BY INHALATION.

For Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Dyspepsia, Catarrh, Hay Fever, Headache, Debility, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Chronic or Nervous Disorders.

"The original and only genuine Compound Oxygen Treatment." Drs. Starkey & Palen have been using for the last twenty years. is a scientific adjustment of the elements of oxygen and nitrogen magnetized, and the compound is so condensed and made portable that it is sent all over the world.

Drs. Starkey & Palen's office records show over 50,000 cases in which their original (and only genuine) Compound Oxygen Treatment has been used by physicians in their practice, and by invalids independently. Over 1,000 physicians and more than 50,000 invalids.

"Compound Oxygen—Its Mode of Action and Results," is the title of a new brochure of two hundred pages, published by Drs. Starkey and Palen, which gives to all inquirers full information as to this remarkable curative agent and a record of several hundred surprising cures in a wide range of chronic cases—many of them after being abandoned to die by other physicians. Northwestern Lumberman.

The addition of 100,000 acres white pine lands of Minneasota is an event which will be of great interest to the lumbermen, not only of that state, but of the northwest generally. There are not many large tracts of pine remaining in government hands, and it is not any every-day affair to but them direct from Uncle Sam at a low figure. The recent act of congress in February for the opening of the Red Lake Indian reservation in Northern Minnesota will throw on the market at an early day, a rich and extended body of pine and hardwood timber, advantageously located near railroad and water facilities, easy of access, and specially desirable, because it is situated at the watermost extremity of the great white pine belt of Michigan. Wisconsin and Minnesota. The demand for it will come from the west, and demand, already large, is increasing daily, and will be sufficient to make an ample market for years to come.

The Red Lake reservation is a large tract of land in northern Minnesota, nearly a parallellogram in form, running northeast and southwest, with an extreme length of about 150 miles and a nearly constant breadth of about 80 miles. On north it is bounded by the lake of the woods and Rainy river, the dividing line between Canada and the United States. The soil and timber vary greatly in the different portions. The northern half which is low and often swampy is covered by immense tracts of white cedar of excellent quality tamarack and arbor vitae. This will soon become easily accessible by a line of railroad, which was recently projected, and is now in process of construction from Duluth to Winnipeg. This road will run between Cass and Winnebigoshish lakes through pine lands and fertile territory, and then directly northwest to Winnipeg, tuching the northeast corner of Red Lake, and the enterprising projectors propose to compleate it this fall.

The southern half of the reservation is much the more fertile, consisting of rolling land with innumerable little lakes and streams, and contains nearly all the pine timber. In its midst is Red Lake, a beautiful body of water, consisting really of two lakes united by a narrow shallow strait, altogether making a body in shape something like a gigantic dumb-bell. The greatest length of the two lakes is about 40 miles and the breadth nearly the same.

Along the southern edge the shore is a bordered with high bluffs, generally covered with hardwood timber, extending also up the eastern coast. Numerous streams cut through these highlands and empty in the lakes along the southern shore, the principal one being the Clearwater, which rices 40 or 50 miles south of the lake outside the reservation, then turns north and finally northwest, emptying into the lake west of the Indian agency. It has a considerable fall, so that it can easily be dammed to furnish additional water for running logs. The extreme southern end of the stream runs within a mile of the White Earth reservation, on which are nearly 100,000 acres of pine land, which will also come on the market at the same time with the Red Lake lands. These lands also are well situated in a compact body, but do not abut on any considerable stream, so that they will depend on future railroad facilities for development. The other streams running into Red lake are the Sandy, Little Rock, Mill creek, Red Lake River, Hay creek and Cormorant, but none of hem are of any considerable size. On the east end is a stream, which feeds a large tract at woodland which is as yet untouched

The white pine lands of the reservation are in three principal bodies, surrounded by tracts of Norway pine. The largest body extends east and west 15 or 20 mieles in a nearly continuous strip varying in width from a half mile to three, and from 20 to 30 miles south of Red Lake. The second tract is west of this and runs nearly north and south. East and southeast of the lake, scattered over a considerable extent of territory is the remaining portion of the pine lands, which runs over the southern and eastern boundaries of the reservation until it meets the lands of the Winnebegoshish, Deer creek and Cass Lake Indian reservations. Besides these large tracts there is much white pine scattered among the hardwoods, the amount of which cannot be easily estimated. Along Rainy river and the shores of lake of the woods, also, there is abundant pine, but it has been cut over in some places by timber thieves.

The numerous stories of pine steals which have been so often told, do not apply to any large extent to the Red lake lands, but to those further south and east on the Winnebegoshish, Cass and Leach lakes. All of these connect directly with the Mississippi river in its devious easterly course after its rise in Lake Itasca, and here, far away from civilization and fear of detection, and in reach of the various tribes of Chippewas who saw in this work a way of making some money easily, millions of feet of the finest pine have been cut, and rafted to St. Cloud or Minneapolis, where any danger of detection was obviated by a speedy reduction of the logs to lumber. Just how much has been stolen can never be known, for what is everyone's business is no one's, and the lumbermen were not interested in telling tales. On the Red Lake reservation, it is said, the law has been much more strictly enforced. The Indians are allowed to fell and sell the dead trees, but if they girdled some live ones up, it was very difficult to detect them, especially after the logs were in the river. On a reservation of over 7,000 squar miles, it is imposible to keep watch everywhere at all times. Still the pine forests of the reservation are practicaly untouched except where they have been run over by the fire. The reservation has, until recently, been too remote and difficult of access to make it easy for lumbermen to get logs out, even after they were cut.

The Chippewas, who are scattered on nearly a dozen reservations in northern Minnesota, are comparatively civilized, though there is still much room for improvement. They make good logers, but have a strong disposition not by any means confined to the red race, of wanting to take an indefinite vacation as soon as they have accumulated a few dollars. They will work well for a time, and are much employed by lumbermen. On the Red Lake reservation, they are chiefly gathered at the agency on the south side of the lake, though there is also a settlement on the peninsula half way up the east shore, and some scattering bands still further north.

The act of congress under which these lands are to be thrown open provides for awarding the Indians a certain amount of land in severalty, where they may choose, and of settling the rest. The undivided land is to be surveyed and divided into two classes, agriculture and pine lands, the former is to be sold like other government lands to settlers, and the rest is to be put up at auction, an upset price of $3 a thousand feet being fixed on the timber. The money derived from the sales is to be kept for 50 years, when it is to be distributed among the Indians, but in the meantime they are to have the interest on it while the government holds it in trust, and to receive advances on the principal if necessary. An appropriation is also pending of $250,000 to pay the expenses of having the lands surveyed, so that opening will not be long delayed.

The Indians have chosen a strip along the southern shore of the lake for their future homes, and not a few of them have prosperous gardens and farms. The whole southwestern part of the reservation, except where it is marshy, is well adapted to agriculture and grazing. It is low and flat, and produces a rank but rich grass. South and west of the reservation the land rises into long sandy ridges, and then declines into the rich and famous valley of the Red River of the North. Here is a rapidly growing population, which will be a large consumer of lumber.

In fact, it is more than probable that all or nearly all the lumber made in the future from the Red Lake reservation will find its market westward. Not only the Red River Valley, but the vast plains of the Dakotas and eastern Montana will be active bidders for it. More than this, the water facilities afforded for logging are in this direction. The outlet of Red lake is Red Lake river, which leaves the lake on its wetern side, meanders for 40 miles through the meadow lands of the reservation then cuts through the hills, crosses the Red River Valley with many little rapids, which will furnish excellent water power, and finally empties into the Red River of the North at Grand Forks. In the last 25 miles of its course the river is quite shallow, so that it cannot carry large logs except in the season of the spring freshets.

In its course the river flows through Crookston, the metropolis of the Red River Valley, and the fortunate town which will naturally reap the chief advantage from an opening of the reservation. The stream, which is 200 feet wide, makes a double loop here, giving a magnificent stretch of water frontage, and unlimited booming facilities, and its fall is enough to furnish a heavy water power. No doubt the founders of the place builded better than they knew when they first laid out the city here, but they will nevertheless reap the solid advantage. The banks of the river are high for the most part, so that the streets are never inundated by the spring freshets, which carry away the melted snows and are such a blessing to lumbermen in their logging operations.

Crookston, a general view of which we give, is an enterprising city of about 6,000 inhabitants, but it cannot boast of being of age yet. The first house was built about 1872, a year before the old St. Paul & Pacific road reached the place. In 1873, the road went into bankruptcy, and Crookston received a black eye. But the road was soon reorganized, and as the St. Paul Minneapolis & Manitoba pushed on with two paralled lines up the valley, Crookston began to prosper. From 1878 to 1883 it enjoyed a time of rapid development, then it took a rest until 1887, when there was another start, and the bustling little place blossomed out with brick stores, electric lights, and water works. By this time it had become quite an important railroad center. The St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba road, or Great Northern, as it is now called, had built a branch from Crookston to Grand Forks, now a part of the main line to Montana, also another to St. Hilaire, 20 miles northeast, called the Red River & Lake of the Woods railway, and a third east to Fosston, 45 miles. The last named will be continued southeasterly through Brainerd to Elk River on the main line. But all these lines belonged to the same system, and Crookston wanted competition. The Northern Pacific had a branch, the Duluth & Manitoba, from Winnepeg Junction on its main line straight north to Red Lake Falls, then at a right angle to Grand Forks, and north to Winnepeg. If a line were built across the right angled triangle it could be made to cut through Crookston, putting the latter in connection with the Northern Pacific system east and west, and also shortening materially the distance from Winnepeg Junction and connecting points to Grand Forks and Winnipeg. The Northern Pacific would not build such a branch, but it was willing to lease and operate one if made. This was enough for Crookstonites, and a local company was formed, called the Duluth, Crookston, & Northern, which built the road after determined opposition on the part of the Great Northern. The city had voted a subsidy of $50,000 in bonds to the new road if it was completed by a certain day, and the latter could have earned the money had it not been obliged to cross the track of the Great Northern. By main force the Great Northern prevented the completion of the crossing until the day set had gone by, so as to compel the forfeiture of the bonds. This little tempest in a teapot between the two roads created considerable excitement at the time, and thousands of people then read in the newspapers for the first time of the enterprising little city of Crookston. The legal question as to the right of the Duluth Crookston & Northern to the bonds is now in the federal courts, and will probably not be decided for several years. The branch of the Northern Pacific will come into the city on the eastern side, and a large, substantial bridge is now built across the river.

The city has several hotels, but only two of any size, the Commercial and St. Louis. The latter, a neat brick building, is situated on the river bank, near the crossing of the Northern Pacific, as if to bid for the latter's trade, while the Commercial, less pretentious, but equally good, is on the hill in the center of the town.

But besides its railroad interests Crookston has a solid standing as a financial metropolis. It is surrounded by a rich and extended agricultural country, and is the recognized mart for exchange. There are three banks, the First National with a capital of $100,000 the Merchants National, capital $75,000 and the Scandia American with a capital of $50,000, all doing remarkable well. There is a large demand for money and high rates of interest are obtained, as the country is new and prices of land are advancing. The different lines of industry are numerous but need development. There is a four story flouring mill called the Valley Roller Milsl, run by water power, with a capacity of 200 barrels a day which was started in 1883, and is one of the best mills in the state outside Minneapolis. A fine large oat mill, said to be the only one in the state, is in successful operation, and making money. A brewery with a capacity of 25,000 barrels a year, a foundry, a creamery, packing house, brick yard, and seven elevators comprise the remaining principal branches of industry. There is one saw and planing mill owned by T. B. Walker, situated across the river from the town, and doing a large business. There is room and demand for many more enterprises. There should be half a dozen flouring mills instead of one successfully established, and as many more saw mills with lath and shingle machines. A furniture factory is wanted, a barrel factory, cheese factory, wagon and plow repair shops, and other wood-working manufactures. The retail tradesmen are too narrow minded, and new merchants with capital to carry on a general merchandise business would do well. The present tradesmen are all doing well, getting wealthy in fact, simply from the city trade, but they lack the breadth necessary to cater to the farmers so that many of the latter go to other places, where more attention is paid to their wishes.

In point of nationality the Norwegians predominate in and around Crookston, with Americans second and French Canadians next. They are a thrifty, saving, enterprising people, ready to assist with money or land any new enterprise which needs it, or which promises to be of benefit to the place. There is much less of the boom element in Crookston than is usual in such new centers of trade, and this is its strength. Real estate is very reasonable, showing only the steady appreciation from year to year, which indicates a solid advance in values. The construction of the stores and public buildings of brick gives an air of substantiality to the place, and is advantagecus as lessening the danger from fire. The clay to be found in the vicinity is of a very superior quality, and and the brickyard does a prosperous business which is by no means confined to Crookston.

Another use made of the water power is to run the electric light system, and a company called the Crookston Water Power Supply & Electric Light Company is in successful operation supplying the city water and electric lighting. A complete sewerage system will be next and the municipal authorities are now considering how it can best be accomplished.

Nor does the busy little metropolis neglect its moral and educational duties. Eleven churches, two baptist two methodist two presyterian, two catholic, one congregational, one episcopal and one lutheran furnish abundant facilities for religious instruction and an excellent public school and free public library, show no less attention to educational advantage. The public library certainly shows a refinement of ambition, Perhaps the way it came to be started may explain its existence, but it will prove a good investment. It is said that a Yale college man drifted out to Minnesota and started scientific farming on a large scale. Unfortunately his combination of science and practice was not a pecuniary success, and his handsome library along with his other property fell into the sheriff's hand. Here was an opportunity to get a collection of books with a minimum of trouble, and the ambitious Crookstonites did not fail to take advantage of it. True, the Greek and Latin classics, and the ponderous Spanish tomes would have few admirers and fewer readers, but they were all included and the price was low. There are some books the sight of which would warm a connoisseur's heart, and who can tell the stimulus that some of these valuable, even if recondite, works may have on the career of some future scholar or statesman? Knowledge is power even in these money making, money loving times, and Crookston is to be congratulated on its valuable library and its pretty library building. The latest frill it wants is a daily newspaper. At present it rejoices in three weeklies, the Chronicle and THE JOURNAL, both republican, and the Times, a red-hot democratic sheet, which fill the field now, but the daily will come soon. The Great Northern road has promised to locate its car shops at Crookston, and when the opening of the reservation sets the lumbermen traling northward, to buy lands and pick out mill sites, and some of the projected improvements are made, the daily journal must follow, Crookston has a flattering future and it will not be long coming.

Being a railway center, and with its general advantages for lumber manufacture, based on the heavy supply of virgin timber back of it, with a good rafting stream to bring the logs down and its most excellent booming facilities and cheap power, it will be an attractive place for lumbermen. One warning should however, be given and that is those first on the ground will have a decided advantage in respect to desirable locations and consequent convenience and economy of manufacture, Lumbermen who are considering what their future operations may be would do well to investigate the Red Lake reservation timber and Crookston as the point of manufacture.

The people of Crookston are bestirring themselves in the direction of extending the business of the city and have an organization, of which Lewis Ellington, a banker, is secretary, for the express purpose of advancing its interests. In the competition for capital and new manufacturing enterprises Crookston does not propose to be outbid.

Winnipeg Free Press:—President Harrison may be the head of a great nation, but he is little more than a country corners' politician for all that. Much of his message to congress is devoted to a dispute with foreign news papers as to the merits of the McKinley tariff legislation. A person occupying the proud position of the President of the United States, in an official communication to the parliament of his country, should have a too proper sense of the dignity belonging to his office than to engage in a dispute of that kind.

No opportunity was ever before offered whereby a farmer can obtain the experiences of others so cheaply as by a subscription to Farm, Stock and Home.

FONTAINE & ANGLIM.

Minneaoplis Times:—It is a voluminous document, but written in clear and forcible style, and contains much information of value to every citizen. It adheres closely to the policy and measures of the last session of congress, and for that reason is open to severe and just criticism, but it must be conceded that President Harrison has the gift of simplicity and vigor of statement. The features of the message are those that relate to silver coinage, the tariff bill and the Federal elections bill.

Minneapolis Tribune:—As a writer of state papers Mr. Harrison is a model. He does not make Mr. Cleveland's mistake of considering himself the government and beginning every sentence with the pronoun I, nor does he, like Mr. Arthur, trip lightly over matters demanding extended discussion. He goes carefully into detail in reviewing the operations of each department of the government, yet his message does not greatly exceed in length the average of its predecessors in recent times. It has evidently been "edited."

For a plain, practical and instructive paper, made largely by farmers and wholly for farmers, Farm, Stock and Home of Minneapolis, Minn. has no equal among agricultural journals. We can furnish it in connection with the JOURNAL one year for only $1.50.

Sweet potatoes at Sture's.

H. C. Tatro was down from Maple Lake on Tuesday chatting with his many friends in the city.

Ex-president, Geo. W. Sprague, of the Farmers' Alliance, was in the city on Tuesday, looking over the field.

Farmers, go and see Sture when you want bargains in dry goods and groceries. He has them for all the people.

Mrs. E. E. Bangs will not be undersold in millinery goods. Remember that and call at her store on Second street, when you want a bargain in that line.

T. O. Bergland was in the city last week rejoicing in the arrival of a ten pound Alliance boy. All doing well.

Special attractions in jewelry and silverware at C. H. Saake's.

Leave your orders for all kinds o commercial or fancy printing at THE JOURNAL job rooms. Prices and work guaranteed to suit.

Go to Sture's for choice sweet potatoes.

Dr. A. Nelson was up from Fertile last week interviewing his friends in the city. The doctor reports business excellent this winter and collections good.

Farmers, if you want bargains, call and see Sture before you purchase.

H. B. Budd, the Beltrami wheat buyer, was in the city early in the week. They all do say that Budd is giving excellent satisfaction in his dealings with the farmers.

A. Sture will pay the highest price for eggs, oats and potatoes. Call and see him if you have a surplus of these articles.

M. G. Peterson was up from Garden last week. He is preparing for a three months visit below soon. Next summer he says he will build a fine farm house on his plantation.

An endless variety of novelties in jewelry and silverware, suitable for holiday presents at C. H. Saake's jewelry store.

Comrade Knute Steenerson was down from Fosston last week. For some unacountable reason this comrade does not receive the pension for which he applied several years since and to which he seems to be justly entitled. The comrade should try under the new law.

Gold and silver watches, diamond rings, opal, ruby, emerald and friendship rings at bed rock prices, at

C. H. SAAKE' Jewelry Store.

A farmer from the west side informs us that the farmers of Hubbard and Vineland are exceedingly anxious to obtain a railroad through their respective towns and that steps looking to that end will soon be taken. It strikes us that a railroad running southwest from Crookston would be a paying investment, and we confidently expect to see such a road some day in the near future.

Call at Sture's for bargains in dry goods and groceries.

Jens Walbeck was up from Fisher last week. He tells us that he shipped his wheat this fall to the Farmers' Elevator Co., and is immensely pleased with the result. In his home market he was offered No. 2 Northern with four pounds dockage for dirt. By shipping he received No. 1 Hard, with only one pound dockage. His first car netted him 92 cents in Duluth. Says he and his neighbors have shipped 12 or 15 cars this fall.

Sture has a choice lot of fine winter apples for sale cheap. Call before they are all gobbled up.

I can and will save my customers quite a nice sum in their purchase of Christmas presents, as I have bought my goods at the very lowest cash terms and have marked them at a very small margin of profit. C. H. SAAKE, Jeweler.

Treasurer elect, John T. Beaudry, was in the city last week arranging to move down. He says some miscreant entered the house he has rented and stole the storm windows therefrom. Lucky they didn't think to steal the house. John T. will be on deck to assume his new duties on Jan. 1st, and his boys will run the farm. Speaking of farming he says that his experience with sheep is a very satisfactory one. They have proven a gold mine to him every year that he has had them, and he is so well pleased that he intends to largely increase his flock. By the way, while we think of it, it seems a little singular that there are not more sheep in the country, as it seems to be the experience of all who raise sheep that they are paying property.

A Fearful Accident.

A sad accident happened at the N. P. crossing in Jerome's Addition, about 6 o'clock on Monday night, by which Sylvester Syavesterson and S. R. McGee lost their lives. They were driving across the track in a lumber wagon drawn by a span of mules when the wagon was struck by the engine on the freight going south. The wagon was smashed to kindling wood, the men both killed, but the mules were uninjured. The bodies were taken to Wyatt's undertaking rooms and the coroner notified. On Tuesday morning the following jury was subpœnaed:

John W. Ford, James Creighton, Maj. H. E. Stanbury, A. M. Hanson, Geo. Cook and John Bowman.

The first witness summoned was Chris. Houston, who testified that as he was coming into the city he met a wagon in which were seated two men whom he recognized as the deceased, near the residence of Mike Leguee, on Jerome's Addition. They appeared to be under the influence of liquor; were hugging each other and commenced to sing soon after I passed them. When I was on the wagon bridge the train was crossing the trestle work. Did not hear the engine bell ring nor the whistle blow.

Harry Falk testified: Met a wagon drawn by a span of mules, on the bridge last night as I was coming from supper. By their actions, thought they were men under the influence of liquor.

Dr. Dampier sworn: Was called last night to examine deceased. Found McGee's neck broken and skull fractured. Sylvesterson had suffered the same injuries, besides compound fracture of left foot and leg. I recognize McGee as a man who recently appeared before the board for examination for increase of pension. He has been drawing a pension of $8 a month.

At this point the inquest was adjourned until 7 o'clock to await the engineer and fireman of the freight train, and up to the time we go to press the inquest is in session.

In the case of the State vs. Howes & Landers the jury found a verdict of not guilty.

LaChapelle & Charron have established a new wood yard and will soon be ready to supply all who want wood.

If you are interested in increasing the profits of the farm, read our clubbing offer with Farm, Stock and Home in this issue.

Andrew J. Finseth was united for life to Miss Emma P. Hurseth, on Tuesday morning, Dec. 9th, Justice Spendley officiating.

Comrade A. P. Rounsvell came over from Larimore on Tuesday evening to look after the remains of comrade S. R. McGee, who was killed in the accident on Monday evening.

Headquarters for farmers at Sture's

We are told that the Western Union telegraph office will be upstairs in the new McKinnon block. A convenience that business men will all be grateful for.

Don't neglect to see Sture if you care for bargains.

For the Winter.

F. T. Haseltine departs for Madison, Wisconsin, this week. He has been as busy as a bee for the past six weeks with his fall settlements. He says he has done a larger business this year than for the three years previous. He will return next spring ready to supply trees enough to set every acre in the Red River Valley, if needed. Frank is a rustler from way back and amply earns success.

Wedding Bells.

Mr. Wm. Himmelsbach was united for life to Miss Carrie L. Menzel, by Rev. Mr. Elmer, on Tuesday at Buffington. The reception was held at the groom's residence in Fairfax and was well attended, many from the city driving out. The presents were many and rich. The groom is one of the leading farmers of the town of Fairfax and highly respected by all who know him. THE JOURNAL extends congratulations with its best wishes.

Consigned to Earth.

The body of Sylvester Sylvesterson was taken by the relatives on Wednesday morning and conveyed to the family residence in Fairfax for burial. Mr. Wyatt had both bodies very neatly arranged, considering their condition when brought in, and both looked very naturally, save that Sylvesterson showed somewhat the crushing blow he had received in the face. Tuesday evening many friends and comrades called to take a last look at McGee, who lay wrapped in his country's flag, and he looked so natural that many remarked; "He cannot be dead!" His face had not the usual ghastly appearance, but more the appearance of a slumber from which he would soon awaken. Unusual care and pains were necessary to prepare the bodies to look so naturally.

His Honor Tied the Knot.

John T. Farden and Anna Bakke, of Tilden, were united for life by Judge Mills in the court room on Tuesday. John is the son of Tollef Farden, the Tilden politician, and, while taking out the license the thought occurred to Tollef to have the business all completed at once, so the party adjourned to the court room where the Judge soon tied the nuptial knot with dignity and grace. Tollef is nothing unless sensational.

Bring It Back!

If the person who took that overcoat from my store a short time since will return it at once, no questions will be asked, if not, I may be obliged to ask some questions in court embarrassing to the taker, as I have positive evidence in the case. I do not care to make trouble if I can avoid it. Yours for the right, A. STURE.

Will Give It Free.

P. J. Lachapelle informs THE JOURNAL that he learns that the dwellers on the street where the wood and hay market is located are kicking already and want it removed. He says that he will give the free use of a whole block for the purpose until April 15th next.

Cheap Lands.

To-day land can be had in Polk County at from $2.50 to $30.00 per acre. Land that will produce from 20 to 30 bushels of wheat per acre if properly cultivated. Such land in the east would be valued at from $75 to $150 per acre. Appearances indicate that the time is now at hand when our lands will bring two or three times as much per acre as now, which shows that now is the best time to invest in Red River Valley lands. Land at present prices is good property to keep.

Want a Railroad.

Levi Myers was up from the west side this week. Says that the farmers in his neighborhood are very anxious for a railroad in that country, and but few would hesitate to give the right of way, at least! "Why," said he, "I would give a right of way and $500 if I could not get a road otherwise. We want a road there and we must have it, and that right soon.

Orange Groves.

Dr. J. H. Thomas talks of starting for the sunny land of Florida to visit his flourishing orange groves, some day in the near future—this week, mebbe, He does not expect to be away longer than from four to six weeks.

Good Crops.

Lyman Clark was down from Rockstad one day this week. Says the crops were very fair up that way and the sample extra. He is confident that the near future has much prosperity in store for the farmers of the Red River Valley.

Crazy Again.

Wheat took another drop this week, reaching 68. We can see no sense in that kind of foolishness.

Will Try City Life.

J. B. Fee has moved in from the farm for the winter to be handy to school for the young folks.

A Mild Winter.

Monday was an exceedingly warm day for winter weather. If it keeps on like this till April 1st, 1891, we do not hesitate to prophesy a mild winter.

Will Abide in Crookston.

Knute Rollag was in the city on Monday looking for a house wherein to reside. He will hold down a chair in the Register of Deeds office for the coming term. He is in every way competent.

Turn Out!

Every alliance man should be on deck promptly at two o'clock next Saturday to take a hand in the election of a delegate and an alternate to the State meeting at St. Paul on Dec. 30th.

Crookston Alliance, No. 648, met at the City Hall on Saturday last, President Sergeant in the chair. Secretary Hixson stated that owing to removing to the city recently he had been unable to have his report for this end of term ready and asked for further time. It was then moved that when we adjourn we adjourn till Saturday, Dec. 13th. The secretary then read a communication from Ignatius Donnelly in which Mr. Donnelly presents his name as a candidate for President of the State Alliance. After the reading, so much time was occupied in discussion that it was thought best to postpone the election of a delegate and alternate to the adjourned meeting next Saturday. The majority of the members present and speaking expressed themselves not in favor of instructing the delegates. This question of the selection of a leader is one of vast importance, upon the solution of which may hang the future welfare of the alliance, and every member of Crookston Alliance should be in attendance at the meeting on Saturday. And not only so, but should be there promptly at 2 o'clock, ready to take part in the proceedings, then there will be time to do business before it is time to go home. Last Saturday the meeting did not begin much before three and in about half an hour many began to get uneasy to go, having their chores to do at home. Next Saturday the president will call the meeting to order promptly at 2 o'clock whether there is a man in the room besides himself or not. Let everybody be on hand ready to vote on the delegate question. There are also three delegates to the County Alliance to be elected.

Let 'Em Roll! Let 'Em Roll!

The week opened out with the receipt of two new subscriptions on the first day, with eight on Monday, and twelve on Tuesday and at this writing (Wednesday noon) it looks like all records would be broken. The generous responses we are receiving to those statements cheers us in our work and convinces us that the people are with us in our efforts to aid in obtaining a free and open wheat market. If the good work goes on at this rate we shall be in shape to put in such improvements as we have long desired and shall be the better prepared for the great work that is before us all. While we are very much gratified at the responses our friends are making, we do not wish you to be satisfied with that, nor have you, but we want every one of our friends to be a missionary in the good work by sending us a new name and a new subscription. The larger family of JOURNAL readers we get the more good we can accomplish. Let 'em roll in; let 'em roll, let em roll!

A Pioneer of King Town.

John S. King came down on Saturday with a crazy man, one Ole T. Stromme, of the town of King, whom he took before Judge Christianson who committed him to await the arrival of witnesses. Mr. King is one of the leading farmers of the town bearing his name, and a pillar in the alliance cause. He dropped in to cheer us on in the work by a renewal and an urgent request for us to keep on in the good cause. John, we are right on deck for a free and open wheat market, and we shall stick right to it as long as we can have such good support—until we get it.

Thanks.

Last week we sent out a number of statements of subscription accounts, the responses to which have been in many cases prompt and exceedingly encouraging. We have neither time nor space to mention each individual name, nor is this necessary, as each individual knows who is entitled to our thanks. One agreeable feature of this case to us is the evidence of appreciation of our efforts that it shows, and we shall ever strive to merit a continuation of the same.

All's Well That Ends Well

A dray horse dropped himself in that hole in front of the opera block on Monday, and for a time business was lively in those parts. A beam was stuck out of one of the upper windows, a block and tackle hastily rigged and the horse soon released uninjured.

They Care For a Comrade.

The Grand Army boys, Col. Cobham Post, took charge of the body of S. R. McGee on Tuesday to fit it for its last resting place. On Wednesday afternoon the Post turned out to pay the last respects to a departed comrade and to deposit his remains in Oakdale cemetery. Comrade McGee was unmarried and, so far as we know, has no relatives. He enlisted in 1861 in Co. D, 28th Ill. Vol. Infantry; re-enlisted Jan. 1st, '64, and was finally mustered out on May 16th, 1866, at Camp Butler in Illinois. He was drawing a pension of $8 a month for a shell wound in the shoulder and had recently applied for an increase. He was a member of Appomattox Post, No. 24, Larimore, N. D.

The current number of Farm, Stock and Home Minneapolis, Minn. should be read by every farmer in the State. In fact, for a farmer to miss reading any number of that excellent journal is a misfortune which he can escape almost without money and without price, by taking it in connection with the JOURNAL.

The Queen's Latest Offer.

A Free Education or One Year's Travel in Europe.

In the Queen's "Word Contest," which the publishers of that magazine anouce as the last one they will ever offer, a free education, consisting of a three years' course in any Canadian or American Seminary of College, including all expenses, tuition and board, to be paid by the publishers of The Queen, or one year abroad, consisting of one entire year's travel in Europe, all expenses to be paid, will be given to the person sending them the largest list of words made from the text which is announced in the last issue of The Queen. A special deposit of $750 has been made in The Dominion Bank of Canada, to carry out this offer. Many other useful and valuable prizes will be awarded in order of merit. The publishers of The Queen have made their popular family magazine famous throughout both Canada and the United States by the liberal prizes given in their previous competitions, and as this will positively be the last one offered, they intend to make it excel all others as regards the value of the prizes. Send six two cent U. S. stamps for copy of The Queen containing the text, complete rules and list of prizes. Address The Canadian Queen, Toronto, Canada. [33-40]

Our combination offer with Farm, Stock and Home elsewhere in this issue should not be overlooked. A year's subscription to this grand agricultural paper means a 384 page volume size 11x15 in that to any farmer is well worth $5.00, yet we give it and this paper one year only $1.50.

Fertile Journal:—Mr. Vebra Godfrey and Miss Lydia Droppo, of the town of Godfrey, were united in matrimony at the residence of the bride's parents Wednesday, Nov. 26th; Rev. A. G. Washington officiating. A large circle of friends wishes them happiness and prosperity.

East Grand Forks Courier:—On Tuesday morning Dennis J. Enright and his brother James leftfor California, where the young men will embark in the fruit culture. John Enright, and older brother, preceded them some months ago. When the father and mother of the Enright boys came to Polk county, some sixteen years ago, from Canada, they brought with them $5,000. That amount represented their entire worldly possession. The young men acquire land under the homestead law, and and have since been engaged in farming. Their combined possessions today would reach up into the thousands. It is safe to say that the family represents at least $75,000, all made, with the exception of 5,000, right here in Polk county, and that too by farming. The day before Dennis left for the golden state he disposed of one farm to George Coulter for $6,500. The young men have not left here to better their condition financially, but rather to seek a milder climate, as seveal members of the family have occasional touches of rheumatism. In the departure of these young men Polk county loses some of her most stalwart sons.

Fisher Bulletin:—On Sunday morning last Mr. and Mrs. Herrick, Miss Edith, their daughter and Fred, their son, were about as near the shores of eternity as persons can go without actually passing into the unknown. Several days prior to Saturday, the presence of coal gas was destected in the house and on Saturday a complete overhauling of the stoves and pipe was had. On Saturday night the usual precaution required of a coal stove was observed and the family retired to rest as usual. About seven o'clock Sunday morning Mr. H. awoke with a peculiar sensation in his head, and a strange idea as to his habitancy of this world. He soon convinced himself however that the house was filled with gas and his first move was to open a window. This accomplished he turned his attention to Mrs. H. and was horrified to find her unsconcious. Asphyxiation was complete, and but for the prompt arrival of Dr. Leslie, Mrs. Herrick would now be numbered among the dead. Miss Edith and Fred were also in a very critical condition, but by noon well restored by the remedies of the doctor, Since Sunday, Mr. Herrick has banished the coal stove.

Immigration Movement.

What are the Prospects for an Influx of People?

East Grand Forks Courier.

Judging from the large number of letters that have been written and which were reported by Postmaster McLaurin to have been mailed on the 27th and 58th of November from the Grand Forks postoffice, we think it could not be brighter. When the human heart is moved by gratitude, as was no doubt the case in many a family in this city on Thanksgiviam day, and the harmony that filled the souls of so many because the bountiful hand of a wise providence had again rewarded the farmers and the business man in this, the land of the "Yellow Golden Grain," and when the bins of many a farmer of the Red River Valley were overflowing with the beautiful golden wheat and the cellars full of vegetables.

The fair fame and the goodly report of the Red River Valley's plenty has most assuredly gone abroad to the world and must turn the eyes of many a wandering one towards his father's house, when there is continued prosperity and a steady advancement, even under the somewhat unfavorable conditions of the past two years.

There are those who perhaps may have spent a part of their substance in the vain attempt to find and establish homes in Kansas, Nebraska, and while the whilom Oklahoma has proven a fool's paradise, and in other places where their fancy led them to believe were fairer climes, but experince has taught them valuable lessons. The breadth of the Red River Valley's prosperity has gone out far and wide beyond her own borders, and the people will be coming to be partakers of the bounties. In the Red River Valley have been established large numbers of pleasant and happy homes, and these people blessed with the richest of this world's offerings stand ready to do their part, and will give a hearty welcome to all such as may wish to come within her borders.

We need to send forth to the world solid statement of facts and not glittering generalities. The people of the Red River Valley have displayed energy and perseverence in utilizing the resources which have been given them. Now is the time to take prompt and proper action so that the surplus capital and population now gathering at the east, shall break forth in the direction of the Red River Valley. C. M. H.

Kittson County Enterprise:—Chas. Hallock arrived on Monday. He says the whole east is talking of the Red River Valley and that she is bound to boom. That's what we have always maintained.

Daily Plaindealer:—There is danger that Congressman-Elect Kittel Halvorson, of Minnesota, will be spoiled. He has already been tendered a banquet and presented with a gold watch, and Mrs. Halvorson was the recipient of a handsome present. Now it was because Mr. Halvorson did not indulge in such luxuries as gold watches that he was elected. The people of his district should have a care or they may spoil an excellent man and prevent his re-election.

Minneapolis Journal:—A very commendable movement is that of the citizens of Polk, Marshall and Kittson counties, to devise a method of promoting immigration to the Red River Valley of this state. The Journal has steadfastly advised such movements to promote immigration. Over in North Dakota an immigration movement is in progress to bring immigration to that portion of the Red River Valley. It is a magnificent farming region, untouched by drouth and comparatively free from early frosts. The people in the Minnesota counties can do nothing more effective to advance its own interests than to promote immigration to the farming lands.

FRANK DeMERS.

Reported to be in a Fair Way to Recovery.

Fargo Republican.

The numerous friends of Capt. DeMers will be gratified to learn that he is gradually recovering—having improved to such an extent that he has recently been permitted to visit friends in St. Paul. When he was taken to the asylum at Jamestown his case was pronounced incurable, and some months later he was reported to be gradually dying; but about three months ago, he conceived the idea that he would fly, and leaped out of a window for that purpose. He fell a distance of thirty feet and came near breaking his spine. From that hour, however, he has been gradually improving, both mentally and physically. He is often perfectly rational, and it is now though not improbable that he may entirely recover.

The Columbia Cycle Calendar.

By far the most valuable business calender for 1891, and entirely unique in design, is the Columbia Cycle Calendar and Stand, issued by the Pope Mfg. Co., of Boston, Mass. The Calendar is in the form of a pad containing 366 leaves, each 5¼ x 4¾ inches, each leaf containing blank for memoranda, and as the leaves are only fastened at at the upper end any leaf can be exposed, no stub being left when the leaves are torn off. The pad rests upon a stand containing pen rack and pencil holder, and made of stained wood, mounted with raised letters, in brass, thus forming an ornamental paper weight. The day of the week and the day of the year, together with the number of days to come, are given, and each slip bears a paragraph pertaining to cycling and kindred subject. These paragraphs have been carefully collated from leading publications and prominent writers, the larger number having been specially written for this purpose. Although this is the sixth issue of the Calendar, all the matter is fresh and new, comprising notable events in cycling, opinions of physician and clergymen, hints about road making, and numerous other topics.

When Stanley was a Reporter.

Special to The Minneapolis Journal.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Explorer Stanley was surprised and considerably pleased to meet an old acquaintance during his call at the press gallery of the house of representatives. This acquaintance was Congressman Comstock, of Minnesota. When Stanley was a reporter at Omaha many years ago Comstock resided there and knew Stanley very well. The now famous explorer frequently called at Comstock's law office. The Minnesotan said today that Stanley was a thorough Bohemian in those days.

Sleepy Eye Herald:—One of our Republican brethren up in the northern part of the state recently said in the paper that the Republican party "got a pretty good hint in the late election." Individuals and parties are alike in some respects. There are a few cranks not more than a thousand miles from Sleepy Eye who are still mad clear down to their boots because the recent election did not go their way. They are mad because we do not advocate their peculiar idiotic whims. To show how foolish some people are, we will just cite a case. A short time ago a citizen of this county went into business here. As he was a Herald subscriber we published a complimentary notice of him and his business. This week the paper came back "refused.". Now, we don't want it understood that we care a cent for the loss of one subscriber, for we have received two in return for every one we have lost, but only mention this case to show how narrow-minded this individual is. The whole sum and substance of the matter is this. He is a bitter partisan, depends entirely on the farmers of Brown County for his support, is down on the paper for being friendly to the agriculturist. But never mind, the farmer is more important than he. He will like some others "get a pretty good hint" one of these days.

100 PAGES WIDE AWAKE. 1891

BEGINNING WITH THE HOLIDAY NUMBER

Is permanently enlarged to one hundred pages, radiant with new and larger type, a new style of page, and fresh, strong literary and pictorial attractions.

Mrs. Burton Harrison, whose story of "The Anglomaniacs" has been the sensation of the season in The Century, has written for Wide Awake a story called "Diamonds and Toads."

Hon. John D. Long (ex-Governor of Massachusetts) furnishes six articles, under the general title of "Our Government," for the enlightenment of coming citizens—the boys and girls of to-day.

Margaret Sidney's new serial, "Five Little Peppers Grown Up," will tell more about Polly and Jasper and David and Joel and Phronsie, and others, as it runs through the year. Fifty charming illustrations by Chas. Mente.

Marietta's Good Times will chronicle in her own words, from her own manuscript, the childhood adventures of Marietta Ambrosi.

Miss Matilda Archambeau Van Dorn, a little girl who had a great many ancestors, is an irresistible little folks' serial, by Elizabeth Cumings.

Unusually Interesting Articles, some elaborately pictorial: "Dining with Gladstone," by Mrs. John A. Logan; "Amy Robsart's Embroidery," by Frances A. Humphrey? "Mother Goose's Pets," by Agnes Peppiier; "Gypsies and Gypsying," by Elizabeth Robbins Pennell; "Some Horses that I have known," by Maud Howe; "Seinte Marie College of Wynchestre," by Oscar Fay Adams; "Boston's Girl Sculptor," by Mrs. Newberry; "The Sugar Crank," by Theodora R. Jenness.

Some Problems in Horology, by E. H. Hawley, of the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, will interest High School students. Three sets of cash prizes.

The Best of Short Stories from thousands offered and solicited the past year—some by new authors.

Fargo, Weekly Argus:—Although improved land in the Red River Valley is generally held at from $25 to $30 per acre, there are many farms in this favored belt which have returned the past year 10 per cent interest upon a valuation of $200 per acre. There are also farms which have done this for a series of years. This being the case can anyone doubt that improved farm lands in the Red River Valley must be worth at least from $60 to $100 per acre inside of three years' time? This being the case what better investment can be made than the purchase of such property in the Valley?

St. Paul News:—Senator Sawyer has come to the aid of the proposed Gould railroad combine by the introduction of a bill in the United States Senate, to annul section 5 of the Inter-State Commerce law, so as to provide that agreements for the apportionment of traffic may be entered into by common carriers. With the proposed amendment to the law, the system of pooling, the abrogation of which was one of the best features of the interstate law, would be revived, and Jay Gould and his millionatre associates in the recent stock manipulations to gain control of several Western lines, could snap their fingers at any attempted State control in the matter of rates, and the slavery of the Western producer would be complete.

St. Paul News:—The Republic members of the census committee are understood to have reached an agreement upon a re-apportionment bill. The ratio of representation is to be one member to each 173,801 of population, which will give a House of 356 members, against 362 as now. Under this representation no State loses any of it present membership, while the States of Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Georgia, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, New Jersey Oregon, Washington and Wisconsin, each gain one, Illnois, Minnesota, Pennsylvania and Texas two, and Nebraska three.

Marshall County Leader:—Whether the Alliance as a political organization is a fleeting passion or a power come to stay is a question raging in the minds of the good old style politicians. There was no uncertain sound in the voice of the farmers on November 4th, and the old party manipulators see clearly that the farmers at length realize their power and are dismayed by the first exercise of it. As a rule the men who have always done most to encourage a strong partizanship, which shall override reason and obliterate contemplation of economic questions by the individual voter, have done so "for revenue only." They did it for personal profit and advantage in the way of offices and political prestige, and it was "Vaulting ambition o'erleaping itself" which found its legitimate end in the political independence of which the late Alliance success furnishes the clearest possible proof. To stand by their old party from principle, sink with it if it sinks and swim with it if it triumphs is not the view or purpose at all of the typical professor of politics. In completing the equation of the problem the only quantity he cares to discover is the future destiny of each party, and this quantity he may assure himself can only be known henceforth by a consideration of issues and principles. The Leader has no cause to rejoice in or lament the simple fact of an Alliance victory or Republican defeat, but in the tremendous growth of an independent political spirit which is destined to handle matters of government in the future without partizan gloves we do recognize a grand victory for the cause we have ever advocated through these columns.

Moorhead News:—F. J. Burnham; Your hopeful view of the future of the Red River Valley coincides with my own. I have taken considerable pains to collect information in regard to the relative advantages of the different portions of the country to which those seeking new locations are being attracted, and am fully convinced that Minnesota, and especially the Red River Valley, offers homeseekers inducement superior to those of any other part of the United States. My correspondence and business indicate that this fact is begining to be appreciated. If this winter should turn out mild as is now probable, it will help materially. I have sold more land and at better prices the past season than in any since 1882.

A SHORT PRISON EXPERIENOE

Mr. King in Jail For Conscience Sake.

The following letter recently received by Mr. Jones, vice-president of the National Religious Liberty Association, was written by Mr. King, a man who has been having a notable court experience for worshiping on Saturday and working on Sun'ay, while lying in jail at Troy, Tennessee:

TROY, Tenn., Nov. 12, 1890.

D. T. Jones, Battle Creek, Mich:

DEAR BROTHER: I received your good letter day before yesterday, and was very glad indeed to hear from you, as it was the first letter that I have received from any of our people since I have been here in jail. You cannot imagine how glad I am to hear from any one. There are none of our people nearer than eighteen miles of me.

I have got along splendidly so far. The jailer and his wife have been as kind to me as they could be, and seem to place a great deal of confidence in me, as they let me have the keys to go in and out of jail when I please, and give me a nice room to sleep in all to myself.

I do not know how long I shall have to stay here. I am looking all the time for Col. Richardson to come after me. I guess I will get out before long. It seems strange to me that I have to lie in jail for working on Sunday, when I can look out from here on Sunday and see people at work close enough by to halloo at, and nothing said about it. Last Sunday they hauled wood here to a brick kiln, four or five men working all day. But, of course, they were not Adventists.

The editor of the "News Banner," a paper published here in Troy, has been down to see me, and I had quite a talk with him. He wanted to know if I would go home and quit working on Sunday if the judge would let me go. I told him the judge could not let me go home if he wanted to. Said he: "Would you not go home and quit working on Sunday, or leave the state, if the governor would 'pardon you?" I told him I could not say that I would quit working on Sunday, for I thought that I had a God-given right to work six days days if I chose to do so, and that I did not propose to leave the state, either.

The people are very friendly to me, and I have some good visits with them. There are nine prisoners here in all. One black man has been down sick for three months, and will soon die here in jail. They are a rough set of prisoners: are just about half fed, and have a horrible place in which to stay. We have some good talks, however, about the goodness of God, though they know but little about the enjoyment there is in the religion of Jesus Christ. Your sinbrother in faith and hope,

R. M. KING.

If any of our readers have failed to get satisfactory profits from horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, bees, fruits, grain or vegetables, they should commence at once and read every number of Farm, Stock and Home during the coming year. If ordered in connection with this paper its cost will not be felt.

An Excellent Appointment.

St. Paul Daily News: Judge Oliver has made a very wise selection in the appointment of Frank Robert as Chief Clerk in the Probate Judge's office. Mr. Robert has been occupying that position for several years, and was for many years connected with the Probate Judges office prior to that promotion. It is safe to say there is no man in the county his equal in familiarity with the probate records and business. Faithful, courteous, attentive and competent, it is always a pleasure for those having business with the Probate Court to find Mr. Robert on duty. Both Judge Oliver and the public are to be congratulated upon the selection.

Mr. Robert is a son of Frank Robert, Sr., whose fine farm lies near this city. He takes a just pride in the success of his talented son.

$850,000,000.00.

Such is the Mortgage Indebtedness in the United States.

Results of the Census Inquiry.

WASHINGTON Special to Minneapolis Journal, Dec. 4.—The inquiry of the census office into mortgage indebtedness is nearly completed. The report will be very interesting and valuable. Out of nearly 2,000 counties, only ten remain at the present time unfinished, the mortgages for 10 years having been abstracted from the records. A total of something over $850,000,000 in mortgages has been found, the largest number in the Western states. Relatively speaking, the Southern states were found to be much freer from these incumbrances than the Northern. An exception to this, however, is noted in the newly developed manufacturing districts of Alabama, Tennessee and Georgia. In districts like that of Birmingham, the mortgage indebtedness is large, but 90 per cent of it has been contracted for purchase money, plants, lands, etc. In other districts of the South, mortgages are given as security for "farm supplies." This is an unimportant object of indebtedness in the north.

QUAY'S PENSION BILL.

The Disabled to Get from $50 to $100 a Month Under It.

WASHINGTON telegram to Minneapolis Journal, Dec. 4.—Senator Quay yesterday introduced a bill granting to all persons whose names are now on the pension list, or may be hereafter placed thereon, who have lost both eyes or both feet, or who are otherwise totally disabled, a pension of $100 a month. Also to all persons who have lost an arm at the shoulder joint or a leg at the hip joint, a pension of $60 a month, and to those who have lost an arm below the elbow or a leg below the knee, $55 a month. Those who have lost a hand or foot or have been totally disabled in the same, are to be entitled to $50 a month. The bill provides further that persons who have contracted two or more disabilities shall receive a sum per month equal to the total of rates for all of the disabilities mentioned.

Scientific Miscellany.

ARTIFICAL SKULL-SHAPING.

Astonishing success has attended the efforts of Dr. Lannelongue, an eminent specialist of Paris, to give intelligence to a little idiot girl. Though four years old, the child could neither walk nor stand, and never smiled nor took notice of anything. The doctor concluded that the abnormal narrowness of the head obstructed the growth of the brain, and in May last he made an incision in the center of the skull and cut a piece of bone from the left side. The result was marvelous. Within less than a month the child could walk, and she has become quite bright, playing, smiling and taking notice of everything around her.

PAIN-JOY.

A German anatomist has called the attention of his class to certain hysterical women who are affected with a kind of "pain-joy"—not only experiencing no pain from surgical mutilation, but having a morbid desire to bear without anaesthetics, operations which should prove very painful. A young woman was introduced who had seriously injured her lower jaw during a paroxysm of hysteria, but who had insisted upon having the necessary removal of part of the jaw and ligature of two arteries performed without an anaesthetic, and subsequently declared that the operation had given her great pleasure.

THE MOON-WEATHER PROBLEM.

From tables made by the use of synoptic charts, eliminating local disturbances, Dr. G. Meyer, believes he has accomplished what other investigators have sought to do without success—shown an influence of the moon on the weather. The height of the barometer in months of September to January, is lowered at the time of full moon and raised during the first quarter. No effect can be traced for other months.

ELECTRICALLY-AIMED GUNS.

In a new invention, a small dry battery, an electro-magnet and a circuit-closer of mercury are so arranged in the stock of a gun that the weapon can be discharged only when elevated to a predetermined angle. At other positions the trigger is locked and cannot be pulled. The device is claimed to ensure precision in range and accuracy of firing at night when the range has been previously obtained.

ANOTHER SILK.

A substance having all the essential qualities of silk has been made from wild hemp by Nayemura Sakussaburo, of Hikone, Japan. The plant grows on moors and hillsides, and could be cultivated. The fibre is strong and glossy, and several silk factories are said to have found it to be in no way inferior to silk.

THE POTATO DISEASE.

In Denmark, some interesting, and perhaps very valuable researches into the potato disease have been made by Prof. J. L. Jenson. The disease is found to consist of a fungus, whose spores are carried by the wind, and which first attacks the foliage of the plants. It spreads to the tubers in about seven days by spores washed down from the stem and foliage. Considering these facts, it was thought that the tubers might be protected by moulding the soil into a broad ridge, three or four inches high and ten or twelve inches wide, after the first weeding, and a further earthing up on one side only—causing the plants to bend so that the spores would fall away from the ridges—within seven days after the appearance of the disease on the foliage. Some 150 farmers are said to have experimented in this way, with these astonishing results: Where no moulding or earthing up was done, the percentage of diseased potatoes was 34; where the moulding was imperfect, 12; and where the moulding was perfect, only 1. Infection during harvest was prevented by allowing the tubers to remain in the ground for a month after the withering of the tops.

COLD WAVES.

A cold wave is defined by Prof. T. Russell as a fall of temperature in twenty-four hours of 20 degrees over an area of 50,000 square miles, the temperature in some part of this area descending to 35 degrees. Between 1880 and 1890 no less than 691 cold waves were recorded in the United States. In the great cold wave of Jan. 17th, 1882, the fall of 20 degrees extended over an area of 1,101,000 square miles, and the fall of 10 degrees included 2,929,000 square miles. In six cold waves of the ten years the area of the fall of 20 degrees was more than a million square miles. Cold waves follow a day after an area of low pressure, or occur to the southeast of an area of high pressure, reaching their greatest extent when both conditions are present.

NESTS FOR GERMS.

The impurities that collect under finger nails have been investigated in the bacteriological laboratories of Vienna. The matter obtained in 78 examinations was placed in culture solutions, and gave 36 kinds of micrococci, 18 of bacilli, and 3 of sarcinae. Cleanliness of the nails is especially necessary for all who come near a wound, and for those who live in a neighborhood where an epidemic prevails.

A REMARKABLE PRESERVATIVE.

A Belgian chemist has found that the green tar left after extracting the oil from the white bark of the birch will effectually preserve even the most delicate textures from decay. It yields neither acid nor alkaloid, is remarkably fluid in alcoholic solution, and when once dried resists even the action of alcohol.

A NEW IDEA.

A recent contract provides for street lighting in Paris on a novel plan. Power is distributed by the compressed air system to a great number of small motors, each of which supplies electricity for a small number of lamps

WHO IS IT?

BREEDER'S GAZETTE

A "SOLID" man of course—one who farms with his brains as well as his hands, and who knows that to make the farm pay in these times requires good live-stock. No man who keeps good stock can afford to be without The Breeder's Gazette. It is the acknowledged head of the American live-stock press, and we should like to see it in the hands of all our intelligent stock owners. It is a large, handsomely illustrated weekly, furnished at $2 per year, or in clubs of five or more at $1.50 each. "Changing Diseases."

In that delightful book, "Rudder Grange," the husband of Pomona gives as his reason for not removing from a malarial neighborhood, that it don't do for a man at this time of life to go about changing his disease, and adding, that there are diseases incident to almost every locality, and he likes a disease that he is used to.

Now, in case of malarial diseases, aside from the unwillingness of patients to "change diseases," it is generally not convenient to change their residences. If this were done in every case, some of our most thriving cities would be depopulated.

So nothing is left but to fortify oneself against malarial influences, and anathemize the prevailing ignorance as to proper sanitation.

Compound Oxygen Treatment has proved very successful in malarial disorders. We have numerous testimonials from patients who have been cured of diseases of this class. These testimonials are at your disposal. You have but to write for our brochure giving a full history of Compound Oxygen, its nature, discovery and results. You will find a vast collection of letters from patients, as well as much interesting reading. Sent free. No other genuine than the Compound Oxygen manufactured by DRS. NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post office, whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the payment.
2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made and then collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.
3. In suits for subscriptions, the suit may be instituted where the paper is published.
4. The Courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, while unpaid for, is prima facie evidence of intention to defraud.

Entered at the Post Office in Crookston as Second Class matter.

A large and brilliant company were assembled at the Himmelsback brothers residence in the town of Fairfax, on the evening of Tuesday, December 9th, the occasion being the wedding reception of Mr. William Himmelsback and his bride. The tables, set in the large and spacious dining room, fairly groaned under the load of good things provided for the inner man. After partaking of the elegant repast the room was cleared and all so inclined "tripped the light, fantastic toe" to the music of the violin and piano. In the parlor, a large and elegant collection of presents was displayed, comprising both the useful and ornamental.

The following is the list of presents as taken by your reporter:

Silver cake basket—Mr. and Mrs. S L. Collins.

Set of silver knives and forks—Mr. J. F. Cramer and Nellie Muller.

Silver fruit knives—Louisa Rauenbuehler.

MENTOR, Dec. 8th, 1890.

As President of the Polk County Alliance, I earnestly request that each and every alliance throughout the county be represented by three delegates at the county meeting, to be held at the Court House, in the city of Crookston, on Friday, December 26th, 1890, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, and I desire very much that each and every alliance be represented by one delegate to the State Farmers' Alliance, to be held in St. Paul, for the purpose of electing officers of said alliance, on December 30th, 1890. It is very essential that we elect well qualified men, who are worthy and deserving of the respect of all loyal citizens, and those who will prove themselves loyal to the best interests of the welfare of all mankind, especially the producers. I feel proud of the alliance of Polk County; they did their full duty at the polls at the last election and helped to lay the corner stone for the erection of the building of a political revolution that I believe, when fully completed, will have that purifying and cleansing power in it that will wipe out all corruption and bind in fetters that cannot be broken all the powers of oppression that are brought to bear upon the producers of the wealth of the nation. Until that is done, there is but little to hope for and but little to live for, as the present state of things is sapping the very life blood from the veins of every honest toiler.

Brother farmers, remember that what we have already done will avail us nothing unless we place our urgent necessities before the legislative bodies in such a manner that they will be compelled to hear our cries for justice at their hands, and it is our duty to assist that portion of the representatives elected by the farmers, in every way possible, for they will have a hard fight to make, as all manner of evil devices will be concocted to lure them from the path of duty which they owe to themselves, to their constituents, and to their country.

The Farmers' Alliance, or independent political movement, means more, perhaps, than some of you are aware of. Carried on to full success, it means peace, prosperity and happiness to all honest and respectable citizens of America, but if we falter and pale and wind up in disgrace by reason of not doing our full duty, or not proving true and loyal to every duty entrusted to our order, then it means everlasting bondage to the money power and monopolies of all kinds, and in such case it would be better for the rising generation if a mill stone had been tied about their necks and were cast into the bottom of the sea. It seems that the defeat of our worthy candidate for governor was largely due to the lack of campaign funds to carry on the campaign, and the state central committee, it seems, in their eagerness for success, did all in their power with what means they had, and more too, for they now find themselves in debt one thousand dollars, and as Polk County farmers proved themselves loyal at the polls, I hope they will distinguish themselves by helping to make up this amount. Please take up a collection at your next meeting and send it in by your delegates to the county meeting and we will see that it is forwarded to apply upon their indebtedness.

GEO. W. SWIFT,
President Polk County Alliance.

Warren Register: Harry L. Wood and Miss Laura Flanders were married at Crookston last Saturday evening. Harry is known to everybody in Warren, and is a son of Hon. L. G. Wood of our town, state senator elect from this district. Mrs. Wood is a sister of the genial Fred Flanders, who assists in handling the shekels at the Warren Bank. Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Wood, father and mother of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Flanders and others from Warren were present and saw the happy young couple launch forth upon the matrimonial sea. Rev. Mr. Whitney, pastor of the Baptist church at Crookstoon, tied the nuptial knot.

Southron of Sabine (Many, La):

Farmers who have lost their homes through usury and mortgage foreclosure, a result of the gold basis conspiracy, would now relish an opportunity of a seat in the Wall street stock exchange gallery to look down into the cesspool of iniquity and there behold the serpent writhe with agony of despair, because their stocks will no longer hold water, and because their prospects in the future to skin the farmers have been blighted. The Farmers Alliance should continue to organize and press this victory of currency and transportation reform to a successful conclusion.

MACUNE'S VIEWS.

One of the Farmer Leaders Talks of the Work of the Ocala Convention.

THE SUB-TREASURY PLAN.

It Will Be Adopted, He Believes, by the 52d Congress in a Modified Form.

INDEPENDENCE IN POLITICS.

It is Too Early to Talk of Conventions and Candidates for the Farmers.

LEESBURG special to the Minneapolis Times, Dec. 10.—After the excursion train left this morning a reporter had an extended conversation with Dr. Macune, who is one of the ablest and most powerful leaders of the alliance, of which the following is the substance:

"Your delegates have come together here from all parts of the Union—some of them after traveling hundreds of miles and devoting three weeks of their time. What have they accomplished? The main thing accomplished has been the demonstration that the farmers of the country are practically united in recognizing what the evils are that have been dragging them down, and on the means of relief. They have with practical unanimity endorsed the sub-treasury bill. This is more than had been expected at this convention. As to the third party question the southern people are not in favor of independent action. We shall continue to work as we have been working. I hardly think there will be a third party movement among southern alliance people. The convention called next February is premature. It will not amount to anything. A convention called for February, '92 would be able to act wisely. There is time enough between now and then for the different labor organizations to discuss the subject in all its bearings, and if at that time it should seem advisable to issue a call for a convention to name an independent ticket, the movement would have a good chance of success."

"Do you think that the sub treasury scheme will be passed?"

"Certainly it will."

"When?"

"Not by this congress. It will probably be passed by the 52d congress. By that time men of both parties will be anxious to placate the farmer, and they cannot afford to oppose it. I don't say it will pass in its present shape, only that some measure embodying the principal will go through. You see, we have our own men inside congress now, and we can put men of both parties on record as we go, and keep the constituents informed on the measures for relief of the people."

"Do you think it wise to embody so many fundamental demands in one platform?"

"No: I have always been in favor of a single demand, and progress has been in this direction. The Ocala platform is shorter then the St. Louis platform. A number of demands that might have gone into the platform were made the subject of resolutions and passed in that shape. The more we concentrate our forces the better we will succeed, but we will have to put in our platform more than ought to be there in order to harmonize conflicting views.

"Do you think it was wise to pass the resolution condemning the Lodge bill?"

"No: The resolution was offered and rushed through when many delegates were out of the hall on committee work and when most of the leaders were absent. It was a partisan action, and as such was unwise, but it would have been just as partisan on the other hand, to have rescinded the resolution. Two wrongs cannot make one right, and so it was allowed to stand. After that action of our convention I don't blame the colored convention for passing its resolution favoring the Lodge bill."

INDIAN LAND SURVEYS.

They Are Progressing Satisfactorily in Minnesota—Pensions Allowed.

WASHINGTON special to St. Paul Dispatch, Dec. 11.—Congressman Comstock has secured an allowance of pensions for John McClellan, of Duluth, and John Lowan, of Royalton.

Mr. Comstock called at the Indian office, and was informed that surveys of Indian lands in Minnesota are being continued in a satisfactory manner, and will soon be completed if good weather prevails. As soon as the work is done, the surveys of timber will be commenced.

Northwestern Farmer: The Red River Valley in Minnesota and North Dakota produced its usual good crop of wheat the past season. In fact the Red River Valley, as a whole, never has failed to reward the farmers living in this favored belt. Numbers of instances have occurred during the past year, where the crops have fully paid for the land. Low prices for farm lands all over the Northwest, has resulted in keeping the Red River Valley lands below their actual value. The recent meeting of the representatives of the various Red River Valley counties, to discuss the problem as to how to attract more attention to these fertile lands, has resulted in the forming of a committee at both Fargo and Grand Forks, in North Dakota. It is the intention to establish two Immigration Bureaus, whose business it shall be to direct more attention to the wonderful fertility of these rich bottom lands of the Red River of the North.

FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

Details of the Progress of the Great Convention in the South.

Stand Taken by the Party on the Financial Questions of the Day.

OCALA, Fla., Telegram to Duluth Tribune, Dec. 8.—The National Farmers' Alliance assembled again this morning at 8:30. After routine work, and a few speeches giving news paper correspondents a drubbing because they have secured information of the proceedings beyond that given out by the press committee, the financial policy of the order came up for discussion under a report of the committee on legislation. This report, as to the financial policy, contained the following amended demands:

First—We demand the abolition of national banks; we demand that the government shall establish sub-treasuries or depositaries in several states which shall loan money direct to the people at a low rate of interest, not to exceed 2 per cent per annum, on non-perishable farm products and also upon real estate, with proper limitations upon the quantity of land and amount of money. We demand that the amount of circulating medium be speedily increased to not less then $50 per capita.

Second—We demand that congress shall pass such laws as shall effectually prevent dealing in futures on all agricultural and mechanical productions, preserving stringent system of procedure in trials such as shall secure prompt conviction of offenders and the imposition of such penalties as shall secure the most perfect compliance with the law.

Third—We demand the silver bill recently passed by congress, and demand in lieu thereof a free and unlimited coinage of silver.

Fourth—We demand the passage of laws prohibiting alien ownership of lands, and that congress take prompt action to devise some plan to obtain all lands now owned by aliens and foreign syndicates, and that all lands now owned by railroads and other corporations in excess of such as is actually used and needed by them be reclaimed and held for actual settlers only.

Fifth—Believing in the doctrine of equal rights to all and special to none, we demand that our national legislation shall be so framed in future as to build one industry at the expense of another. We further demand the removal of the existing heavy tariff from the necessaries of life, that the poor of our land must have. We further demand a just and equitable system of graduated tax on incomes. We believe the money of the country should be kept as much as possible in the hands of the people and hence we demand that all national and state revenues shall be limited to the necessary expences of the government, economically and honestly administered.

Sixth—We demand the most rigid, honest and just state and national governmental control and supervision of the means of public communication and transportation, and if this control and supervision does not remove the abuses now existing, we demand government ownership of such means of communication and transportation. A spirited debate followed the introduction of this report.

At the beginning of the debate on demands, Loucks of South Dakota was one of the first speakers at the forenoon meeting. He moved (with reference to loans of money on farm products) to strike out the word "farm," but he was interrupted by Col. Livingstone of Georgia suggesting that this change would make all product come under this demand and would be in the interest of manufacturers who have already had quite enough of class legislation. He therefore would suggest that in place of "farm" the word, "Merchantable" be substituted, wich Loucks agreed to. The amendment in this form provoked a spirited discussion. Davie of Kentucky, offered a long preamble and resolution to take the place of the first demand, and from this point on the speakers addressed themselves to both Loucks' and Davie amendment, indiscriminately. The first speaker, after the introduction of Davie's resolution was President Hall of the Missouri Alliance, who made a long speech in opposition to the sub-treasury plan.

The vote was taken on Loucks' amendment, and it was not agreed to.

Colonel Livingston, of Georgia, offered a resolution amending the first section of the demands so that the volume of currency issued shall not be less then $50 per capita of the entire population, which was agreed to.

50th year is inscribed on the dainty cover of the January Peterson. This periodical has stood the test of half a century and still ranks foremost among the magazines for ladies and the household generally. It has been enlarged, and exhibits many improvements and fresh attractions. Besides the beautiful full-page engravings, there are several illustrated articles, poems and stories. "Oddities In Foot Gear," by Harriet Latham, is exceptionally good, with numerous explanatory designs ranging from Egyptian sandals to Greenland skin shoes. Miss M. G. McClelland and Mrs. Lucy H. Hooper begin serials which promise brilliantly. Minna Irving has a fine lyric. Clarence M. Boutelle, Frank Lee Benedict and other well-known writers contribute some of the best stories to be found in the month's round of magazines. The excellence of the fashion, needle work and household departments has always made Peterson an infallible authority. It is now, in its new dress, a very handsome magazine and will more than ten times save the subscription money to every family that takes it. Price $2.00 a year, with large reductions to clubs, and handsome premiums, to those who get up clubs. Address PETERSON'S MAGAIZNE, Philadelphia.
